Late in the afternoon Conference adjourned sine die.

Committee on Temperance.

REPORT NO. 5.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

Your Committee on Temperance beg leave to submit the following report:

We congratulate the church and country upon the continued progress of this moral reform. From facts stated by delegates representing the different sections of our wide connection, from the ringing reports adopted in the several Annual Conferences, and from the stringent laws enacted, or sought to be secured, in a number of States, we are glad to be assured that there is no abatement of zeal in this great cause, and no intermission of effort to achieve its final triumph. There is, we are constrained to believe, a steady growth of intelligent sentiment throughout the country in favor of teetotalism in the individual and the absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic. Opinion has deepened into conviction that a Christian can not in any way aid or abet the business, now so universally condemned, without being untrue to God and disloyal to the best interests of the State.

We reaffirm the clear, strong deliverances of other General Conferences, and replight the faith and power of the church, within its divinely appointed sphere, to the complete overthrow of this giant iniquity. The church can not weaken her protest against, nor cease her divine antagonism to, the greatest evil of the age. There can be no truce with such an enemy—no agreement with such a death.

It is not the province of the church to enter the domain of party politics. Christ and Cæsar are at peace, but their kingdoms are independent. We must zealously guard against any union of Church and State. Ours is a prohibition church, but not a party church. We seek not to disturb political affiliations, or dictate party policies, or control in affairs of State. Our contention is, that every Christian should discharge the functions and exert the influence of his citizenship in the suppression of this and all other social and political evils.

But it may be well to utter a word of warning: In our laudable efforts to secure repressive legislation, let us not overlook the duty of moral suasion. Our zeal must not expend itself in statutes and constitutions. The young are to be taught, the tempted strengthened, the fallen lifted up, and the perishing rescued. While waging war against a business, we must not slacken effort in behalf of the individual.

Temperance.

The following is a law of the church, adopted May 15, as the report of the Committee on Temperance:

Page 213, Ans. 3.—Let all our preachers and members abstain from the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, from signing petitions for such sale, from becoming bondsmen for any person as a condition of obtaining a license, and from renting property to be used for such sale. If any member shall violate any of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be deemed guilty of immorality. Nevertheless, in the case of a member who shall sign a petition for such sale, or become a bondsman for any person engaged in such traffic, or rent property to be used for such sale, it shall be the duty of the pastor to deal with the offender as provided for in chapter 7, section 5, paragraph 281, page 264.

This paragraph shall not apply in the case of persons who are acting under the instructions or decrees of any court or who are acting as officers of the law.

General Conference Resolutions.

We offer for adoption the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That we urge upon all our members a perpetual memory of the solemn vow that rests upon them to abstain wholly from the use of intoxicating liquors, except in cases of necessity.

2. Resolved, That we lay upon the consciences of our preachers the duty of instructing our people concerning the moral turpitude of the liquor traffic and concerning the evils of even the most moderate use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

3. Resolved, That our Book Editor and Book Agent be requested to provide, and to do what may be in their power, towards circulating among our people tracts, pamphlets and books bearing upon the various phases of the temperance question.

W. C. BLACK,
Chairman.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of August for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2.25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to June, '95.

Advertising Rates.

One insertion, $1 per inch.
Two insertions, $1.50 per inch.
Four insertions, $2.40 per inch.
Twelve insertions, $6.60 per inch.
Twenty-six insertions, $13 per inch.

On less space than a half-inch twenty per cent. additional will be charged.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

Worthy of Imitation.

Judge Young L. G. Harris, a prominent Methodist layman, who died recently at his home in Athens, Ga., made, among other bequests, the following:

A plantation in Clarke county, Ga., containing about 400 acres, is to be sold and the proceeds are to be divided equally between the Foreign Mission Society and the Church Extension Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

To Emory College he leaves fifty shares of capital stock in the Augusta and Savannah railroad and twenty-five shares of capital stock of the Georgia Railroad and Banking Company. Young L. G. Harris Institute, a Methodist school founded by himself, in Towns county, Ga., gets fifty shares of capital stock of the Atlanta and West Point railroad and twenty five shares of capital stock of the Georgia Railroad and Banking Company. American Bible Society, of New York, $2,000; American Sunday-school Union, of Philadelphia, $2,000; American Tract Society, of New York, $1,000; Foreign Mission Society, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $3,000; Church Extension Society, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $3,000; Sunday-school Society of North Georgia Conference, $2,000; Church Extension Society of North Georgia Conference, $3,000; Widows' and Orphans' Society of the North Georgia Conference, M. E. Church, South, $3,000; Preachers' Society of the North Georgia Conference, $2,000; fund for special relief North Georgia Conference, $2,000; Emory College, $5,000; Young Harris Institute, $5,000.

Judge Harris was for years a liberal contributor to various benevolent institutions. He built Trinity Chapel (M. E. Church, South) in Shanghai, China, besides making large contributions to foreign missions through the Church Boards. The Young L. G. Harris Institute is a co-educational school of high grade in the mountainous section of Georgia, and has been an inestimable blessing to hundreds of boys and girls who would otherwise have grown up in ignorance. As an evangelizing agency the school has been second only to the pulpit.

It is to be hoped that Judge Harris will have many followers. The laws of Mississippi prohibit the payment of legacies to churches or church institutions; but there is no law to prevent donations during life. Louisiana laws recognize the right to bequeath to all organizations. Methodist laymen, while not enormously wealthy in either State, and while measurably liberal, have never fully appreciated the providential calls made by our church institutions upon their means; and the needs of an ever-growing and aggressive church furnish ample, and what ought to be much-coveted, opportunities for wise use of money.

Tried and True is the verdict of people who take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the good effects of this medicine are felt in nerve strength restored, appetite created and health given.

Hood's Pills do not weaken, but aid digestion and tone the stomach. Try them.

Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

Jackson, Miss. I. W. COOPER.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

Bright's Disease

HAS BEEN PROVEN TO BE CATARRH OF THE KIDNEYS.

A letter from Mrs. Mary A. Shear, of Jennings, La., states: "I am recommending your Pe-ru-na to everyone I hear complain. Several people have already commenced taking it. My disease was Bright's disease of the kidneys and catarrh of the bladder. I am quite well now."

The symptoms of Bright's Disease are: Dull pain in the back; scanty, high-colored urine, containing albumen and various sediments; nausea, and sometimes vomiting; puffiness of the face and feet; dropsy of the legs; shortness of breath and general weakness; pallor and dryness of the skin; chilly feelings, alternating with fever and sleeplessness. The treatment is: A tablespoonful of Pe-ru-na before each meal, between meals, and at bed-time, and enough Man-a-lin at night to produce one natural action of the bowels each day.

Send to The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, for a free copy of the Family Physician No. 2, devoted to catarrh in all forms and stages.

Woman's Work.

The Woman's Missionary Society, New Orleans district, Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South, held a district meeting in Felicity Church, Friday, May 11, 1894.

At 11 A. M. the meeting was called to order by the district secretary, Mrs. Linus Parker. Mrs Fullilove, president of the Conference society, conducted the devotional exercises, after which reports from auxiliaries were called for. Mrs. E. B. Barr, of Felicity Church, gave a full report of the work of that society since its organization. Mrs. L. Parker reported from Rayne Memorial Church, giving its history from its organization to its union with the Woman's Board. Mrs. Carter, of Louisiana Avenue, only reported the work of that society for the present year.

All the reports gave evidence of good work done. Rev. L. F. Jackson, of Algiers, and Rev. T. K. Faunt Le-Roy gave hearty indorsement to the work.

At 7:30 P. M. a fair audience was in attendance, and gave good attention to the papers read by Mrs. Fullilove and Mrs. Morrison, each one giving items of interest and accounts of work done by the Woman's Missionary Society since its organization sixteen years ago.

CLARA L. CARTER, Rec. Sec.

A Miserable Taste.

That which hangs about most medicines is what we refer to. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC is an exception. It has a taste as pleasant, as cordial, as comforting as wine, as sparkling and refreshing as spring water! Cures all diseases and irregularities of the uterine system, and brings the bloom of health to the cheeks.

Free!

Now, brethren of the Mississippi Conference, be quick, for there is no time to lose if you are going to get free programmes for Children's Day from the Sunday-school Board. We are ready to serve you "without money and without price;" but even at these competitive figures business moves at a most lazy pace. Perhaps we ought to have offered a chromo and picture of your fourth wife with each order for programmes; but, in consideration of the late hour at which this ideal plan of assured success was reached, will not conscience, the church law and the love of Christ suffice?

Up to date only about twenty orders have reached me. Doubtless many others have bought programmes.

Don't forget the direction, brethren, which is: "The third Sunday in May, or as near thereto as practicable, shall be observed as Children's Day throughout our church with appropriate services; and on that day a collection shall be taken up for the aid of needy Sunday-schools and the advancement of the Sunday-school work under the direction of the Annual Conference Sunday-school Committee." If you have not observed the third Sunday in May, "better late than never." To fail to observe Children's Day is to violate the law; to use for other purposes the amount then collected is to misappropriate it.

Now, brethren, dear brethren, let us see the color of your ink.

WAITING FOR THE ANGELS.

Waiting through days of fever,
Waiting through nights of pain,
For the wait of wings at the portal,
For the sound of songs immortal,
And the breaking of life's long chain.

There is little to do for our dear one—
Only to watch and pray—
As the tide is outward drifting,
As the gates of heaven are lifting,
And its gleam is on her way.

The tasks that so often taxed her,
The children she held so dear,
The strain of the coming and going,
The stress of the mending and sewing,
The burden of many a year,

Trouble her now no longer;
She is past the fret and care,
On her brow is the angel's token,
The look of a peace unbroken,
She was never before so fair.

You see, she is waiting the angels,
And we—we are standing apart;
For us there are loss and sorrow;
For her is the endless morrow,
And the reaping-time of the heart.

Children's Work.

BY ELLA M'NICOLL.

If in simple words you can recite a touching story, or if you can awaken interest in some beautiful flower, you have within you the power of winning a child's confidence, and did you but know it, in this you have a magic key to the child's nature. Now, no explorer ever found more to observe than you may find nor more to learn than you may learn. The whole history of man from earliest ages repeats itself in each new creature.

"The little child comes to us with naked body and naked soul. The loving mother knows that the former must have the daintiest, warmest garments that loving hands and heart can devise, proper food and care, but shall the latter go unendowed? The body, if left to cold and hunger, dies and is at rest. Not so the soul. That part which God for a time has given into our keeping, robbed of everything that can feed and clothe it, yet lives on, if such an existence can be called life—lives because it is immortal. It can not die. The little coat is outgrown or worn out and destroyed. No trace of it is left, but the garment with which she has consciously or unconsciously clothed the soul may hang in its tattered rags not easily cast aside." Mothers and teachers, I appeal to you. Did you ever, do you to day realize that you are the makers and keepers of the soul's wardrobe? Through all the years of tender childhood "you are weaving garments that shall either beautify and protect or dwarf and disfigure the wearer for life."

There are laws of development which, if studied, will surely govern our dealings with the child mind. The thoughts now implanted become living principles by and by. Then why not more earnestly sow the seeds of Christian character? In teaching the Bible lessons let us try to put them in such form that the child can use them, and feel that they are especially his. A peculiar trait of childhood is that it enjoys nothing alone. I have found that these little ones, when told of unfortunate children who, in their benighted condition, have never heard these same beautiful truths, are the most anxious to devise some means by which they could send the glad tidings to them. I consider this the best part of a child's religious education, implanting that feeling that "I am necessary to help others," understanding fully that by so doing is gained the approval of him who said, "Go teach ALL nations."

Children are not only willing and anxious to do, but have already done much in mission work. During the last three months the children of Indiana have given $317 56 for foreign missions, while the total amount given during the same time by the children throughout the country amounts to $1,650 58. (This refers to contributions paid into the treasury of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions.) Have we not reason to be proud of their work?

I do not believe it right or Christian to use children as mere machines, with which to accomplish a purpose, let that purpose be of unexcelled importance. Nor do I believe it right to use the children for the purpose of increasing our mission fund. This act in itself is apt to eclipse the very principle that is so necessary to plant in the heart of every child. Let us teach the children the needs of others and especially in the work the Master would have them do, and the desired result will follow.

We grow and cultivate a little plant for a season. We speak of its value and the care given. Some careless one remarks, "Why waste time on such a thing? No beauty in that. I can go beyond the hill and in a very few minutes gather more flowers than you will ever gather from that." But wait. By and by my plant bursts into bloom—such wonderful flowers! Winter, too, is upon us. The fields are covered with snow. But my own treasure goes on blooming and sending out its sweet fragrance to all around. To bloom is its life-work from this on. Who will now say my time was wasted? On what hillside will you, my friend, gather your flowers to-day?

Mission work is the bloom, the fruitage of a Christian life. Anything else bearing the name is fraudulent and will soon be lost to sight. And a life that is non-productive of this fruit is non Christian. Let children once realize that there is something for them to do, then help them plan and help them in the doing. Keep before them the result of each effort, and let no effort prove a failure. Each successful one will prove a stimulant to higher and, if possible, a better one.

There is a proverbial saying that will never grow so old but that each day and year of our lives we will experience the truthfulness of it—this, "In unity there is strength." Christian people experience this truth in their church work. A kind of magnetic force that seems to burst forth in the hearty handshake and the heart-to-heart expressions that flow or should flow freely through a united congregation of God's people.

Children have more enthusiasm in company with others for example (remember children, learn most readily from example), will strengthen weaker ones who, if left alone, could do nothing. But some one asks: "Who is to look after the children and govern them in this work?" And I answer, you, my sister, and consider it not an arduous undertaking, but rather esteem it a privilege and a blessing that has fallen to your lot.

Did you not when you confessed the name of the Christ make a solemn vow that your life should be spent in his service, and can you stand by and see his little ones suffer neglect?

I feel that this should be especially the mother's work. When your child reaches the years of maturity and stands outside the church, your heart will send up one unending prayer for his salvation. You can not take his hand in yours and tell him the sweet story over and over. Other hands are clasping his now, other voices are filling his ears, and you turn away with a heavy heart and ask the Lord to do what you should have done, but neglected.

Let us one and all devote more time to the feeding of the lambs, assured that every effort put forth in their behalf will bring its reward. For the great Shepherd said, "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, he shall in no wise lose his reward."—Missionary Tidings.

If you stop sowing seed in order to calculate how many sown seed will never sprout, or, sprouting, will be dried up, choked or withered, the seed-time will be past with you, or some seedless soul, before the sowing is done.

GOD HOLD US ALL.

"Take me, papa," said my darling,
As we stood within the hall;
So I bore him up the stairway,
Scarcely felt the burden small.

In my other hand I carried
Books I wished to scan that night,
And the elfin begged me let him
Take them in his arms so slight.

Step by step, to top we mounted;
Then he said with childish pride,
"Baby carried books for papa—
Didn't he?" "Yes," I replied.

Little innocent I ne'er dreaming
As he bore the asked-for load,
That his father's strength upheld him,
Double-burdened on the road.

God is sometimes pleased to give us
Work for wondrous skill and thought;
Gleefully we don the laurels,
When his hand the triumph wrought.

Other People's Eyes.

At first thought it may seem to many that our neighbors' eyes are of no use to us personally; that eyes are serviceable only, or at least chiefly, to the one to whom they belong. But what new light and clearer understanding would break in upon our minds, how would strange words and deeds be explained if we could only look through other people's eyes sometimes, and they through ours?

It is difficult to judge those about us fairly and justly. We misunderstand them, and they in like manner misunderstand us. We look at what they say and do from our standpoint, and they look at our course from their standpoint. And a large proportion of the uncharitable thoughts, the selfishness, and consequently the bitterness of life, spring from this one cause.

Is not this true all the way in life from childhood to old age?—in the family, in the social circle, in the church, in business, in matters of amusement and pleasure, in politics? We pass harsh judgment on companions and friends—yes, even upon those dearly loved—because we do not see things as they see them; because we can not or will not put ourselves in their places and look through their eyes awhile.

The child kept indoors is noisy and boisterous, turning everything topsy-turvy in his wild glee; and the mother groans in spirit, and finally peremptorily bids him hush, forgetting how the little human steam engine shut up tight may nearly hurst. And the boy will only slowly grow into that thoughtfulness which will enable him to realize that mother and grandmother love quietude, and regulating his conduct by a glimpse through their spectacles, will give vent to his animal spirits in some far-away attic, or patiently await favorable opportunity.

A mother may subject a sensitive child to martyrdom by insisting upon his wearing some detested article of dress, never thinking of putting herself in his place in the child-world outside of home to see the courage it would require to wear that article among his comrades. To her his fancies seem only folly.

The husband perhaps rushes off to business some morning without the usual good-by word to his wife, and she sits brooding over what seems neglectful and unkind. Or he returning at night and meeting with no welcoming smile, only an absent-minded glance and a weary face, silently solaces himself with his newspaper. Could they, would they only look through each other's eyes, the wife would plainly see that it was only a momentary forgetfulness, or absorption in some detail of the coming day's business, that made him apparently unmindful of her, and the husband would see that the children had been troublesome, or the baby ill, or the servants negligent, and that the weary face was more for fear he would be discommoded than anything else.

A friend makes a remark which seems unkind, perhaps rude. Wait a little before you pass judgment. Do you really believe the unkindness or rudeness was intended? Look from his standpoint as far as possible and consider whether it might not be quite unintentional, or the result of only a momentary flash of feeling. And can you not ignore an unfortunate speech which very likely he regrets far more than you can?

When you last called at the house of a friend she did not treat you in her usual cordial way—at least, so it seemed to you. But do you think she intended to be discourteous? Remembering the friendly intercourse of past years, do you believe she would willingly slight or offend you? Look through her eyes, and try to see some of the many circumstances, quite disconnected with yourself, that might have caused that change of manner, or that hasty word. Does it not pain you to perceive how others often misunderstand what you do or say? Let this make you considerate and charitable in your judgment of others.

We each have our own individuality; our feelings, our modes of thought, our opinions vary. Even from those nearest and dearest to us, we differ in a thousand ways. One person is keenly sensitive to what another never notices; one is frank, another reticent; one demonstrative, another unresponsive; one quick and impulsive, another deliberate and thoughtful; one is yielding and changeable in opinion, another firm even to obstinacy. One person has doubts, temptations, and fears, which another can scarcely conceive of. What seems a wise course to one mind, appears foolish to another; and while some, longing to be better understood, break into impulsive speech, others with an equally strong longing carry aching hearts because they can not speak. To one it seems right and helpful to his religious life to attend a church of a certain denomination. His friend believes in another form of worship. One person thinks it right to indulge in some amusement which seems wrong to his friend. But why make these unlike views the occasion of harsh criticism, angry discussion, and bitter words? If you are unwilling to look candidly on your friend's side, reserve unkind judgment.

Our differing natures bring into life freshness, activity, pleasure, and progress. What a monotonous world it would be, indeed, if we were all alike! Yet if we would broaden our views by peeping through each other's eyes occasionally, our judgments would be far more just; and an immense amount of discomfort, as well as of real suffering and wrong doing, would be prevented.

They is no surer way of acquiring the habit of reviewing the words and acts and opinions of our friends and neighbors from their standpoint, as well as from our own, than to cultivate that charity which "thinketh no evil." If to this we add a sympathetic interest in the environment, difficulties, and perplexities of others, and a willingness to give them the same freedom of thought, feeling, and opinion which we claim for ourselves, estrangements between friends will seldom occur; wrangling disputes and bitter clashing of opinions will grow less frequent, we shall see more and more of that loving, Christ-like spirit which seeks to put the most favorable construction upon what others do, and strives to live peaceably with all men.—Exchange.

Manners.

Did you ever think what beautiful manners Christ had? What a charm his recorded conversations have! How courteous his greetings and his parting words! Surely if we try to copy him at all, we should try to copy his manners, for they are among the least of the beautiful examples which he sets us. Now one root of a perfect manner is love. If you have a heart full of love, you can never be rude, for you will not wish to hurt people's feelings. You will long to please people, to help and comfort them, and to make them happier; and so your loving heart will be constantly teaching you how to pay little deferences and respect to those whom you should honor. It will prompt the sunny smile and the appreciative word. Those little kindnesses called courtesies will be unfailing; and if you have a heart like this, such living will become the habit of your life, and then, no matter into what company you may be thrown, you will be equally unembarrassed; for when one has a heart which is full of the spirit of Christ, one can not do much that is amiss.—Ex.

Look on the Bright Side.

A man met a little fellow on the road carrying a basket of blackberries, and said to him, "Sammy, where did you get such nice berries?"

"Over there, sir, in the briars."

"Won't your mother be glad to see you come home with a basket of such nice ripe fruit?"

"Yes, sir," said Sammy, "she always seems glad when I hold up the berries, and I don't tell her anything about the briars in my feet."

The man rode on. Sammy's remark had given him a lesson, and he resolved that henceforth he would try to hold up the berries and say nothing about the briars.—Domestic Journal.

DYSPEPSIA AND GENERAL DEBILITY.

REV. A. H. MEVS.

Rev. A. H. MEVS, of Friar's Point, Coahoma Co., Mississippi, writes: "Having suffered for a number of years with dyspepsia, torpid liver and general debility, and having tried several physicians with little or no benefit, I resolved, as a last resort, to consult your specialists at the World's Dispensary. Being advised by them to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I did so, and after using several bottles, I feel entirely restored to health. Now, I take great pleasure in recommending your medicines to suffering humanity everywhere."

GREENWOOD—SARAH A. GREENWOOD (nee Dale) was born in Domopolis, Ala., June 11 1830, and died unexpectedly, April 5, 1894, of heart trouble, at Coatopa, Ala., where she had gone on a visit to relatives. She was buried at Okolona, Miss., beside her husband, near where they had lived for many years.

She professed religion and joined the M. E Church, South, in 1849, and during these forty-five years never faltered in her Christian endeavor and fidelity to her Master. In her mental endowments she was above the ordinary and to these were added the culture necessary to prepare her for usefulness. In the year 1849 she was happily married to the late DeWitt C. Greenwood, of precious memory, who was a cultured gentleman, a graduate of old LaGrange College, but not a Christian. The silent forces, however, and the life of our sister, soon brought him, a converted man, to the church of her choice. Thirty-four years ago the writer had the honor of administering the sacred vows of the church to him. Twelve pledges of love were the result of this union.

Truly we can say that the life of this good woman was an eventful one. Her doting husband and ten of their children preceded her to the better land. Ever and anon as the death angel would bear away from that happy home one of its members, leaving it under a cloud that seemed to have no silvery lining, that Christian mother would look away from the death chamber to him who is invisible. Scarcely had the sunlight of returning happiness driven away the gloom from that home, and once more they could sing trouhles past, than another was seen in the distance, containing elements of the deepest sorrow. Such was life to her until eleven of these shadows had passed, and wound after wound was thus made in her loving, motherly heart. In all these bereavements she did not "charge God foolishly," but, like Job, she would say, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"

If there was a mistake in her life, it was in trying to carry these accumulated sorrows until it seemed that life was almost a burden. When these waters of affliction became so bitter, and her quivering heart-strings were ready to break, she would kiss the afflicting hand, and turn all over on the tender heart of a loving Father, saying, "Thy will of the Lord be done!"

She dispensed a willing and bountiful hospitality to the weary itinerant for forty long years. Her love for the ministry knew no bounds, but above all were her God and her church.

Her children were her jewels, and she spared no means in providing them with every facility for mental and moral culture. She leaves two to mourn the loss of a devoted mother, both of whom are accomplished Christian women. Our sister rests from her labors and her works do follow her. J. B. STONE.

SADLER—Bro. F. W. SADLER was born at West Pearl, St. Tammany parish, La., in 1827, and died at Pearl River, La., April 15, 1894. He was married to Miss Loretta Crary in 1851; joined the Methodist Church in 1850, but was confirmed by Bishop Young, of the Episcopal Church, in 1866, while living at Pensacola, Fla.

Bro. Sadler was a quiet, good neighbor and citizen. A friend to all religious movements, his home was the "preacher's home," and many "messengers of peace" have enjoyed his hospitality, and been comforted and encouraged by his aid. Being undemonstrative in disposition, he rarely expressed his feelings in words, but lived, rather than professed, Christianity.

He was afflicted for several years past, and his afflictions for three and a half months preceding his death were of a very painful and distressing character, but he bore them all with a degree of patience seldom exhibited in a time of such suffering. His afflictions were sanctified to his good, and seem to have been the means chosen by Him who makes "perfect through suffering," of finishing his preparation for heaven. His testimony at the close was clear and satisfactory. A. H. SHANNON.

Nicholson, Miss.

JONES—Departed this life, on April 28, 1894, little ESTELLE JONES, the daughter of W. H. and Sallie Jones, of Raleigh, Miss. She was a bright nine-month old girl, the pride of the parents and the household; but God has plucked the sweet rose in the bud. It was too pure, too bright to live in this sinful world, and she is gone to live with the angels in the paradise of God.

Dear parents, weep not for the dear babe, but prepare to meet her in the land of the blessed, where parting is no more. J. H. EVANS.

MOREHEAD—Rev. D. C. MOREHEAD, the subject of this sketch, was born Oct. 12, 1838, and departed this life Nov. 24, 1893, in great peace at his home near Emory, Texas. He was licensed to preach in 1872 in North Mississippi, then his home, being born in Holmes county, of that State. He was happily married to Miss Sarah C. Murray, July 9, 1865, in Benton county, Miss. In 1877 he moved to Texas, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying among us.

Bro. Morehead was a useful man and effective preacher. He was happy and glad to be found in revivals, and under his ministry many souls were converted. He belongs to a preaching family, being the brother of Rev. H. C. Morehead, of North Mississippi Conference, and uncle of R. C. Morehead, in White River Conference. He was perfectly resigned to the will of God during his sickness, but expressed a regret in leaving his family, whom he desired to leave in better financial circumstances. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn their loss, three of whom are married. Thus the workmen die; but through this family we hope his useful life will ever be transmitted down the corridors of time. The Lord bless and console the weeping ones!

R. H. KIMBALL.

FORD—Mrs. JOYCE FORD was born in Marengo county, Ala., April 21, 1819; married James Ford, Nov. 5, 1835, and died Sept. 19, 1893. She united with the M. E. Church about 1874, and was a consistent member. Of twelve children only four survive her. She was a good mother, a faithful wife and model neighbor. Grandma Ford was ever faithful to duty, and had but nursed her aged husband to convalescence when the last and fatal illness made its attack. This was borne with the patience that was demonstrated in her every-day life.

Being endowed with a sunny disposition and sympathetic heart, her presence was a comfort and an inspiration to those who were thrown with her. It is but natural for us to mourn our loss when bereft of dear ones. But grief tends to soften our rebellious hearts, and inclines us to seek the comfort and grace of our heavenly Father. May her aged companion and children receive this comforting grace of him, while her spirit, from a sphere beyond the starry vault, returns as a guardian angel to guide them, by a viewless hand, in the path of duty and love to our Creator. A FRIEND.

HARPER—LUCINDA BURROWS HARPER was born in Bedford county, Tenn., May 15, 1811. In early life she gave her heart to God, and joined the Methodist Church, of which she continued a faithful member until her death, which occurred at the home of her daughter, in Louisville, Miss., March 17, 1894. She was happily married to Wm. Harper, of Tuscaloosa county, Ala., Sept. 13, 1832, and in 1833 they moved to Winston county, Miss., where she spent a long and useful life.

She was a woman of weak physique, yet so kind and gentle, so amiable and loving, that she was happy in living for those she loved. Her good husband, who was a local preacher, preceded her to the goodly home, and she spent her old age with her children. Her last days were spent in sickness, yet almost without suffering.

She was so highly esteemed and honored by her friends and children that she counted it a joy to wait the will of her divine Master. We are sure we will meet her in "the sweet by-and-by." J. A. LEECH.

THOMPSON—Mrs. IDA THOMPSON was born in East Feliciana parish, April 23, 1871, and died Dec. 16, 1894. She was married to Jno. W. Thompson, Jan. 18, 1893. Sister Ida was a member of the Baptist Church, and lived a consistent life from the time she joined until the day of her death.

From the beginning of her sickness she was conscious that she would not get well, but every word and act indicated that she was prepared for the change.

Sister Ida was a model Christian, a devoted wife, a kind sister. She leaves a husband, several brothers and a sister to mourn her loss; but they should rejoice when they remember that their loss is her eternal gain.

This writer had only known her for two years; but in this short period she had impressed me that she was a pure Christian. I have never known anyone more generally loved. May God bless her dear companions, brothers and sister! is the prayer of her friend, G. D. ANDERS.

HARPER—We, the committee appointed by the Methodist Sunday-school at Ruston, La., submit the following resolutions:

Whereas, It has pleased the Supreme Being of the universe to remove from our midst and a life of promise our esteemed pupil and classmate; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death, by drowning, of WALTER F. HARPER, of New Iberia, La., the family and community have lost a worthy and useful member.

Resolved, That, as members of his former Sunday-school and class, we deplore the loss and mingle our tears with those of his bereaved relatives, and tender them our sympathy.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to his family, and that the Ruston Leader and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE be requested to publish the same.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

He that allows himself everything that is permitted is very near to that which is forbidden.—St. Augustine.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

There is a

Great Difference

In quality between Royal Baking Powder and every other mixture offered as a substitute for it.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar. Contains no alum, lime, nor ammonia; leaves absolutely no acid or alkali in the food. Royal Baking Powder acts upon the dough to make the food peculiarly light, sweet, moist and tender.

Royal Baking Powder contains the maximum of leavening strength, 160 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder.

The official analysis by the United States Government does not show any other baking powder to possess these qualities.

The dam in the Horse Shoe curve, about Altoona, Pa., broke at midnight, May 20, 13 feet of it being carried away. EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

GROWING IN GRACE.

(II. Peter i, 1-11; Eph. ii, 1-10.)

Our lesson sets forth the rudiments of spiritual arithmetic.

1. It will be found that "division" is not given. It does not enter into the divine plan. It is of the devil.

(1) A divided heart will entail disaster. We should be either "hot" or "cold."

(2) A divided family is a miniature hell. Forbear, forgive, forget.

(3) A divided church can not prosper. We are a chain. Link must harmoniously join link.

2. In the remaining three arithmetic "species" multiplication is mentioned first. "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you."

(1) Individually, we receive grace for grace. One blessing ensures others. Thus multiplication continues.

(2) One conversion will lead to other conversions. Gaining Cornelius for Christ, his whole family were secured.

3. Subtraction is next in order. "Having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." And the process of subtraction will never cease.

(1) Subtract inordinate affections. Idolatrous love of wife and children. Selfishness.

(2) Subtract evil thoughts. No longer cherish the memory of insults and neglects.

(3) Subtract questionable utterances.

(4) Subtract—the foot on sins of omission and commission!

4. Addition is largely set forth. "Add to your faith." Acquisition of faith presupposed. Faith saves. Without faith we can not please God.

(1) Add virtue—that is, courage. It requires courage to say "No" when temptations 'round us gather. Think of the martyrs.

(2) Add knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness. Without these faith is like a bird without wings.

(3) Add brotherly kindness, charity. Everybody has a heavy burden to carry. Be kind, sympathetic. Much suffering. Render assistance, relief.

The Epworth League.

The most interesting subject for an Epworth League is that which concerns an Epworth League.

As young people compose the membership of a League, it would be well to dwell on them. Is it necessary that every young person over fifteen years of age (and I might say under) to belong to and be actively connected with an Epworth League? I say, Yes; and not only that, but every Christian mother and father in the M. E. Church, South, should consider it a duty to see that their children are members. You say, Why is it necessary that my child should be a member of an Epworth League? Let me ask you a question first: Do you bring your children up in the rites of the church?

My Christian mothers, I am asking you a plain question. Do you? If you do, why are there not more responses from them? More of them saying, "Amen," to the preacher's or some good brother's and sister's prayer? Why are there so few that lead in prayer? Are you instructing them to this end? God commanded the children of Israel that when they observe the "passover" they should tell their children, from generation to generation, the story as to how the angel of death "passed over" the houses where blood was sprinkled on the lintel and door posts, and how such a house was spared, and that the angel passed on to a house that had not the blood upon it, and left it only after the first-born of that house was slain. I say why did God command them to do this if it was not that their children should be instructed in the wonderful things he had done for them, and as a proof that he would do it for the children also? And how would the children be made to know of the love of God for them if the parents or some one else did not instruct them?

Now, Christ died that through his death we might live. Mothers, are you telling your children that by taking the blood of Christ upon them, the angel of death will have no power over them, and that they will be made victorious over sin, and more than that—they will be made joint heirs with Christ?

In conclusion, if you are not doing these things, and do not think it enough importance that they should know them, some one else does and are praying for them. One thing you can do; it is this: See that your child joins the Epworth League where they will be told these things and drilled in the work of Christians that love their Redeemer, and this is why your child should belong to the Epworth League.

To the League I will say: Encourage good work, drill your members in the workings of the church, teach them to lead in prayer and to say, "Amen," so that when the older Christians have crossed the river Jordan, there will be some one to fill their places who are thoroughly able to do so. And may the Spirit of God be with you all in all that you may undertake, and may there be a refreshing shower of grateful success upon us all.

MORRIS B. DEPASS,
Pres. of N. O. Union Epworth League.

AT HIS FEET.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

Lord, I would offer thee
A heart's untarnished gold,
And yet how can it be
When all there is in me
Is touched with blight and mold?

I find within no thought
So holy that it may
Unashamed to thee be brought,
Except as it hath caught
From thee a hallowing ray.

Yet all I am is thine.
Through sins and flaws and stains
I feel thy presence shine;
Take me, and make divine
All that unchastened remains!

Lord, of thyself not much
In me canst thou behold,
And yet thou savest such;
The magic of thy touch
Transmutes my dross to gold.

Contrition thou dost prize
All sacrifice above.
Dear Lord, I dare arise
And look into thine eyes,
Because I know thy love,

In Memoriam.

In this tribute which I pay to the memory of Mary Anna Wilkinson (nee Keener) all of her friends, and mine, will know how to make due allowance for a father's partiality.

There were so many virtues and gifts met in her, that she was universally loved by all her acquaintances. Her cheerfulness never forsook her, until the hour when of a sudden she found herself in the grasp of death. She was impressed directly, at the first of her attack, while dressing for Sabbath-school, that it was a fatal sickness. She was sick only six days. On the day before her death she seemed much better, but presently the fever returned, and the next day she died. When bidding good-by, she said to her brother: "I am ready, and in case anything happens, you may know that I am in heaven." She talked with so much difficulty, and suffered such nervous prostration, during all the while of her sickness, that only this sentence remains of her passage through the aisle of death. All her life she was the most joyous, equable spirit one ever knew. No one ever experienced more trying scenes of life, yet she bore up without murmur or distraction, and her Christian patience strengthened under the severest tension to which it was subjected. Immediately after her marriage her husband was stationed at Shreveport. During the whole time of the yellow fever epidemic of 1873 Mr. Wilkinson and his wife remained in the parsonage, ministering to the sick and dying. He buried five priests and all the ministers who staid by their several denominations. When at last Mr. Wilkinson himself was taken down, his wife was left alone with the care of husband and children, without help, to work her way through the ordeal. Strange to say, the five children escaped. The next year Mr. Wilkinson died at Baton Rouge, after a most agonizing, yet triumphant sickness, and left her a widow with four step-sons, and two children of her own. One of these, a beautiful boy of three years, fell in a garden, and became an epileptic. He averaged three fits every day for ten years, when he died. This child literally slept in her bosom. He developed in all the traits of that fearful disease, yet brilliant and beautiful as boy and youth.

One need not be surprised that she was a mature Christian, deeply instructed in all the steps of spiritual life. She was capable of comforting all conditions of human suffering. In the sick-room, and with the bereaved, she was refreshing in the depth of her sympathy and sweet counsel. Her face and heart were all aglow with the thoughts and sentiments of the good Word of God. The poor she aided, and the neglected she brought into notice. All children, both boys and girls, sheltered themselves under her overflowing good nature and motherly kindness. Everybody reckoned her to be their personal friend, and so indeed she was. She was the life of all the social meetings of the little church to which she belonged. She prayed in the ladies' prayer meeting, and aided in every good work. Clearly converted at the age of sixteen, her spiritual graces strengthened to the very end of life.

Her gifts as an artist were of high order. She invented and brought scissor-cutting to a fine art, executing, without measurement or drawing, the most elaborate pictures, with only a pair of ordinary scissors in one hand and a piece of glazed black paper in the other. All her cuttings were original designs, with scarcely an exception. She preferred Scripture scenes, such as "The Angels Visiting the Shepherds," "The Last Chapter of Proverbs," "He Carries the Lambs in His Bosom;" but could depict any subject with singular naturalness and spirit. She never marred a piece, or cut two things alike. The matrix was often as perfect as the picture cut out of it. Her genius for modeling was equally marked, and the several pieces which she perfected to oasis showed that she was capable of great results with the chisel. With all this capacity she was not anxious to adopt fine art as a profession. She said it was not refining, but rather sensualizing, in its effect upon the mind. She greatly desired to express her conception of the Savior's parables and words, believing that they offered a rich field to a spiritually minded artist. I am sure that the work she has left will scarcely ever be succeeded by any other like it. She was in her art the first and the last, in delineating high sentiment by scissor-cutting. She also invented a way of mounting her pieces that gave to every figure and line its own shadow.

Her presence was peace and sunshine. In all her life of fifty-one years I never saw her out of temper. She never reflected in the slightest degree upon any person. She was of all the most transparent in presence and manner, with nothing in excess, only the cheerfulness of a soul "that thinketh no evil."

She was a most affectionate daughter, mother and sister, and her radiant character has left upon them all its fadeless impress. Doubtless she is now with the Savior, and her brow is crowned with amaranth and beame.

It is matter of profound gratitude that for so many years the Lord gave us the company, the love and the comfort of so noble and sweet a spirit.

Reports Adopted by the General Conference.

The Committee on Revisal made the following reports:

REPORT NO. 3.

They have duly considered sundry resolutions and memorials from divers Conferences, proposing material changes of Discipline concerning local preachers.

We had before us a paper signed J. T. Kendall, O. G. Halliburton, John Mathews, D. B. Young, and T. F. Mangum; also a paper signed by F. D. Swindell and G. A. Oglesby. In addition we had under consideration a memorial from Nicholsonville charge, of the Kentucky Conference, signed Julius Edwin Wright.

All these documents relate to one and the same subject-matter, viz.: The transferring of licensing local preachers from the Quarterly to the District Conference, and other concomitant matter in regard to local preachers. Looking with favor upon this important class of our ministry, and desiring to enhance this useful body of men, the committee have accepted the changes proposed, and they are herein specifically stated. We regard the proposed changes as having great importance in tending to the improvement of local preachers as a class, and as subserving a very desirable end—the improvement of the itinerant ministry. Let it be remembered that all itinerant preachers are at first local preachers; hence the advancement of the local ministry must advance the grade of itinerant ministers.

The various changes proposed are as follows:

1. Add a new paragraph to chapter ii, section 3, page 56, Discipline, reading thus:

Duties of District Conferences.—After paragraph 74 add paragraph 75, in this language:

"The District Conference shall license proper persons to preach, and renew their licenses annually when in their judgment their gifts, grace and usefulness will warrant the renewal. All votes to license shall be by ballot."

2. Strike out paragraph 82, page 59, in reference to licensing local preachers by Quarterly Conferences, and insert in lieu thereof the following paragraph 82, answer 5: "To recommend proper persons to the District Conference to preach when in their judgment their gifts, grace and usefulness will warrant. All votes to recommend shall be by ballot."

3. Strike out "preach, or," in inquiry 10, paragraph 86, page 63, and add a new inquiry, as follows:

Who are recommended to the District Conference for license to preach?

Strike out "Quarterly" wherever it occurs in reference to the licensing of local preachers in paragraphs 162, 163, and 167, page 101, and insert "District."

In chapter iii, section 11, answer 2, strike out "Church of which he is a member," etc., and insert "Quarterly Conference."

The committee further approve the Nicholson Church, Kentucky, in regard to recommendation of local preachers for ordination and for admission and readmission into the itinerant connection, placing this matter under the control of the District Conference, instead of the Quarterly Conference, the following language to take place of existing law: "To recommend suitable candidates to the Annual Conference for deacon's or elder's orders in the local connection and for admission on trial and readmission into the traveling connection; provided, that no person shall be recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial or for ordination without first passing in the District Conference an approved examination in the course of study prescribed by the Bishops for such candidates. All votes to recommend preachers for admission on trial, or readmission into the traveling connection, or for deacon's or elder's orders, shall be taken by ballot. No recommendation from a District Conference to an Annual Conference shall be of any force after the session of the Annual Conference next following the grant of such recommendation." This language to take the place of the prescriptions of Discipline, giving Quarterly Conferences authority in this matter. This amendment to appear on page 56, paragraph 75.

We recommend concurrence.

J. W. HINTON, Chair'n.
J. M. MASON, Sec.

REPORT NO. 7.

The Committee on Revisal have considered the resolution of J. H. Evans, A. G. Hankins, and G. W. Wilson, and hereby report. The resolution proposes the following change in Discipline:

To the question (chapter iii, section 4), "What are the duties of a preacher who has charge of a circuit, station, or mission?" let the answer be as follows:

"To supply the people with the ministry of the Word; to see that the sacraments are duly administered, and, in the absence of the Bishop or presiding elder, to have control and direction of all public religious services held within their bounds, whether by traveling or local preachers." Then change the numbering of the remaining paragraphs and answers to conform to this addition.

We recommend concurrence.

J. W. HINTON, Chair'n.
J. M. MASON, Sec.

REPORT NO. 9.

Your Committee on Revisal hereby respectfully report on sundry memorials from the Virginia Conference.

The General Conference is asked to amend paragraph 130, answer 13, Discipline, so that the first three lines shall read, "To keep a register for his charge, in which shall be noted 'the,'" and by adding to the answer the following: "In charges containing more than one organized congregation, the names of the members shall be arranged under the name of the church or appointment to which they belong."

We recommend the adoption of the proposed change.

The Committee on Education made the following reports:

REPORT NO. 4.

The committee also calls attention to the fact that besides the new movement for the higher education of women so successfully set on foot in Virginia by the erection and endowment of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, the doors of Vanderbilt University, Tennessee; Southwestern University, Texas (in a ladies' annex); Central College, Missouri; Hendrix College, Arkansas, and perhaps others of our recognized colleges of high grade, have been thrown open for the admission of women, and that we thus have a number of co-educational institutions belonging to our church, as well as the Randolph-Macon Woman's College mentioned by the Bishops, which is for women only, where our daughters may secure an education equal in extent and thoroughness to that given our sons in our best colleges and universities. Such institutions should receive the patronage of our people for the class of students they seek, and graduates of our many excellent seminaries for young ladies should be encouraged to enter them in preference to colleges which are not in sympathy with our church or with our ideas of womanhood.

Respectfully submitted.

WM. W. SMITH, Chair'n.
C. E. DOWMAN, Sec.

REPORT NO. 7.

The Committee on Education having had the memorials from the Western North Carolina Conference and from the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University, praying that a Bishop be authorized to leave a preacher without appointment to attend one of our institutions of learning, beg leave to report as follows:

We recommend concurrence, and we further recommend that the following words be added to paragraph 98, answer 2, page 74, of the Discipline:

"A Bishop may appoint a preacher on trial, or a member of an Annual Conference, as a student in any of our institutions of learning, when requested so to do by the Annual Conference; provided, however, that the time thus spent in school shall not count on time required for trial for the Annual Conference."

REPORT NO. 12.

The Committee on Education make the following nominations for the Board of Education:

W. W. Smith, Bishop C. B. Galloway, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, W. A. Candler, J. D. Hammond, J. H. McLean, J. H. Kirkland, R. E. Crockett, J. H. Carlisle, W. B. Hill, A. Coke Smith, B. N. Duke, E. W. Cole, T. H. B. Anderson, J. S. Kennedy.

WM. W. SMITH, Chair'n.
C. W. DOWMAN, Sec.

The Committee on Church Extension made the following reports:

REPORT NO. 5.

Your Committee on Church Extension, having had under consideration the quadrennial report of the Board of Church Extension and that portion of the address of the Bishops referring to the subject of church extension, would respectfully report as follows:

A review of the work of the quadrennium shows a gratifying increase in the receipts of the Boards. As compared with the preceding quadrennium, the receipts from annual collections have increased from $190 466 to $247,785, or 26 per centum. The loan funds have grown from $61 499 to $112 268, being an increase of $50,768, or 82 per centum. The receipts from all sources, except from payments on loans to churches, have advanced from $230 200 to $304 834, being an increase of $74 634, or about 33 per centum. These figures, in view of the prevailing financial distress, afford abundant cause for thankfulness to God for his mercies. We cordially commend the careful and economical manner in which the affairs of the Board have been managed.

REPORT NO. 11.

To the President and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South:

Your Committee on Church Extension report that we have had before us the report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society for the four years ending March 31 1894. The efficient management of this society by the general secretary, Miss Lucinda B. Helm, calls from us the highest commendation. Her resignation was accepted with regret, but the appointment of Mrs. Nathan Scarritt meets with our earnest approval.

The unparalleled success of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, as shown by this report, is a subject of congratulation, and we hail with pleasure the result obtained so far. It gives evidence of the wisdom of the General Conference in relegating this work to the women of our church.

We recommend the following resolution:

1. We commend this society to our church, and trust that our pastors and members will give their aid and hearty co-operation to our women in this great work.

Respectfully submitted.

H. C. MORRISON, Chair'n.
C. V. MURRY, Sec.

Respectfully submitted.

H. M. DUBOSE, Chair'n.
JNO. M. BARCUS, Sec.

Report No. 8 of Committee on Itinerancy:

Your committee, having considered the resolution of J. T. Sawyer and W. B. Thomson, asking for a change in paragraph 318, page 186, of the Discipline, respectfully recommend the following addition to said paragraph:

"Provided, however, that in cases of equal necessity the Board shall take into account the time of active service rendered by the claimants."

Respectfully submitted.

Several Things Harder Than the Times.

Perhaps some of us would not talk so much about hard times if we reflect a little on some things near home that are much harder than the times. One of the hardest things under heaven is

THE HUMAN HEART.

Of course we mean the human heart in its natural condition. Did you ever reflect on how much good influence some hearts can resist? Just try and form an estimate of how much in the way of prayer, providence, preaching, reading of God's Word, good advice from friends, striving of the Spirit and reproof of conscience, some men can resist in forty or fifty years. If the times were as hard as some human hearts are, scarcely one of us would have a meal a day or a half decent suit of clothes. Did you ever notice how brutally cruel some human bipeds—we do not say men—are in their treatment of small boys? The only time we ever like Arminian theology is when we see a big bully abuse a small boy. At such a time we would like to fall from grace long enough to kick that bully until he wished himself at home with his parents. If the times were half as hard as the hearts of the bipeds who abuse boys, not one of us would have a single crust.

THE HUMAN FACE

Is sometimes as hard as the human heart. Hardness of face is technically called "cheek." The power of cheek is one of the greatest powers known. It beats steam out of sight, and is a dangerous rival to electricity. Did you ever try to form an estimate of the number of people who get prominent places by pure cheek? They have not a single earthly qualification, and we hail with pleasure the result obtained so far. It gives evidence of the wisdom of the General Conference in relegating this work to the women of our church. unalloyed, unrelieved, unmitigated cheek. There is enough of cheek in politics, but the cheek on one side helps to keep the cheek on the other in check. There is any amount of cheek in the legal profession, but sarcastic old judges and seniors at the bar sit on it heavily and do something to keep it down. But in the church courts, and in the religious conventions and similar places, cheek runs riot, and modesty has to keep out of the way.

See that dude as he monopolizes everything at the evening party, while people of brains sit in silence. What gives him his prominence? Unrelieved cheek.

SOME CONGREGATIONS

Are much harder than the times. The times give most men enough of bread and butter, but congregations have been known to starve their pastors genteelly for years, and then turn them out to die. There is a great deal of noise just now about popery, higher criticism, and alleged heterodoxy in various lines. One man congregation that starves its own minister while its members scream about Rome; one hard congregation that shouts about heresy, and gives a cent per member for missions and nothing for augmentation; one selfish, worldly minister who thinks more about his salary than about the souls of his flock, does more in a day to hinder and injure the cause of Christ than all the higher critics on this side of Germany.

There are a few more things harder than the times, but enough has surely been said to suggest a little less talk about the hardness of the times, and a little more thought about the hardness of some other things.—Knoxonian, in the Canada Presbyterian.

CHURCH TRIALS.

CHAPTERS VII AND VIII OF THE DISCIPLINE, AS AMENDED

The Committee of Seven, to whom was referred the report of the Commission on Church Trials, with directions to maturely consider the same, have given to this important matter the most careful attention which their other duties in connection with the General Conference would allow; and beg leave to submit their report as follows:

We recommend that Chapters vii and viii of the Discipline be so amended that they will read as in the appended draft.

Respectfully submitted,

PAUL WHITEHEAD, Chair'n.
W. B. HILL, Sec'y.

CHAPTER VII.

ADMINISTRATION OF DISCIPLINE.

SECTION I.

TRIAL OF A BISHOP.

QUES 1. To whom is a Bishop amenable for his conduct?

¶246 ANS 1. To the General Conference, who have power to try, and acquit, suspend, or expel him for improper conduct.

QUES. 2. What provision is made for the trial of a Bishop if he should be accused of immorality in the interval of the General Conference?

¶247 ANS. 1. When a Bishop shall be under report, or be accused of immorality, three traveling elders shall, after notice to him, carefully inquire into the case, and if they believe an investigation necessary, they shall report the matter to another Bishop; and it shall be his duty to summon together, at some convenient place, not less than twelve traveling elders, and also the witnesses by whom the accusation is expected to be established; and the said elders shall be a committee for the investigation of the charge brought against the Bishop. And if two-thirds of them believe that a trial is necessary, they shall suspend him till the ensuing General Conference. The presiding Bishop shall cause an exact record of the investigation, signed by the president and secretary, to be transmitted to the General Conference. By this record, and such other testimony as may be obtained, the case shall be considered and determined by the General Conference without the intervention of another committee.

QUES. 3. What provision is made for the trial of a Bishop if he should be accused at the session of the General Conference?

¶248. ANS. 1. An accusation preferred during the session of the General Conference shall be referred to a committee of twenty-five members of the General Conference, to be selected by the president in the chair, for investigation, who shall report to the General Conference whether or not a trial be necessary. If the committee of investigation decide that a trial is necessary, they shall make out, in proper form, charges and specifications, conforming them to the grade of offense involved in the accusation, and appoint one or more of their number to prosecute the case. The bill of charges and specifications shall be a part of the report of the committee to the General Conference. Every case to be tried under this process shall, upon the finding of a bill of charges, be referred to the committee on episcopacy, who shall have full power to try the case, and whose decision shall be final, save as to the right of appeal. The said committee shall make a report to the General Conference in writing, and deliver up to the secretary the whole record of the case, with the decision rendered.

¶249. A Bishop who shall be found guilty by the committee on episcopacy, shall have a right of appeal to the General Conference then in session, who shall finally determine the case.

¶250. No charge against a Bishop shall be tried except it be made in writing with specifications signed by those who propose to establish it; and a copy of the charge, with the specifications, shall be delivered to the accused a sufficient length of time to enable him to make all necessary preparation for his defense.

SECTION II.

TRIAL OF A TRAVELING PREACHER

QUES. 1. To whom is a traveling preacher amenable for his conduct?

¶251. ANS. To the Annual Conference, which shall have power to try, acquit, suspend, or expel him.

QUES. 2. What shall be done where a traveling preacher is accused of immorality?

¶252. ANS. 1. When a traveling preacher is under report of immorality, or accused thereof in writing, signed by a minister or member of our church, if it be in the interval of the Annual Conference of which he is a member, let the presiding elder, in the absence of a Bishop, call together as many traveling preachers as he shall think fit—at least three—to investigate the report or accusation. If practicable, bring the accused and the accuser face to face before the committee. If the accused be an elder, the committee shall be composed of elders, and if the accused be a deacon, the committee shall be elders or deacons.

¶253. If the committee shall judge a trial necessary, the accused shall be suspended until the ensuing Annual Conference of which he is a member. The committee shall prepare in due form a bill of charges and specifications against the accused, and present them to him by copy a sufficient length of time before Conference for him to prepare for his trial. They shall also appoint some member of the Conference to prosecute the accused before the committee of trial at the session of the Conference.

¶254. The presiding elder, in the absence of the Bishop, shall preside over the committee of investigation; and in every case the chairman of the committee shall cause an exact record of the investigation, including the charges, evidence, and finding of the committee, signed by the president and secretary, to be transmitted to the Annual Conference. By this record, and such other testimony as may be obtained, the case shall be fully considered and determined by the Annual Conference without the intervention of another committee of investigation.

But should the committee of investigation in any case judge that a trial is not necessary, the Conference, if it differ in judgment from the committee, may appoint another committee to inquire into the facts and report to the Conference.

¶255 When witnesses can not be induced to attend the trial, the presiding elder shall appoint some preacher to take the written testimony of the witnesses, giving the parties notice and the privilege of cross-examination, and the testimony thus obtained shall be laid before the committee of trial as proof in the case.

¶256. If the accused be a presiding elder, any three traveling elders or deacons of his district may inquire into the case, and, if they judge it necessary, report to the Bishop, who shall appoint a committee of at least three elders from within the bounds of the Annual Conference of which the accused is a member to investigate the report or accusation; shall also preside at the investigation, or some traveling elder appointed by him; and if the committee judge a trial necessary, the accused shall be suspended until the ensuing Annual Conference.

¶257. If the accused evades an investigation, it shall be received as presumptive proof of guilt; and he may be suspended. Nevertheless even in that case, the Annual Conference shall consider and determine the whole matter.

¶258. ANS. 2. When the accusation is preferred during the session of the Annual Conference, it shall first be referred, for investigation, to a committee of three traveling elders, appointed by the president, who shall report to the Conference whether or not they judge a trial necessary. If the Conference differ in judgment from the committee, a second committee may be appointed by the Conference to inquire into the facts, and their report shall be final.

¶259. The committee of investigation, reporting a case for trial, shall bring forth a bill of charges in proper form, and appoint some member of the Conference to prosecute the case.

¶260. Every case to be tried shall be referred to a committee of not less than nine, nor more than thirteen, who shall be selected by lot from the members of the Conference, and who, in the presence of a Bishop or chairman, whom the president of the Conference shall appoint and one or more of the secretaries of the Conference, shall have full power to try the case; and their decision shall be final, save as to the right of appeal.

[This paragraph was vetoed by the Bishops.—EDITOR.]

The accused shall be allowed the unlimited right of challenge of the members of the trial committee, for cause, and the right of interrogation of committeemen to ascertain the cause; the president of the Conference shall determine the sufficiency of the cause, and the accused shall also have the right of peremptory challenge of three in a committee of nine and five in a committee of thirteen. And the said committee shall make a report to the Conference, in writing, signed by the chairman and a majority of the committee, and deliver up to the secretary the whole record of the case, with the decision rendered.

QUES 3. What shall be done in case of improper tempers, words or actions?

¶261. ANS. The person so offending shall be reprehended by his senior in office. Should a second transgression take place, one, two, or three preachers are to be taken as witnesses. If he be not then cured, accusation shall be preferred at the next Annual Conference, and the accused shall be dealt with as in a case of immorality.

QUES 4. What shall be done with those preachers who disseminate, publicly or privately, doctrines which are contrary to our Articles of Religion?

¶262. ANS. Let the same process be observed as in case of immorality; but if the preacher so offending do solemnly engage not to disseminate such erroneous doctrines, in public or in private, he shall be borne with till his case be laid before the next Annual Conference, which shall determine the matter.

QUES 5. What shall be done when a traveling preacher is complained of as being so unacceptable, inefficient, or secular, as to be no longer useful in his work?

¶263. ANS 1. The Conference to which he belongs shall investigate the case, and if it appear that the complaint is well founded, and he do not give the Conference satisfaction that he will amend, or voluntarily retire, it may locate him without his consent.

¶264. ANS 2. He shall be at liberty to defend himself before the Conference in person, or by his representative; and if he be located, in his absence, without having been previously notified of an intention thus to proceed against him, he may apply to the Conference, at its next session, to be heard in his defense, and the matter shall be reconsidered for that purpose.

QUES. 6. What shall be done in the case of a preacher who refuses to attend to the work assigned him.

¶265. ANS. He shall be liable to suspension or deposition from the ministry, unless he has the consent of the Bishop who made the appointment or in charge of the work; and the final determination in all such cases shall be with the Annual Conference.

¶266. Nevertheless, in all the above mentioned cases of trial and conviction, an appeal to the ensuing General Conference shall be allowed, if the condemned person signify to the president or secretary of the Conference his intention to appeal at the time of his condemnation, or at any time thereafter when he is informed thereof.

SECTION III.

TRIAL OF A PROBATIONER.

QUES. What shall be done with a preacher on trial who is accused of immorality?

¶267. ANS. He shall be accountable to the Quarterly Conference of the circuit on which he travels. The presiding elder shall call a committee of investigation, and the course of discipline shall be pursued that is made and provided for a local preacher under a like accusation.

SECTION IV.

TRIAL OF A LOCAL PREACHER.

QUES. 1. To whom is a local preacher amenable for his conduct?

¶268. ANS. To the Quarterly Conference, which shall have power to try; and acquit, suspend, or expel him.

QUES 2. What shall be done when a local preacher is accused of immorality?

¶269. ANS. 1. When a local preacher is under report of immorality, or accused thereof in writing, signed by a member of our church, the preacher in charge shall appoint a committee of three local preachers, and if local preachers can not be obtained, of members of the church, to investigate the report or accusation. If, upon investigation, this committee judge a trial necessary, they shall see that a bill of charges and specifications be drawn in proper form, and shall appoint a local preacher or member of the church to prosecute the case before the ensuing Quarterly Conference. A copy of the bill of charges and specifications shall be delivered to the accused a sufficient length of time before the trial to enable him to make the necessary preparation for his defense.

¶270. The committee of investigation shall, in every case, make a report to the Quarterly Conference; and if the Conference differ in judgment, a second committee may be appointed to inquire into the facts and their report shall be final.

¶271. A local preacher who has been notified by the presiding elder, or the preacher in charge, of a bill of charges and specifications thus found against him, shall not be allowed to exercise the functions of his office from the time of his notification until the case has been presented to and determined by the Quarterly Conference.

¶272. When witnesses can not be induced to attend the trial, the preacher in charge shall appoint some discreet member of the church to take the written testimony of the witnesses as is provided in ¶255.

¶273. The president of the Quarterly Conference shall, at the commencement of the trial, appoint a secretary, who shall take down regular minutes of the evidence and proceedings. The minutes, when read and approved, shall be signed by the president, and also by the members who are present, or a majority of them, and the sentence of the Quarterly Conference shall be pronounced by the president.

QUES. 3. What shall be done in case of improper tempers, words, or actions?

¶274. ANS. The person so offending shall be reprehended by the preacher having charge. Should a second transgression take place, one, two, or three faithful friends are to be taken as witnesses. If he be not then cured, he shall be dealt with as in a case of immorality; and, if found guilty and impenitent, he shall be expelled from the church.

QUES. 4. What shall be done with those local preachers who disseminate, publicly or privately, doctrines which are contrary to our Articles of Religion?

¶275. ANS. Let the same process be observed as in case of immorality.

QUES 5. What shall be done when a local elder or deacon is complained of as being so unacceptable or inefficient as to be no longer useful in his work, and the Quarterly Conference refuses to pass his character on that ground?

¶276. ANS. The Quarterly Conference next succeeding shall proceed to investigate the case; and if it appears that the complaint is well founded, and he does not give the Conference satisfaction that he will amend, or voluntarily withdraw from the ministry, the Conference may depose him from the ministry. He shall be at liberty to defend himself before the Conference in person, or by his representative. The president of the Quarterly Conference shall have regular minutes of the investigation taken, which, on being read and approved, shall be signed by himself and a majority of the members of the Conference.

¶277. In all the above mentioned cases of trial and conviction, an appeal to the ensuing Annual Conference shall be allowed, if the condemned person signify his intention to appeal at the time of his condemnation, or at any time thereafter when he is informed thereof.

SECTION V.

TRIAL OF A MEMBER.

QUES. 1. What shall be done when a member of the church is accused of immorality?

¶278. ANS. When a member of the church is under report of immorality, or accused thereof in writing signed by a member of our church, the preacher in charge shall appoint a committee of three discreet members, who shall investigate the report or accusation. If, upon investigation, they judge a trial necessary, they shall see that a bill of charges and specifications is prepared, and appoint some member of the church to prosecute the case.

¶279. Upon the presentation of such bill of charges, the preacher in charge shall appoint a committee of not less than five, nor more than thirteen, members of the circuit or station to which the accused belongs, before whom the accused shall be duly cited to appear, who shall have full power to try the case; and if the accused be found guilty by a majority of the committee, let the preacher declare him suspended, or expelled, according to the verdict of the committee.

¶280. A copy of the charge and specifications shall be delivered to the accused a sufficient length of time before the trial to enable him to make all necessary preparations for his defense; and in case of trial before a committee, he shall be allowed unlimited right of challenge of the members of the trial committee for cause, and the right of interrogation of committeemen to ascertain the cause; the presiding officer shall determine the sufficiency of the cause, and the accused shall also have the right of peremptory challenge of two in a committee of five, and in like ratio for any other number.

¶281. The preacher in charge shall preside at the trial, and decide all questions of law appertaining to or growing out of the case. He shall, at the commencement of the trial, appoint a secretary, who shall take down regular minutes of the evidence and proceedings, which minutes, when read and approved, shall be signed by the president and the secretary.

¶282. If, after sufficient notice, the accused evade trial by absenting himself, let the trial proceed as though he were present. Witnesses from without shall not be rejected. If witnesses can not be induced to attend the trial, then the preacher in charge shall appoint some discreet member of the church to take the written statements of the witnesses, as provided in ¶255.

QUES. 2. What shall be done in case of improper tempers, words or actions, or disobedience to the order and discipline of the church?

¶283. ANS. Let private reproof be given by a preacher or leader, and if there be an acknowledgment of the fault, and promise of amendment, the person may be borne with, otherwise the preacher must take with him two or three faithful friends, who shall labor to bring the offender to proper repentance; but if he will not hear them, and there be no sign of amendment, the offender must be dealt with as in case of immorality.

QUES. 3. What shall be done when a member disseminates doctrines which are contrary to our Articles of Religion?

¶284. ANS. If a member of our church endeavor to sow dissension in any of our societies by inveighing against either our doctrines or discipline, such person so offending shall be first reproved by the senior preacher of his circuit, and if he persist in such pernicious practices, he shall be dealt with as in case of immorality.

QUES. 4. What shall be done in case of disputes between members of the church?

¶285 ANS. 1. On any dispute between two or more members of our church concerning the payment of debts, or otherwise, which can not be settled by the parties concerned, the preacher in charge shall inquire into the circumstances of the case, and shall recommend to the contending parties a reference, consisting of one arbitrator chosen by the plaintiff, and another chosen by the defendant, which two arbitrators so chosen shall nominate a third—the three arbitrators being members of our church.

¶286. ANS. 2. But if one of the parties be dissatisfied with the judgment given, such party may apply to the Quarterly Conference for a second arbitration, and if the Quarterly Conference see sufficient reason, they shall grant a second arbitration, in which case each party shall choose two arbitrators, and the four arbitrators shall choose a fifth, the judgment of a majority of whom shall be final, and any person refusing to abide by such judgment shall be dealt with as in case of immorality.

¶287. ANS 3. And if any member of our church shall refuse, in cases of debt and other disputes, to refer the matter to arbitration, when recommended by him who has the charge of the circuit, or shall enter into a lawsuit with another member before these measures are taken, he shall be dealt with as in case of immorality, unless the case be of such a nature as to require and justify a process at law.

¶288 In all cases of suspension or expulsion the accused shall have the right of appeal to the ensuing Quarterly Conference; provided, that he signify to the pastor his intention to appeal, at the time of his condemnation, or at any time thereafter, when officially informed thereof.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF APPEALS.

SECTION I.

APPEAL OF A TRAVELING PREACHER.

¶289. When an appeal is made to the General Conference there shall be a committee appointed, consisting of one delegate from each Annual Conference, who, in the presence of a Bishop and one or more of the secretaries of the General Conference, shall have full power to try the case, and shall be the sole judges of the law and the facts, and their decision shall be final. And the said committee shall make a report to the General Conference in writing, and deliver up to the secretary the whole record of the case, with the decision rendered.

¶290 No member shall be appointed to serve on any appeal who was a member of the committee that tried the case.

¶291. The appellant shall either state personally, or by his representative (who shall be a member of the General Conference), the grounds of his appeal, and he shall be permitted to make his defense without interruption, after which the representatives of the Annual Conference, from whose decision the appeal is made, shall be permitted to respond in presence of the appellant, who shall have privilege of replying, which shall close the arguments on both sides. This done, the appellant and the representatives of the Annual Conference shall withdraw, and the committee shall decide. If either side have no representative, the committee shall appoint one.

¶292. In all cases it shall be the duty of the secretary of the Annual Conference to preserve the record and documents relating to the trial of members, which, in an appeal from the decision of an Annual Conference, shall be presented to the General Conference as evidence in the case.

¶293. No minister, after such form of trial and expulsion, shall be restored to the communion of the church without giving satisfactory evidence of repentance of the offense for which he was expelled, unless the Annual Conference shall become convinced that he was innocent, in which case the Conference may restore him to his previous standing.

SECTION II.

APPEAL OF A LOCAL PREACHER.

¶294. When an appeal of a local preacher is made, the president shall appoint a committee of not less than nine, nor more than thirteen, who shall have full power to try the case, and their decision shall be final.

¶295. No member of the Quarterly Conference that tried the case shall be appointed on this committee.

¶296. The records of the trial in the Quarterly Conference shall be laid before this committee, which records only shall be the evidence, and the said committee shall make a report to the Annual Conference in writing, and deliver up to the secretary the whole record of the case, with the decision rendered.

¶297. The appellant shall either state personally, or by his representative (who shall be a member of the Annual Conference), the grounds of his appeal, and he shall be permitted to make his defense without interruption, after which the representative of the Quarterly Conference, from whose decision the appeal is made, shall be permitted to respond in presence of the appellant, who shall have privilege of replying, which shall close the arguments on both sides. The appellant and the representative of the Quarterly Conference shall then withdraw, and the committee shall decide.

¶298. No local preacher, after such form of trial and expulsion, shall be restored to the communion of the church without giving satisfactory evidence of repentance of the offense for which he was expelled, unless the Quarterly Conference shall become convinced that he was innocent, in which case the Conference may restore him to his previous standing.

SECTION III.

APPEAL OF A MEMBER.

¶299. Any member suspended, or expelled, shall be allowed an appeal to the next Quarterly Conference. The appeal being made, the preacher in charge shall present the record of the trial to the Quarterly Conference, from which record the case shall finally be determined.

¶300. No member of the committee for trial shall vote on the appeal.

¶301. The appellant shall either state personally, or by his representative (who shall be a member of the church), the grounds of his appeal, and he shall be permitted to make his defense without interruption, after which the representatives of the society or committee from whose decision the appeal is made shall be permitted to respond in presence of the appellant, who shall have privilege of replying, which shall close the arguments on both sides. The appellant and the representatives of the church shall then withdraw, and the majority of the members of the Quarterly Conference present shall finally determine the case.

¶302. No member, after such form of trial and expulsion, shall be restored to the communion of the church without giving satisfactory evidence of repentance of the offense for which he was expelled, unless the Quarterly Conference shall become convinced that he was innocent, in which case he may be restored.

Woodville District Conference.

The Woodville District Conference convened here on April 25, Rev. P. A. Johnston presiding; I. D. Wall was elected secretary, and Richard Whitaker, assistant secretary.

All the preachers from the different pastorates were present except one who was sick. There was a large attendance of laymen.

All the business was conducted and finished smoothly and in a Christian spirit. The reports from the various charges showed progress along all lines as a whole, with bright prospects for better things in the near future. Able, instructive and eloquent papers upon the topics announced beforehand in the ADVOCATE were read by Bros. R. S. Gale, R. W. Tucker, C. A. Powell, H. W. Featherston and V. D. Skipper. All of the papers were thoroughly discussed. Some were, by resolution, ordered printed in the ADVOCATE. I suppose the brethren have forwarded you "the copy" by this time.

The Conference took strong ground upon the observance of the Sabbath; the report thereon written by Dr. Jos. Kebourne, of this place, you were, by the Conference, requested to publish.

The Conference petitioned unanimously against the Florida parishes being put with the Louisiana Conference.

The Annual Conference was petitioned to decrease the area of the presiding elders' districts, as extent thereof was the occasion often of overwork and physical collapse.

The Conference voted its presiding elder a vacation to recuperate in, and kindly insisted on giving him the means to defray expenses.

We had preaching twice each day to good congregations, the sermons being enjoyed by all.

Conference adjourned Saturday evening, but not before passing a vote of thanks to the people of Clinton and a resolution regretting the absence of Dr. Black, and re-pledging their fidelity to the ADVOCATE.

Pontchatoula, La., was chosen as the next place of meeting.

Delegates to Annual Conference: H. C. Newsom, I. D. Wall, J. M. Sessions and A. N. Brown; alternates, C. C. Miller and L. G. Gowers.

I believe I've mentioned everything except that I made the address of welcome.

Rose Tobacco Cure

A CHEAP, QUICK, PLEASANT and ABSOLUTE CURE for the Tobacco Habit in all forms. Ask your druggist or write to ROSE DRUG CO., 21st St., Birmingham, Ala.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Don't miss this opportunity.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

TO PRESERVE QUINCES WHITE.—Take the fairest you can get; coddle them tender, core with a penknife, pare smooth and weigh them; use equal weight of quinces and refined sugar dipped in water or pippin jelly; boil and skim the syrup, boil quinces quickly and cover with their own jelly.—Mrs. Russell Wetmore.

CREAM OF RICE SOUP.—Two quarts of chicken broth, one teacupful of rice, one quart of cream, one small onion, one stalk of celery, one tablespoonful of salt, one-third teaspoonful of pepper. Add the rice, onion and celery to the broth, cook slowly two hours, run through a sieve, add cream and seasoning, let come to a boil, and serve hot.

GREEN TOMATO CATSUP.—Pick a bushel of tomatoes when quite green; cut out the stems, boil soft, rub through a sieve, place the pulp in a vessel on the fire and season highly with red pepper; of cloves, allspice and mace, each half an ounce; salt to the taste. To this add half a gallon of good vinegar and boil it for half an hour. If liked, add four onions chopped fine. This catsup will keep both Summer and Winter.

GRAHAM PUDDING.—Two cupfuls of graham flour, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of milk, a pinch of salt, and half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a tablespoonful of warm water. Mix and add a good cupful of raisins. Boil or steam for three hours. For the sauce, cream half a cupful of butter with a cupful of powdered sugar; add by degrees, two tablespoonfuls of lemon syrup and four of cream, stirring it over boiling water until light and foamy.

RICE MUFFINS.—One pint of milk, one quart of flour, one pint of boiled rice, three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one of soda, two of cream of tartar. Mix the sugar, salt, soda and cream of tartar with the flour and rub through a sieve. Beat the eggs and add to the milk. Stir gradually into the flour. When it makes a smooth, light paste, add the rice and beat thoroughly. Bake thirty-five minutes in buttered pans. This quantity will make three dozen muffins.—New York Ledger.

Oysters in brown sauce (au beurre noir) make an appetizing dish, and a pleasant change from the usual methods. Put a generous tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and let it get a golden brown, but be careful not to let it burn. Put aside to cool a little, and beat one teaspoonful of vinegar in a cup. Drain the oysters from their liquor, put them in a stewpan with pepper and salt, cover tightly and set over the fire, tossing them about once or twice so they may get thoroughly and evenly heated. They must not boil, however. As soon as the oysters are well steamed, drain, put in a hot dish, and pour over them the brown butter and vinegar, which have been made very hot together.

HYGIENE.

The Cumulative Effect of Poisons.

BY CHAS. H. SHEPARD, M. D.

The highest medical authorities deny that alcohol is in any sense a food, but on the contrary claim that it is a ptomaine or transition product, from the process of putrefaction, and a poison in all the actions which its presence in the system provokes. It does not undergo oxydization, and therefore never assists in building up tissue in any form. The moderate use of alcohol, as well as of other poisons, such as tobacco, coffee, etc, is often looked upon as harmless, because there is not only no apparent evidence of injury, but a temporary sensation of satisfaction. That this is a fallacious view of the case may readily be shown by an inquiry into the cumulative action of alcohol, as well as of other poisons, for the vital action is the same with all, varying only in location and degree.

The relation of alcohol to crime is apparent in a large majority of cases; in some of which it has been taken to drown the natural repugnance that would otherwise have prevented the commission of the crime. This result follows from the weakening of the inhibitive power by the drug. Again, alcoholic indulgence interferes to a large extent with the productive capacity of the laborer by diminishing his vital power, and making him more unfit for the struggle of life, and at the same time encourages extravagant habits when he most needs to economize. By some it is claimed that in the liberal use of beer considerable nutritive matter is introduced into the system, but even if true, the price paid for nutrition in that form is many times greater than its cost when taken in the form of daily food. Such nutriment is in excess of the needs of the system, and interferes with the normal action of digestion, thus tending to irritate, inflame, and derange the vital organs. For this reason alcoholic drink may be placed at the head of the list of causes of disease.

There is a well-known cumulative effect brought about by the use of nerve irritants, whether it be in the various forms of alcohol, opium, tobacco, coffee, or other poisons. For example, a workman exposed to the dangerous influence of lead poison, absorbs daily only a very inappreciable quantity, and the effect of the small doses is scarcely apparent, but after a long period of exposure to its influences he suddenly develops grave symptoms of lead poisoning, a colic, a paralysis of the hands, or an epileptic stroke. This shows that the vital resistance has at last broken down under the accumulated load. It is the nervous tissue that has principally suffered, though every organ and tissue of the body partakes of the suffering. It is more than probable that this result comes from the chemical action inaugurating merely imperceptible changes in the nervous tissue, which increase gradually and finally pass into a permanently diseased condition.

A most positive evidence of the direct action of a poison in producing primary cell death is afforded by the action of alcohol on the liver, producing liver cirrhosis. Again its action is shown in disease of the heart and kidneys, which is most frequently brought about by a free use of beer. The extra labor imposed on the kidneys by this excess of fluid, renders them especially susceptible to the injurious effect of the alcohol that is in the beer.

The large number of cases of inflammation of the mucous membrane, including the stomach and bowels, that come directly from alcohol poisoning, are important as bearing directly upon alimentation. But alcohol exerts its most pernicious influence upon the vital organs by being taken into the circulation and thus brought into direct contact with the living tissue of the different organs of the body, and destroying the reactive power by its injurious action upon the cells.

When alcoholic drinks are taken with food, or the seductive cigar is smoked immediately after the meal, the amount of alimentation is liable to be excessive, because the presence of alcohol or nicotine lessens the inhibitive power by paralyzing the terminal nerves of sensation in the stomach, thereby preventing the discomfort that naturally follows from an over full meal. Nature's safeguard is destroyed, the excess passed on to other organs, producing either gout, diabetes, or fatty degeneration of the heart, the particular form of the disease depending much upon the personal idiosyncrasy of the victim. Partially-digested food passing from the stomach into the intestines becomes subject to abnormal fermentations, and produces poisons which are absorbed into the system, the cumulative effect of which is frequently shown in a disregard as well as in various skin eruptions, and dyspeptic conditions. Even fatal results sometimes follow from partaking of indigestible food.

Thus it is that the moderate use of any poison does not show its full effect till it has reached the cumulative stage of development. Many apparent contradictions are observed, owing to the varying capacity of the individual to resist morbific influences, but the fact remains that the moderate users of any poison are more liable to grave results from any accident or passing epidemic. This is only too apparent in all forms of alcoholic poisoning.

The sudden dropping out from active life of men who were what is termed "good-livers," is thus explained, and possibly may serve as a warning. Mankind will eventually learn that safety lies not so much in skillful doctors, or in some wonderful "new remedy," as in daily obedience to the laws of health. A small amount of prevention is of more worth than all the power of cure.—Journal of Hygiene.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Strawberries.

Many have been the inquiries how to pick and prepare strawberries for market. Each picker has a hand-carrier which holds four quart cups. Some allow as many as six. This, however, is not best, especially in hot weather, the picker being required to hold his berries too long before delivery at the packing-shed, the sun having in such cases the effect of softening the berries. As soon as the four quarts are filled, the picker is required to deliver his berries at the stand or shed. It is not best on delivery to put them immediately in the crates. They should be set on the stand open and allowed to cool. This is especially necessary when the berries are to be shipped a great distance. The cooler they are the longer distance will they ship. Each stem of the berries is caught, being careful not to handle the berry, between the thumb and forefinger and pinched or broken off about a half inch long and the berry dropped in the quart cup. This work is continued until the quarts are filled. One thing especially should be observed: to require all pickers to exclude all defective and bad berries. One rotten berry will destroy others, and the work of decay goes on until the whole quart is gone.

Gathering strawberries properly to ship is one of the most difficult tasks connected with the business; the pickers usually being so treacherous, they will not handle the fruit carefully. We have often thought could our berries be picked for wages or day hands instead of by the quart, this defective method of handling could be largely obviated. This, however, we have never found practicable, the hands many of them being so small, and the time of picking being short.

The question may be asked at what stage or degree of ripeness should they be gathered for shipment. This depends upon the distance to be shipped. The greater the distance to be carried, the greener the fruit; the less the distance, the riper.

Again the kind of car has something to do with the shipments. If in open or ventilated cars, the fruit should be greener than if shipped in iced cars or refrigerators.

As the berry ripens there are shades of difference in color. On beginning to ripen, one side of the berry assumes a bluish color, on the other side it is green. Its next stage is scarlet on the side where the blue was, and where the green was it is white. This is the best stage of ripeness to ship. When scarlet and white the berry will continue to ripen to maturity; when blue and green, the fruit will shrivel. After the fruit ripens thoroughly throughout, it assumes a dark purple. In this condition it is not suitable to ship except short distances or by refrigerators. The foregoing suggestions on the strawberry certainly are sufficient for all practical minds; sufficient, at least, to give a beginner great help in engaging in the business.

Cotton after Oats.

1. I have a piece of sandy gray land, clay near the top, that I wish to plant in cotton, that is now in oats. It is capable of making 1 200 or 1,500 pounds of seed cotton, fertilizing at the rate of 200 pounds ammoniated guano per acre. Tell me how much guano, how to prepare and apply the same, and how best to procure a stand at this season of the year. I wish to make one bale per acre this year.

2. Also how to destroy maypop vines.—S. B. M., Edgefield, S. C.

Answer.—1. After harvesting the oats, and when good season in the ground, lay off and bed up 8½ feet apart. Plow out finishing furrow, and distribute the fertilizer in the same at rate of 200 to 500 pounds per acre. The latter amount ought to insure a bale per acre on such land. List on the fertilizer with two furrows, open list with scraper and sow seed by hand or with machine, and cover with forked plow two or three inches. In four or five days knock off with a board or harrow.

2. We know of no specific for destroying maypops. Persistent pasturing during the season of growth will destroy them.

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending and stating that she also has been cured." MRS. ANNA SUTHERLAND, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Polished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

At the Louisiana State Normal.

An invitation to preach the commencement sermon at the Louisiana State Normal College gave us an opportunity recently to visit that educational center. We left the Crescent City about eight o'clock on Saturday morning, May 26, via the T. and P. railroad, and reached Natchitoches, two hundred and fifty miles distant, at seven P. M. At Cypress, the junction of the Natchitoches railroad with the T. and P., we were met by the Methodist Bishop of Natchitoches, Rev. N. E. Joyner. We were domiciled during our stay in Natchitoches in the hospitable home of Col. T. D. Boyd, the president of the college, who, together with his estimable wife, contributed much to the pleasure of our visit. Anticipating a larger crowd than any auditorium in the city could hold, the college authorities had arranged for the commencement sermon to be preached in the open air in a grove contiguous to the college. Ample seating arrangements were provided, and awnings were stretched wherever needed. Thus a most admirable auditorium was improvised. The college choir furnished excellent music. There was good order and close attention from beginning to end—an unusual thing for an out-door audience. At night we had the pleasnre of hearing an excellent sermon from Bro. Joyner.

The Louisiana State Normal is in a flonrishing condition. The enrollment for the session is one hundred and ninety-seven. A number of pupils bave been turned away during the session for want of room in the boarding department. It is hoped that the present Legislature will make a liberal appropriation for additional buildings. This institution has a brilliant future before it. It has a hundred acres of land. It is located near the center of the State in a healthful region. The health record of the college during the present session can hardly be surpassed anywhere. It has a fine faculty, and is doing admirable work in the way of training professional teachers.

Pressing engagements at home prevented us from remaining through the commencement exercises.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of August for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

Federation.

We are not a recent convert to the policy of federation. The first speech we ever made in a General Conference was made on this subject at Richmond in 1886. Our utterances then are expressive of our views to-day. Time has only confirmed us in the faith. At the late General Conference we had the honor to present (if we mistake not) the first paper that was presented in favor of such a policy. As a member of the special Committee of Fifteen appointed to consider the matter, we voted to adopt the report which will be found in our columns this week, albeit we preferred something a little broader in its scope. We take very little stock in that kind of fraternity which expends itself in a gushing speech once in four years; but that kind of fraternity which seeks to destroy everything like selfish rivalry between sister churches we favor with all our heart, soul, mind and strength.

Since the late war there has been a vast waste of resources on the part of American Episcopal Methodism. The M. E. Church has spent many thousands of dollars in an attempt to maintain churches in regions where the M. E. Church, South, could have done the work at much less expense, and with much larger results. If some one should charge that the M. E. Church, South has imitated the example of her elder sister, we are not going to deny the statement.

Now, that the General Conference has expressed itself as in favor of federation, and appointed a commission to confer with the M. E. Church on the subject, we hail this as the harbinger of a new era in Episcopal Methodism.

We believe the day is not far distant when the folly of setting up altar against altar will cease forever so far as Episcopal Methodism is concerned. God speed the day!

Federation.

Your committee has had before it various papers bearing on the subject of Methodist federation, and begs leave to submit the following report:

Whereas, the Second Ecumenical Methodist Conference, assembled in Washington City, in October, 1891, passed the following resolution:

1. That the Conference recognizes, with gratitude to God, the growing desire for a closer union among the Evangelical Churches of Christendom, and especially hails with devout thankfulness the extension of that desire among the various Methodist Churches.

2. The Conference can not doubt that concerted action among the different Methodist bodies upon many questions would be greatly to the advantage of the kingdom of God. The Conference would suggest that such concerted action might be possible and useful in the following great provinces of the Methodist world, namely: (A) Great Britain and Ireland, including affiliated Conferences and missions; (b) the United States, including its missions and Mission Conferences; (c) Australia, with Polynesia and its other missions; (d) Canada, with its missions.

3. This Conference, therefore, respectfully requests the churches represented in this Conference to consider whether such concerted action be possible, and if so, by what means and in what way; and directs the secretaries to forward a copy of this resolution to the senior Bishop or president of every Conference represented here; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in session, that while we do not in the least recognize the Ecumenical Conference as having any legislative power, the Bishops be requested to appoint a Commission on Federation, consisting of three Bishops, three ministers and three laymen, and that the secretary be instructed to notify the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of this action, and to request it to appoint a similar commission.

Resolved, secondly, That this commission shall have power to enter into negotiations with said similar commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church, if one shall be appointed, and with similar commissions from other Methodist bodies, with a view to abating hurtful competitions and the waste of men and money in home and foreign fields.

Resolved, thirdly, That any arrangements which such commission may make shall be reported to the next General Conference for adoption, alteration or rejection.

A. G. HANKINS, Chairman.

L. E. SHUMATE, Sec.

The Veto.

Bishop Keener—I have a paper to present to you from the College of Bishops. It is as follows:

To the General Conference of 1894:

Dear Brethren—The College of Bishops in session have duly considered the action of the General Conference on Saturday, the nineteenth of May, in adopting the revised form of Chapter vii, entitled "Administration of Discipline," as reported by the special Committee of Seven, and would respectfully interpose their veto to the said action, in paragraph 260, as violative of the constitutional provisions of the plan of lay representation, adopted in 1866 by the General Conference held in New Orleans, by a two-thirds' vote, and subsequently by the three-fourths' vote of all the members of the several Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the same year.

This paragraph 260, adopted on Saturday, reads as follows:

"Every case to be tried shall be referred to a committee of not less than nine nor more than thirteen, who shall be elected by lot from the members of the Conference, who in the presence of a Bishop or a chairman whom the president of the Conference shall appoint, and one or more of the secretaries, shall have power to try the case, and their decision shall be final save to the right of appeal."

In the adoption of the plan by which laymen were introduced into the General and the Annual Conferences in 1866, the right of ministers, who were also members of the Conferences, to be tried by ministers only, as heretofore, was specially guarded and reserved in the following words and action (See Journal of General Conference of 1866), to-wit: "The committee charged with the duty of bringing in a plan for effecting lay representation in the Annual and General Conferences, submit the following: In the Annual Conference, after the word service (page 48 of Discipline) insert 'And four lay representatives, one of whom may be a local preacher, from each presiding elder's district, to be chosen annually by the district stewards, or in such other manner as the Annual Conferences may direct, who shall participate in all the business of the Conference, except such as involves ministerial character and relations, provided that no one shall be a representative who is not twenty-five years of age, and who has not been for six years next, preceding his election, a member of the church.'"

It will be seen that this right, guarded and reserved by the ministry as to the ministerial character and relations, was in the body of the plan of lay representation, which was submitted and adopted upon the concurrent recommendation of three-fourths of all the members of the several Annual Conferences present and voting, and of a majority of two-thirds of the General Conference, and became thereby a constitutional provision which can not be invaded or changed by any mere rule, resolution or statutory action of a General Conference.

This violation of a constitutional provision is now formulated and presented by the action of the General Conference on Saturday, May nineteenth, as an article of the Discipline (paragraph 290, report of committee), which proposes that a committee of trial shall be taken indiscriminately by lot from a body composed of laymen and ministers to try both the character and relations of ministers only.

This rule and regulation as set forth in the said chapter vii, and paragraph 2, and as adopted by this General Conference is, in the opinion of the College of Bishops, unconstitutional, and can only become law by taking the course prescribed for altering a restrictive rule as set forth in paragraph 43 of the Discipline of 1890.

(Signed) J. C. KEENER, Pres.

Memphis, Tenn., May 21, 1894.

Temperance Report No. 5.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is the only paper in Southern Methodism that has published report No. 5 of the Temperance Committee correctly. In every paper we have seen the following mistakes occur: "The church can not cease her divine antagonism" is rendered "can not erase," etc. "Prohibitory legislation" is changed to "prohibition legislation." "While waging war against a business" is rendered "while waging war against a measure." "Concerning the evils of even the most moderate use" is made almost senseless by substituting "and" for "even." So much for an editor's leaving his typewriter at home.

Adopted by the General Conference.

The Committee on Episcopacy beg leave to report:

They have under consideration the character and official administration of John C. Keener, Alpheus W. Wilson, John C. Granbery, Robert K. Hargrove, William W. Duncan, Charles B. Galloway, Eugene R. Hendrix, Joseph S. Key, Atticus G. Haygood and Oscar P. Fitzgerald, and the same has been approved.

In the case of Bishop Robert K. Hargrove the committee adopted the following papers, to-wit:

1. Whereas, Only three of the allegations against Bishop Hargrove in the bill of complaints now before us are such as, if sustained, affect his moral character, to-wit: Under the head of the ninth error he is virtually accused of falsehood; and under the head of the fifteenth error of procuring, consenting to or instigating changes in the Tennessee Conference Journal; and under the fourteenth error he is accused of being influenced by improper motives in stationing the preachers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that neither of these allegations has been supported by evidence, but that, on the contrary, they have been thoroughly and completely explained by Bishop Hargrove.

Whereas, The remaining complaints against Bishop Hargrove are such as affect simply his official administration, and if sustained, would furnish no grounds for proceedings against him in the absense of proof of corrupt or improper motive; and

Whereas, The questions of law in the case, as they are set out in the official records, except those appealed to and decided by the College of Bishops, are now under review in a church court of final resort; and

Whereas, There is no evidence before this committee of corrupt or improper motive in the decisions and rulings complained of; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that Bishop Hargrove has been guilty of no intentional wrong whatever in the matters complained of and, leaving the purely legal aspects of the case to be determined by Committee on Appeals, before which they are now pending, not presuming to pass upon them, we respectfully recommend that his character pass.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT NO. 1.

Your committee has carefully considered a paper signed by R. M. Powers and others, and recommend concurrence. The paper is as follows:

Amend the Discipline, chapter iii, section 2, on page 77, by adding the following after paragraph 106:

Question 4. Shall a Bishop have power to employ as a supply a preacher who has been rejected, discontinued, or located at the previous session of any Annual Conference?

Answer 1. He shall not employ any preacher who has been rejected as an applicant, or who has been discontinued or located, except at his own request, unless the Conference shall, at the time of such rejection, discontinuance, or location, give such liberty.

Also amend the Discipline, chapter iii, section 3, on page 81, so it shall read as follows:

Question 2. Shall the presiding elder have power to employ a preacher who has been rejected, discontinued, or located at the previous session of any Annual Conference?

Answer. He shall not employ any preacher who has been rejected as an applicant, or who has been discontinued or located, except at his own request, unless the Conference shall, at the time of such rejection, discontinnance, or location, give such liberty.

C. W. CARTER, Chair'n.
W. D. KIRKLAND, Sec.

REPORT NO. 4.

1. The question of Sabbath observance is one of prime importance in the church to-day. The forces of evil, in greater numbers and under better discipline, are making their fiercest assault upon the Christian Sabbath. The church can not afford to sit still while these attacks are being made. Nor can she afford to sanction a use of the Sabbath day which will give "occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme." While we do not contend for a Pharisaic observance of the Sabbath, we must deprecate and deplore a too lax observance. The extreme is as bad as the other. We are sure that all secular business should cease on that day, and as much of the business of the church as partakes of the nature of secular business, we are of the opinion that such church work should not be done on the Sabbath, if it can possibly be avoided.

We offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That we deem it inexpedient for our Conferences to hold business sessions or to have appointments read and adjourn on the Sabbath day, except in cases of grave necessity.

The subject of hasty adjournment of Conferences having been brought to the notice of your committee, we offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That we insist that no pressure from any quarter shall be allowed to infringe the right of an Annual Conference to sit at least a week.

C. W. CARTER, Chair'n.
W. D. KIRKLAND, Sec.

It is delightful to think that out of the miseries of life, so many of which afflict us, there shall come some of the highest of our enjoyments. The pains shall be fruitful ones, "working out" an unspeakable blessedness.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2 25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to June, '95.

Advertising Rates.

Two insertions, $1 50 per inch.

Meridian Revival.

The revival fires are burning all over the city. We have just closed a great meeting at Central, and now pushing the work at West End under our tent. The meeting at Central was one of the best (so the old members say) that has been held in the church for years. The meeting at West End is simply wonderful. About seventy-five were up last night (at the altar) for prayer, and many professed Christ as their Savior.

We have found more consecrated laymen in Meridian than any town we have visited. It is worth any preacher's time to come to Meridian just to have some of these godly men pray with him and for him. We only wish we had more of these godly men and women everywhere.

Dr. Carradine did a great work for Meridian Methodism during his stay here last Fall. We see a great many good results from his meeting.

We want to say that the Methodist layman and ministers of Meridian, as a whole, are in perfect accord and doing a most wonderful work for the church. You need have no fears about the Methodism of Meridian as long as we have such pastors as Woodward, Hopper, Lewis and Scarborough in the lead. These are holy, consecrated men.

We do not think there have been less than two hundred conversions and reclamations in the meetings so far, and about seventy five accessions to the different churches; and we believe there will be hundreds of conversions during the next few days. Pray for us.

Meridian is our important point in this part of the Methodist vineyard. More later. W. M. MCINTOSH.

Meridian, Miss., May 10 1894.

NOTES.

The commencement sermon of Centenary College will be preached by Bishop J. C. Keener.

***

The commencement sermon of Wall & Mooney's School will be preached by Rev. Geo. Sweeney. Dr. Baskerville, of Vanderbilt, will deliver the literary address.

***

The commencement sermon of Evergreen College will be preached by Rev. C. M. Lyons, of the Louisiana Conference. The literary address will be delivered by Hon. A. B. Irion. There will be a sermon on Sunday night by Rev. J. R. Cason.

***

Newspaperdom in these parts is a little previous in announcing Rev. L. H. Mounger as president of Whitworth College. The presidency has been tendered to him, but he has not accepted, and so far as our information goes there is no assurance that he will accept. He seems to prefer the office of sub-bishop to that of college president.

***

There were two gavel presentations during the General Conference. In the early part of the session Dr. J. B. Brooks, of North Carolina, in an elaborated speech, presented a gavel to Bishop Galloway. On the closing evening a gavel was presented to Bishop Keener by J. R. Pepper, as representative of First Church, in which the Conference was held. In each case a felicitous response was made.

***

Rev. J. A. Parker, Lake Charles, La., May 22: "I reached home just 25 hours from Memphis. All are well, and, so far as I now see, the Lord's business did not suffer by the absence of its agent. The brethren—Van Valkenburgh, of Leesburg, and Dr. Wilkinson, of the M. E. Church, together with Bro. Wilson, of Lake Arthur—wrought well ad interim. They have my thanks and the thanks of the church here. All seemed pleased with the results of the General Conference."

***

THE VETO.—There was a sensation in the Sanhedrim when the Bishops came upon the arena with the veto. So far as our information goes, this is the first instance of the exercise of this episcopal prerogative in the annals of our church. The necessity for the veto could have been obviated by the use of a single word. Had the report of the committee said "clerical members" instead of "members" of the Conference there would have been no veto. We give the veto message in full.

Notice.

To the Auxiliaries of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society—

Dear Sisters: There is a small balance yet due on our McNamar Pledge Fund. If any of the auxiliaries have in their treasury any amount designed for this purpose, however small it may be, let it be forwarded at once to Miss Mary Andrews, Vicksburg, Miss.

Sister, if you have as yet done nothing, or perhaps not as much as as you are able to do for this cause, do not delay, but come to the full measure of your ability at once. Some auxiliaries that are numerically weak have already contributed largely to this cause. This is commendable. Let others profit by their example.

The time for our annual meeting draws near. Let us not go to the meeting with this pledge unredeemed.

Hoping this reminder will meet with a prompt response, I am,

Yours faithfully,

ADDIE V. MARSHALL.

Woman's Suffrage.

Incorrect reports having been published concerning the suffrage discussion in the Convention of the Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union, held in Canton, May 5 8 I wish to make a brief statement of what occurred.

The resolution which provoked the discussion was introduced by the opponents of woman's suffrage, and was as follows: "That we do not adopt woman's suffrage as a plan of work or as an expression of sentiment on the part of the Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

A majority of those in attendance were favorable to woman's ballot, but there was no disposition to force their views on the minority, and the convention, by resolution, declined to take any action on the subject. This is not the first time that those opposed to suffrage have attempted to force the question into a convention, and with a similar result.

Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman was not in any way responsible for the discussion, and her name should not have appeared in the reports.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

Change of Life.

A TRYING ORDEAL IN WOMAN'S LIFE MADE EASY.

Pe-ru-na is the favorite remedy during Change of Life, as it not only palliates the disagreeable symptoms during the trying ordeal, but guards the system from the many chronic ailments which are liable to set in. Pe-ru-na promptly relieves the nervousness, sleeplessness, throbbing, hemorrhage, rush of blood to the head, palpitation, indigestion, painful menstruation, leucorrhœa and faint spells, from which most of those patients suffer. It acts as a preventive against dropsy, heart disease, enlargement of the liver, and kidney diseases, which are so frequently acquired at this time.

Mrs. Diley A. Mason, of White Wright, Texas, says in a letter to Dr. Hartman: "I was a sufferer from the Change of Life. I thought I had everything. I thought I had heart trouble. I got six bottles of Pe-ru-na and one of Man-a-lin and took them. I am now sound and well. I improved immediately on taking Pe-ru-na, and am now as well as ever in my life."

Deafness Can Not Be Cured
by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CHEERFUL GIVING.

(II. Cor. ix, 1-7; Mark xii, 41 44.)

1. The obligation of supporting God's work is self-evident. The apostle deemed it "superfluous" to argue the subject. Aid.

(1) The poor saints in your own congregation.

(2) The home mission.

(3) The saints in foreign fields.

2. It is not mercenary to engender emulation in beneficence. The liberality of the Corinthians was a means to "provoke" the Macedonians to practise that same virtue.

(1) In many covetousness is so deeply imbedded that only the stimulating example of others will induce them to contribute.

(2) The literal narration of the Lord's allusion to the two mites of that "certain poor widow" has brought untold millions to the Lord's treasury.

3. Contributing largely and regularly to the Lord's cause should be made a matter of principle. "As he purposeth in his heart."

(1) We should give at least one-tenth of our income. Distribute the same wisely among the various necessitous objects.

(2) Accompany your gifts with intercessory prayer. Give cheerfully—"not grudgingly, or of necessity."

4. The liberal shall reap bountifully.

(1) Will he at ease during divine service, notwithstanding the "pulpit's" denunciation of covetousness.

(2) When, perchance, overtaken by misfortune, conscience will not asseverate that we now reap sparingly because of previous miserly sowing.

(3) Have the assurance of God's approval. "God loveth a cheerful giver."

(4) Will face death with as much composure as did Mary Magdalene, of whom the Lord declared: "She hath done what she could."

(5) The last judgment takes liberality and covetousness into account. Think of the Lord's portraiture of that judgment, Matt. xxv: "I was a hungred," etc.

What Ails You?

If you have sudden darting pains in the joints or muscles, and it recurs every time you get cold, and appears in new places without leaving any of old ones, the best thing to do this is to send five dollars to the Drummond Medicine Co., 43 Maiden Lane, New York, for a month's treatment of Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism. They will send you two large bottles of their remedy by return express. If you have the above symptoms, you have the Rheumatism, and should begin at once with the known cure. HOME CIRCLE.

SHUTTING UP HER FOLD.

BY SUSAN TEALL PERRY.

The fire burns dimly on the hearth,
The light is turned down low,
And wintry winds through bare old trees
In fitful gusts go blow.
The mother pulls the curtains down
To keep away the cold;
Tucks tightly in the children's bed—
She's shutting up her fold.

She covers up the little hand,
Thrown o'er the coverlet;
She wipes the place on baby's cheek
Which one stray tear had wet;
Kisses the little ones who sleep,
And smooths the hair of gold,
Then kneels and "prays the Lord to keep"—
She's shutting up her fold.

O, little ones, fenced around secure
With mother's love and care,
What looks of peace and trust and joy
Your sleeping faces wear!
Outside to-night some children, who
Are tall and large and old,
Are wishing they could be once more
Sheltered in mother's fold.

—Home Maker.

"Break Not the Alabaster Box Too Late."

"Father!" called a sweet voice, "may I come in and see you just a short while-to-night?"

"What do you wish, Charlie?" replied a stern-faced man, viewing the little intruder with piercing eyes over a pair of gold-rimmed glasses.

"Nothing very important, father, only I—I just wanted to talk about—er—"

"Well, what, child? Go on and say what you wish. I am always busy at this hour, which you know, and I am surprised and annoyed at your interruption."

"Yes, I know, father, but you are always engaged during the day, so I supposed you would not object very much to my coming in after tea, and telling you a little about school and how I am doing."

"Well, then begin, my child, and get through, as all of these papers you see here," pointing to a large heap upon the table before him, "are to be read and noted ere bed time to-night."

"Very well, father, I will hurry." And drawing a chair up to the table, he continued: "You remember some time ago our teacher offered a handsome gold medal to the boy who stood highest in his class for the year. So far I have kept ahead, and now there is just one month longer. Would you be just a little bit glad, father, if I won the medal?"

"Oh, child, you had better wait and see how it terminates. There is a possibility of your not meriting it, though you are ahead at present. Never feel sure of anything until you have secured it."

"Yes; but, father, I thought I might work for it, and then—then I wanted to see if you would like for me to have it."

"Well, such things are all very well in their place, I suppose, though I don't especially approve them; for there are generally ill feelings connected with them. But run along now. Father is busy, and we will have plenty of time to talk over this matter at some future time."

At these words, Charlie arose and, looking back wistfully at his father, left the room.

Poor little motherless boy! Had his father only one time spoken a word of encouragement, had he been a little willing to have listened, what a different heart would little Charlie have carried out of that room that night. Charlie was a quiet, good child. With his deep brown eyes and golden hair, he was like some pure white rose ere the chilling winds of sin had fallen upon him, blighting and blackening his beauty. His mother having died when he was only an infant, his entire childhood was left to the care of a most valuable nurse, while his father, wholly unacquainted with the wants and requirements of children, allowed her so much a month to cover all his expenses and wishes.

Col. Athington, being a quiet, reserved man, never demonstrated his feelings fully upon any subject. Honorable, just, and learned, his opinions were reverenced by all when he chose to express them. Being very much away from his child, first on business, then recreative journeys, he had permitted the little one to reach the age of ten and know comparatively nothing about him. However, he always kept himself informed in regard to Charlie's health and welfare, allowing his every whim and wish to be gratified. Yet he kept the alabaster box of precious demonstrations, sympathy, praise, and counsel tightly locked, when the opening thereof would have made happier one little life which was worth so much to him.

One day, after the twilight had fallen, Charlie closed his books for that day's study, and, turning to his nurse, remarked:

"Auntie," for he always called her so, "do you suppose papa would feel glad if I should win the prize offered at school?"

"I don't know, dear. He ought to, I should think."

"Don't you think he would love and praise me just a very little, when he found out how hard I had tried?"

"Well, Charlie, you know that is not your father's way. Of course, he loves you, but he never compliments anything, while he always lets us know what displeases him."

"Oh, Auntie, it would have been so different had mama lived. If he would only take me in his arms, and tell me he loves me, and it is right in me to try, or kiss me, or stroke my hair, or any of these little things, it would make me so happy and glad. You and father are all I have to love, and I—I," but here the little heart gave way, and the brown eyes, altogether too large and bright of late, filled with tears that came from a heart starving for affection from the objects of its love.

The next few weeks passed rapidly away. Charlie still studied on, day and night, striving to the utmost of his strength to win that which he felt sure would bring some demonstration from his father. He had grown thinner and paler of late, and his eyes had that haunted look that so often comes with overwork and exhaustion.

It was the last day of June. The college chapel was packed with visitors. The speaking was ended, and last came the awarding of medals.

Col. Athington had been called away on very urgent business, a day or so previous to this occasion, and, much to Charlie's grief, had not yet returned. How long, how eagerly had the child looked for him, yet he knew his father would remain till the last vestige of business was transacted. He did not know his father had, in his usual quiet way, gone to the teacher and ascertained the fact of who would get the prize. He did not hear the words of love and praise he had heaped upon his boy. He only remembered a hurried "Good-by," a light kiss upon his cheek, then his father was gone and the little fellow left behind in disappointment. The alabaster box with its precious ointment was still unbroken.

All eyes were turned, this beautiful, bright June day, upon a frail, delicate lad, as his name, Charlie H. Athington, was called out clearly and distinctly. He received the medal and bowed in a manly way, but upon returning to his seat, he began to grow dizzy; the crowd, the heat, the close air, together with the strain his system had undergone, proved too much, and he sank fainting to the floor.

Some few days after that, a small white casket was being borne along the streets. A long line of devoted playmates, teachers and friends followed, with aching hearts, the last remains of the little child to its final resting-place. Each heart in that procession was heavy with grief, but yonder, oh, yonder, close to the casket, goes one whose very heart-strings seemed snapped asunder. That father, with bowed head, with a look of despair stamped upon his face, with his rigid lips mute and speechless, was racked with a pain which beggars all human discription. He could bear the blow, the agony, the parting if he could only look back upon a different past. The unspoken words of love, the sympathy, the caresses, the hours of companionship he could have given him were forever withheld now. Too late, alas, too late! was the alabaster box broken and its priceless contents emptied now upon only a memory of his child.

He had loved his child, but, like many a man, he had withheld so much of the sweetness of his love from him. Such a lesson! Who of us has not kept closed the alabaster box, and robbed some life of some sweetness, of some comfort that a kind word, a loving smile, a silent tear could have given. So ready are we, after death has borne away some worthy person, to then come forward, and, opening our box of treasures, pour forth its contents of praises, its blessings, tears, sympathy, memorial services and commendations upon the life that is ended and done. No good can this do the dead. We need sympathy, love, blessings, tears, this side of the grave, not when it is too late. Open wide the little alabaster box ere it is too late, while the opportunity is still yours. Open it wide, ere that sweet child, ere the companion at your side, ere the aged parent, with her silver hair, be gone, and let its ointment fall into their lives, drying weeping eyes, binding broken hearts, saving dying souls, and sweetening all that endless eternity to come.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Noting all so staid and wise,
Can you tell me, do you know,
How the rosy apples grow?

"First a tiny swelling bud,
Then a blossom fair and good,
Then the apple green and small,
Growing, ripening till it's tall."

Truly thou hast answered well,
Think you that you now can tell
How the evil habits grow
With their train of sin and woe?

First the tiny buds of wrong,
Fast unfolding, growing strong,
Then the habits in full sway,
Bringing sorrow day by day.

Little children, be in time,
Let not evils reach their prime;
Would you save yourself from woe,
Crush the buds before they grow.

—"Little Stories for Little People."

Silent Husbands.

Wives often regret that their husbands do not talk to them. This is not the place to discuss the shortcomings of a man; but sometimes, when we have listened to the fault-findings, the garrulous repetitions, frivolous details, the childish exactions of sympathy and attention with which some women bore their husbands when they are overburdened and anxious with care and work, we have not wondered that some men grow taciturn in their homes. But it is a great loss if a man is silent among his wife and children. The husband and wife live so much of the time in a different world that a free intercourse can be a great help and pleasure to each of them. You will not be likely to make a man talk by telling him that he ought to talk, or scolding him because he does not do so. Make it a pleasure for him to talk with you. Exercise good sense, good temper and tact in drawing him out on topics of interest to himself. Be patient under his moods of silence. Be deserving the companionship of a sensible man. Avoid talking of persons or insignificant details, concerning yourself or your work. Have something interesting or valuable to say. The story of your child's prattle may be full of interest. The number of pies you have made or the rooms you have swept may not be worth repeating. Cultivate the graces of character, speech and tones of voice, and you may find that the man who was glad to escape from the loquacious, complaining, exacting woman goes reluctantly from her who knows when to talk and when to be silent, "who openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in whose tongue is the law of kindness."—Guardian.

The Sensible Woman.

A sensible woman begins early in life to show her prevailing characteristics. As a child she can be reasoned into obedience when she can not be coaxed or driven, and it is wise to remember that wise impulses may be changed to bad ones by improper training.

The sensible woman does not allow self-gratification to persuade her to do that which is contrary to reason or sound judgment. She never loves a man so dearly, notwithstanding his bad habits, which she despises, that "she can not give him up."

Her good sense tells her that love is shortlived unless fed on respect, and also that an affection which is weaker than a bad habit is scarcely worth having.

The sensible woman never does a thing simply because every one else is doing it, but because she has decided that she may safely do it. She cares just enough about the opinion of her neighbors, and none too much. She who does not care what others think of her is lacking either in good sense or morality. She whose first thought is, "What will folks say?" lacks good sense and firmness to do what she believes to be right regardless of consequences. The sensible woman is the medium between these two extremes.

In time of trouble one turns involuntarily to the sensible woman. Others may be favored companions when the skies are clear, but under the clouds are useless as a lace shawl in a snow storm. But the sensible woman knows you are human, and although that may have seemed prosaic, when your fair weather friends are comparing you with the angels, you are not grateful. She does not gush or look scandalized, or say, "I told you so," or become sentimental, or try to convince you that she has suffered worse; you know at once that she understands, that she is not wanting in appreciation or sympathy, and that she will help you if you will let her.—Selected.

Parents Should Take Heed.

We have been constrained on many occasions to call the attention of parents to the indifference and almost criminal neglect which many manifest concerning the kind of reading which occupies the attention of their children. In a majority of families the youthful members are left without direction or scrutiny in this most important and influential matter. Instead of putting into their hands the unobjectionable book, the standard magazine, and the clean newspaper, the children are incited by evil companions to read excitable, idle and wholly poisonous stories. It is a striking confirmation and commentary upon this fact that William A. Pinkerton, in writing of "Highwaymen of the Railroad," in the November North American Review, says:

"One of the reasons for the recent epidemic of train robberies may be found in the general business depression. It is, however, also largely due, in my opinion, to the reading of yellow-covered novels. Country lads get their minds inflamed with this class of literature. Professional thieves or designing men find among this class many who are willing to go into their schemes. The majority of these robbers are recruited from among the grown boys or young men of small country towns. They start in as amateurs under an experienced leader. They become infatuated with the work, and never give it up until arrested or killed. I recollect a case where three boys, aged respectively seventeen, twenty-one and twenty-six, 'held up' a train near Emmett, Ark., in 1892, and took from the Pacific Express about $9,000 and from the passengers about $1,500. The conductor of the train ran one of them down and brought him back, the other two escaped, but were eventually arrested in the Indian Territory. They were convicted and sentenced to seventy years each in State's prison. One of these was a mere lad, who had seen a railway train for the first time to 'hold it up.'"

Growth in the Christian life must follow the laws of growth everywhere. A plant in a dark cellar must either die or live a poor, feeble and dying life. It needs light; it needs sunshine. If you live in the dark cellar of your own nature, you will grow more and more feeble, until spiritual death succeeds to the long absence of spiritual life and power. If you live in the shadows of doubt, in the gloomy vales of misanthropy, in the dark dens of fault-finding and selfishness, you will lose all the light and joy, and finally the very life, of the true believer. Come out into God's sweet sunshine. Eat the divine manna as given in the divine Book. Exercise all the spiritual sympathies and muscles by following Christ, "who went about doing good."—R. S. MacArthur, D. D.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH, if you're a suffering woman, demands Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. There's no other medicine like it for women's peculiar ills. No matter how distressing your symptoms, it relieves your aches and pains, and if faithfully used will bring a permanent cure in every chronic weakness or derangement, in catarrhal inflammation, and in the displacements of women.

West Liberty, O.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—I can cheerfully recommend your valuable medicine, the "Favorite Prescription," to suffering females. Three years ago my health became so poor that I was scarcely able to help with the household duties. I was persuaded to try your medicine, and I purchased six bottles. That, with the local treatment you advised, made me strong and well.

My sister has used it in the family with like results.

KOON.—By the request of his presiding elder (Rev. J. B. Stone) I will write a tribute of respect to our beloved brother, Rev. O. N. Koon, who passed from labor to rest on Feb. 14, 1894.

It is impossible to command language that will express the sadness his death has produced in the hearts of his brethren in the ministry and of the good people of his charge. Indescribably sad also were the people of his former charges and his many friends, regardless of name or order.

Bro. Koon joined the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen in 1884, and was appointed to the Marietta circuit. After having done a faithful year's work there he was assigned to the New Albany circuit one year; thence to the Baldwin circuit one year. From Baldwin he went to the Ripley circuit, where he labored for four years, enduring many hardships and accomplishing great good. From Ripley he went to the Cornersville circuit, where he remained until he had entered his third year. After having done about two months of faithful work he had a very violent attack of pneumonia, which resulted in his death.

Bro. Koon was more than an ordinary preacher. Wherever he went he was very successful in winning souls to Christ, and besides his ability in revival work he understood the doctrines of the Methodist Church, and was able to defend them. He was an able debater. His education was limited. He had not even the advantage of a common school education. Yet he was very studious at home, and made rapid advancements, and the wonder was how could he know as much as he did. As he advanced in years he grew in grace, and the last few months of his life it seemed that he was more consecrated than ever before.

On Friday evening, Feb. 16, myself and wife, in company with Bro. J. B. Stone, went to the place selected for his last resting-place, where we found everything in readiness for his burial and a large congregation of weeping friends gathered to pay him a tribute of respect, when we learned that his devoted wife was at home too sick to attend the funeral of her husband. She lingered with the same disease twelve days from the death of her husband; then passed away in great peace to join him over the river.

The saddest part is yet to be told. Her death has made six more orphans in the world, ranging from about twenty years old down to a sweet little baby boy of three Summers, left without a home or means of support. But, thank God! they have friends that will do the best they can for them, and I am truly glad that it will be my privilege to pay and to collect something on the Conference claimant fund that will help to support these little orphan children.

Bro. and Sister Koon were just in the prime of life, being about forty-one or forty-two years old. We confidently expect to meet them on the other shore. M. H. HONNOLL.

New Albany, Miss.

MAYO.—MARY MALINDA WILDS was born May 26, 1827. Her parents died while she was quite young. She was raised by her grandmother and her brother in-law, Maj. E. K. W. Ross. She was married to F. E. Mayo about the year 1856. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church in her girlhood, and lived a consistent member until her death, which occurred April 12, 1894.

She was one of the most devout and pious Christians I have ever known. All spoke of her as one of the best of Christians. I knew her for over twenty-eight years, and I must say I never knew a more confiding Christian. She was a great sufferer the last ten months of her life, but she never murmured; she was always kind and gentle. In all her sufferings she never forgot or neglected family prayer. She was anxious to depart and be with Jesus. Just before she breathed her last she said, "Thank God, Jesus is so near." These were about her last words.

She was a devoted wife, a loving mother, and a true friend and neighbor. She has gone to her reward, leaving three children, many relatives, and a host of friends, to mourn her death, but their comfort is, she has gone to be with the Lord forever, where they hope to meet her when life's battle is over. May God's grace sustain the bereaved! T. S. R.

HOUGH.—In loving remembrance of CORENA, who died May 12, 1894. Corena was scarcely five years of age—the little daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Hough. She was twined around our hearts in affection deep.

Weep not, father and mother; she is an angel in heaven. She was too pure to stay in this world; God called her home. A loved one from us is gone, a voice we loved is stilled. Jesus says: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." L. L. C.

Vidalia.

HART.—At his home, near Camden, Miss., Feb. 18, 1891, ELIJAH HENRY HART calmly and peacefully passed away. He was born March 18, 1843; was married to Miss Emma Newland, Jan 18, 1866. A devoted wife, three daughters and two sons, with a host of relatives and friends, mourn their sad loss.

Bro. Hart was faithful in all the relations of life: a devoted husband and father, a kind friend and good neighbor, and, above all, a true Christian. He was a loyal member of the Methodist Church for over thirty years. He also served in the capacity of steward for many years, which office he filled efficiently up to the time of his death.

In the death of this good man we roognize our great loss, for truly he was "the friend of God," as he was an earnest helper and sincere friend to his pastor. Yes, a good and true man is taken from us, but we bow in humble submission, knowing that there will be a happy reunion hereafter. May God comfort and keep the sorrowing ones! E. F. EDGAR.

STAMPLEY.—MRS. SARAH M. STAMPLEY (nee Hall) was born Jan 5, 1859, in Franklin county, Miss.; died at Terry, Miss., January, 1894. She was raised by godly parents and grew up to be a consistent Christian. She was always moral. Having the promise, "Train up a child in the way," etc., she always loved her Savior, the church and God's people. She was baptized at Beech Grove, and joined the church at her old home. Was married, in 1873, to J. E. Stampley, who with five children are left to mourn the loss of the one who had been the light and comfort of the family.

During her last years she was deprived of her religious privileges, but clung to her Bible and her Savior, and found great peace and comfort in them. Her faith was strong until the last hour, and she died in full hopes of meeting her Lord and Master in peace. She was laid to rest in the cemetery here to await the call from God. W. T. GRIFFIN, Pastor.

WILLIAMS.—WILLIAM WILLIAMS was born in Livingston parish, La., Jan 3, 1803. The greater part of his life was spent in St. Helena parish, La., where he died at the home of his nephew, W. M. Williams, April 30, 1894. He received careful attention in his old age. He joined the Methodist Church and lived a consistent member until God, in his wisdom, saw fit to call him home.

The question was asked him, a few days before his death, how he felt in regard to his soul's salvation, and he said he loved God, and that he was happy.

May we all live so as to meet him around the throne of God! LONZO CARROLL.

REAMES.—E. E. REAMES, son of J. M. Reames and I. J. Reames, was born in East Feliciana parish, La., Nov. 16, 1859; married to Addy Roling, May 27, 1889. To them were born two sons. He died at his home in Natchitoches parish, La., April 7, 1891, aged thirty-four years four months and twenty-one days.

Bro. Reames was a member of the M. E. Church. He was five months in bed, suffering much, but without a murmur. He said many times before his death that his way was clear. He leaves many friends to mourn his loss. May we all live to meet him "in the sweet-by-and-by"! May God bless those he left behind!

J. C. CASNLINE.

SMITH.—MRS. JOSEPHINE SMITH, the daughter of Ecean Chadwell and Silvia Labove, was born in this parish on Feb. 6, 1858, and died April 21, 1894. She has been a member of our church for some years, having joined under the labors of Rev. T. H. McClendon. Her life was that of a Christian mother, quiet, sweet, and complacent.

Sister Smith's sad death was hardly announced before the angel of death was calling her earthly father to the same bright realms of light. We expect to meet one another again.

Three children remain to mourn the loss of their mother. Among them a chubby little daughter of two weeks lingers to sweeten and cherish the memory of Sister Smith, while she brightens the homes of those whom the death of these two loved ones have made sad.

WM. B. VAN VALKENBURGH.

CHADWELL.—ECEAN CHADWELL was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., Nov. 13, 1833, and died April 22, 1894. He has been a citizen of this parish since boyhood, and was an honored and respected citizen and a member of our church at Leesburg for thirty years, having joined under the ministry of Rev. Robert J. Harp.

Bro. Chadwell leaves a wife and seven grown children, as well as a host of relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. A patriarch in Israel has fallen; a servant of the King has been called to his reward.

WM. B. VAN VALKENBURGH.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures nightsweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

The great need of the hour is a speedy return on the part of the ministry in presenting the terrors of the law as well as the matchless love of Christ. There is too much display in sweetening the popular taste with the confectionery of rhetoric and so-called science. The easy manner in dealing with the unsaved sometimes, by merely getting them to sign a card, is all very good in its place, but will not save. There must be more than uplifted hands; there must be uplifted heart-life.—Record.

Mr. F. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

Could the youth, to whom the flavor of the first wine is delicious, look upon my desolation; could he but feel the body of death with which I cry hourly, it were enough to make him dash the sparkling beverage to the earth in all the pride of its mantling temptation.—Charles Lamb.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The National Conference of Charities met in Nashville, Tenn., last week.

S. B. Armour, president of the Midland National Bank at Kansas City, has given $25 000 to the Children's Home at that place.

The Queen and Crescent ticket office, in this city, was closed on last Sunday, in order to give the employees a rest and an opportunity to attend church.

The Southern Presbyterians, who met in Nashville, Tenn., were emphatically opposed to organic union proposed by the Northern Presbyterians.

The striking miners and deputies at Cripple Creek, Col., had a battle on May 26. Six men were killed. Gov. Waite has declared himself in sympathy with the strikers.

A petition has been presented to Congress asking for a small appropriation to make some further tests of a new smokeless powder, which was recently invented by a Virginian.

The New York World has knocked the bottom out of the coal combine in that city by offering to fill all orders at $4 50 a ton. The dealers have had to meet the cut, and the public is happy.

The Missouri river rose six feet in forty-eight hours at the beginning of the week at Atchison. The growing flood threatens East Atchison with annihilation, and, banks caving under the wash of currents, indicate the interruption of railroad communication.

The Naval Appropriation bill, which passed the House of Representatives about a week ago, failed to make any provision for new vessels for the navy, with the exception of the few torpedo boats. It has, for six or eight years past, been the custom to authorize several new vessels annually.

The Provident Loan Association, of New York, opened its doors for business last week. This is the establishment backed by Vanderbilt, Morgan, Hewitt, Iselin & Co., and others of the millionaires of New York, and its object is to loan money to deserving poor people on reasonable rates of interest.

Senator Blanchard, of Louisiana, gave a severe shock to the older senators, on May 25, when he ventured to make a speech in reply to remarks made during the tariff debate by Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, Senator Higgins of Delaware, and several other Republicans. The traditions of the Senate require that new Senators should pass through a kind of probationary period before they attempt to join in the discussions on an equality with the Nestors of the upper House, and Mr. Blanchard's breach of the ancient usage sent a thrill of horror through the patriarchs.

At 10 o'clock, on May 25, eleven men started to work in the Strong Mine on Battle Mountain, Colorado. Shortly afterwards a large party of strikers blew up a shaft-house with powder, causing a loss of $25 000, and then dropped 100 pounds of giant powder down the shaft, which was also exploded, killing all the inmates.

FOREIGN.

The English government, strengthened by a series of defeats of the opposition on the budget, now hopes to pilot its way through the session. The sudden weakness displayed by the opposition has been a surprise all around. Various causes have been assigned for this, but probably none of them is the real one.

A farewell service was held at St. James Hall on May 27 in connection with the departure from England of Miss Frances Willard, the well-known American temperance advocate. Lady Somerset, who is very prominent in the temperance movement in Great Britain, and of whom Miss Willard has been a guest, made a brief address.

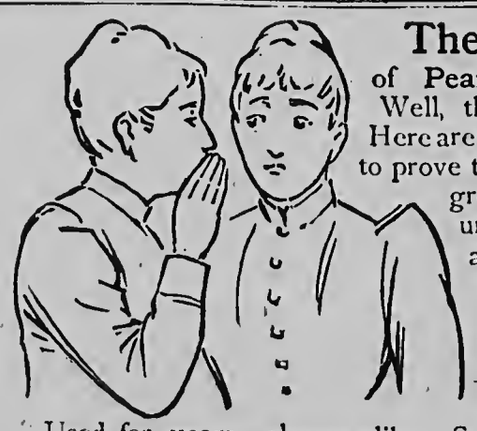
The Salvation Army has not given up its colonizing scheme. Gen. Booth thinks it is a great plan, and full of hope for the unfortunate outcasts of society. He has been offered land for the purpose in Africa, Mexico, New Mexico, Canada and other countries, but he has decided on Australia as the fittest place for the purpose.

One of the surgeons who took part in the operation, on May 24, upon Mr. Gladstone's right eye, says that the main task of the doctors is to increase the sight and strength of the eye, and that there is no reason why this should not be accomplished. Mr. Gladstone's attendants are delighted with the progress he has made towards complete recovery from the effects of the operation.

Prevention is better than cure, and you may prevent that tired feeling by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which will keep your blood pure and free from acid taint and germs of disease.

Hood's Pills do not purge, pain or gripe, but act promptly, easily and efficiently. 25c.

The comments of the German newspapers on the political crisis in France point out in a vivid manner the change which events of recent years have brought on the face of European politics. This state of affairs is due to the fact that the Germans have confidence that cabinet changes in France are no longer likely to disturb the relations between the two powers, and these relations, it would appear, are growing friendly day by day.



The Secrets

of Pearline's success? Well, there are several. Here are some of them, just to prove that its enormous growth was only natural. First: The article was precisely what its makers claimed it to be; it has never changed—no improvement has been found. Used for years—always alike. Second: The public was kept informed about Pearline. This was necessary. With anything so new and so different from old ideas, people had to be educated. Third: The best advertising Pearline has ever had (and it costs nothing) is from every woman who has used it. She tells everyone how much it has done for her in all kinds of washing and cleaning; that while the cost is nominal, she has found it to be better than anything else, always the same, and perfectly harmless; and that the saving by using cheaper imitations for a year wouldn't be enough to pay for one ruined garment.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 306 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

Children's Day.

We had a good Children's Day here yesterday. The songs, responses and recitations were all very good. China, Mexico, Brazil and Japan were personated by the following young ladies: Miss Dora Mabrey, Miss Mamie Dickey, Miss Ora Stacey, and Miss Beulah Furgeson. Superintendent W. E. Dickey and the ladies who assisted him deserve especial credit for the preparation for the day.

R. I. ALLEN, P. C.

Dublin, Miss., May 21.

We observed Children's Day at Garden City, Miss., which resulted in an offering of $2 25. All sister churches took part in the exercises. It was a very refreshing occasion. We have met all of our appointments, save one on account of sickness. Baptized two infants, turned out two members, as a result of our revival at one appointment. There is a growing interest in some parts of the work. Pray for us.

A. C. FLOWERS.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. C. Morehead, Sardis, Miss.: "The second round on this district closed well with a few exceptions. Finances are equal to second quarter's report last year, which is saying much, while the other interests of the church are moving grandly beyond. Quite a number have been converted and brought into the church, and many of our members are advancing into a richer experience and higher attainments in the divine life. May this tidal wave of salvation continue to bring the church closer to her Lord."

Rev. G. R. Ellis, Ecatawpa, Miss.: "Just closed a glorious meeting at Zion Church of nine days' duration. The Holy Spirit was present from beginning to the close to bless and save. Prejudices and animosities gave place to peace and love. Religious lethargy and despondencies removed, and a mighty quickening and rejoicing have taken their place. The church and community have truly been lifted to a higher plane. Ten accessions during the meeting. Praise the Lord! The preaching was done by Bros. G. W. Huff and E. T. Breland, and T. W. Adams, of Moss Point. Their preaching was clear, practical and forcible, carrying with it conviction to the sinner and comfort to the child of God. They will ever be appreciated and loved by the good people of Ecatawpa and the writer. A new camp ground eight miles north of Scranton, Miss., and four miles north of Moss Point on the Ecatawpa charge, has lately been inaugurated. The tabernacle of ample dimensions will soon be completed. Our first meeting will be held either in September or October. Of this you will hear more from me further on. Make your arrangements, Doctor, so as to count one at the meeting and quench your thirst by a cool draught from as fine mineral springs as you will find in the South. Pray for us."

THERE IS A GOD!

TO THE INFIDEL.

You tell me, "All things come by chance!"
Who taught the earth its course to run
Across the fields of broad expanse,
And whirl in circles 'round the sun?

What hand has dotted yonder sky
With all those glittering gems of light?
Who placed the lovely moon on high
To break the darkness of the night?

Go forth into the woodland fair,
Where violets spring from the sod,
Where sweetest fragrance fills the air;
Then tell me if there is no God.

Go wander in each sylvan place,
Where I have often trod,
There dare to look in nature's face
And tell her that "there is no God."

Oh, it is base ingratitude
To stand beneath the bending sky
That has been raised by One so good,
And then His authorship deny!

Come forth with me into the field,
Where blows the gentle southern air,
Where heaven bends as an azure shield—
Then tell who made this scene so fair.

Who made the violet (love's true flower)?
Who formed the waving golden-rod?
Who gives the fields the cooling showers?
All, all proclaim, "There is a God!"

East Mississippi Commencement.

(Editorial.)

On Sunday last it was our privilege to preach the commencement sermon of East Mississippi Female College. Leaving the Crescent City early Saturday morning, we reached Meridian about four P. M. We were domiciled in the hospitable home of our old friends, Bro. and Sister B. F. Ormond, whose society, with that of their interesting family, we enjoyed very much. On Saturday night we had the pleasure of an hour or two's interconrse with several brethren of the itinerant fraternity, viz.: Bros. Little, Holloman, Woodward, and Scarborough. We found Bro. Little slightly indisposed, though up and at work.

Bro. Woodward has already endeared himself to the people of Central. The church is prospering greatly under his pastorate. There have been about sixty accessions to date. The Sunday-school is flourishing, and the prayer meetings well attended and full of interest. The spiritual condition of the church is decidedly good.

What we have said of Central applies also to East End and West End. Bros. Hopper and Lewis are doing faithful work, and they have their reward in seeing the work of the Lord prosper in their hands.

South Side, a charge organized during the present year, has made a good beginning under the pastorate of Bro. Scarborough.

Sunday morning dawned bright, beautiful, lovely—the very perfection of weather. The commencement exercises were held, as usual, in Central Church. In anticipating a crowd, the seating capacity of the building had been largely increased by putting chairs in the aisles and in all open spaces. All this, however, was insufficient to meet the demands of the occasion. Many stood during the entire service, and many more were turned away. The college choir furnished an excellent musical programme. After the sermon it goes without saying that we had a good time shaking hands with old friends and parishioners.

In the afternoon we had the privilege of administering the ordinance of baptism to the juveniles of two households.

At night we had the privilege of hearing an enjoyable discourse on "The Perfect Man," by Rev. T. B. Holloman.

We would have been glad to remain throughout the commencement exercises, but on the principle, "Duty before pleasure," we were at six o'clock on Monday ticketed for New Orleans.

The remaining commencement exercises, and the proceedings of the Board of Trustees in their annual meeting, will, doubtless, be written up for the ADVOCATE in due time.

The number of graduates is four. The enrollment of pupils during the session is one hundred and nine. A good showing, considering the stringency of the times.

The patrons and the people of Meridian, generally, are delighted with Bro. and Sister Holloman, and are anxious to have them remain in the college. What Bro. Holloman's final decision will be is not known at this writing.

The Influence of Methodism.

BY REV. H. WALTER FEATHERSTON, D. D.

(Read before the Woodville District Conference, April 27, 1894, and published by order of the District Conference.)

I. The Methodist movement is the only great revival of real apostolic gospel preaching which the Christian era has known.

The proposition is well guarded. The Christian era began with the real gospel preaching of the apostles and their co-laborers. This was the beginning of it, not a revival of it. This passed away during the Dark Ages, and for a thousand awful years of gloom the world heard no gospel preaching save a very little hid away in the obscure corners of civilization.

Four hundred years ago Luther arose, woke the world from its sloth of sin, and revived the long-forgotten doctrine of justification by faith. Luther's Reformation was the roseate dawn of that civilization which is approximating its noon-tide glory in this golden evening of the nineteenth century; but grand as the Reformation was, it was but the harbinger of the grander revival to come. The preaching of the Reformation involved the doctrine of justification by faith; but it was tinctured very strongly with what we call hyper-Calvinism, and other errors which obscured its glory and robbed it of its very essence as gospel preaching. To tell the world that some men may be justified and saved by faith in Christ, but that others may not, because God has so decreed, may be "good news"—gospel means good news—to the elect, but it is certainly not to the non-elect. At best it is not the gospel which Christ preached when he said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest;" not the gospel "to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people." The angel of the vision seen by St. John on Patmos carried good news to all men, not to some. He did not tell some that they were saved, and others that they were damned by God's decree. True or false, the hyper-Calvinistic preaching of the Reformation was not a preaching of good news; it was not real apostolic gospel preaching. The Calvinistic Churches to-day do not teach any such extreme Calvinism, but have so far modified their belief as to become thoroughly evangelical, and are in holy rivalry with the Methodists in getting souls saved. This blessed change from the old hard, unevangelical Calvinism of Calvin, Knox and the English reformers, to the new, evangelical Calvinism of to-day, is due to the influences of this grand Methodist movement. Methodism leaves its impress upon everything it touches. It touches everything within its reach, and it is reaching everything in the world. If the Reformation of Luther and his compeers was incomplete, in that it lacked somewhat of being a revival of real apostolic gospel preaching, then no other movement save Methodism can lay any sort of claim to being a fulfillment of the symbolic prophecy of the apocalypse. Methodism does meet all the requirements of this symbol. She may be said to be "an angel"—a messenger of heaven—a high-born child of Providence, ordained to preach to all the world "the everlasting gospel," the lordly good news of salvation.

1. Methodism was a revival of the preaching justification by faith. It was Jesus' doctrine, it was Paul's, it was Luther's; but Wesley emphasized as Luther never did. He went further than Luther; he preached that we are justified by faith without the deeds of the law, just as St. Paul did.

2. Methodism was a revival of the preaching of the doctrine that "God's Spirit bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God." When Methodism arose, this doctrine, so plainly taught in the New Testament, had become long forgotten. Mr. Wesley and his co-workers were openly attacked by the Bishops and other clergy of the Church of England for preaching this very doctrine. The prevailing notion was that God gave this evidence of salvation to a very few, and then always for some special and extraordinary purpose. The Methodists of England first sang these words of Charles Wesley:

"How can a sinner know
His sins on earth forgiven?
How can my gracious Savior show
My name inscribed in heaven?
What we have felt and seen,
With confidence we tell;
And publish to the sons of men
The signs infallible."

They sang, "as it were, a new song" to old England. Men declared that they had never heard it before. It was in the New Testament, but they did not know what it meant. A gospel which does not tell us that we may know that we are saved is not a gospel at all. There is no life in it, no joy, no real hope—only a dim twilight. Thank God that his white-winged angel, Methodism, has come to bring back this gladness to the world! Now,

"When we taste God's love,
Our joys divinely grow
Unspeakable, like those above,
And heaven begins below."

3. Methodism was a revival of the preaching of Christian perfection. The New Testament contains such utterances as these: "He that believeth on the Son hath"—not will have merely in heaven—but, "hath everlasting life;" "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God;" "There is, therefore, no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus;" "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." But losing sight of the real sense of such passages, the preachers, before Methodism arose, taught no man to expect to get rid of sin until the hour of death, and they insisted that the heart-sickness, gloom and burden of sin could be laid off only at the grave. What a cheerless gospel! Thus, when Methodism, the apocalyptic angel of God, came "flying" into the mid-heaven of the eighteenth century, she found that the blessed, eternal gospel of Christ had been uncrowned by the godless clergy of the day, and stripped of its radiance and shorn of its power by the half-heathen theology which had emerged, foul and musty, from the Dark Ages. She found a dead church and a lifeless ministry, and the preaching a cold, cheerless, lifeless, gloomy thing, which brought no comfort for this world and but a dim hope for another. She found it thus, and she went flying through the murky mid-heavens of England and America. She shed from her wings the light of heaven into millions of hearts and homes, and from her crowned brow the splendor of a deathless destiny. No wonder that the Methodists were a shouting people from the very beginning. The only wonder is that all England did not shout when this trumpet of gospel glory first broke on her frozen churches and gloomy millions.

There is another evidence of the truth of my interpretation of the text.

II. The Methodist movement is the only great revival of pentecostal power which the Christian era has known.

Pentecostal power! What does it mean? These Methodists know what it means. "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high," said our Master to the first preachers of the cross, and they, in desperate human weakness, tarried until the holy chrism of Pentecost came, and then they went forth prodigies of pulpit power. There must be this pentecostal power as well as sound doctrine in the pulpit, or the preaching is poor and powerless and paltry. There was great want of power in the pulpits of Christendom just prior to the rise of Methodism. Platitudes, sometimes splendidly null, poor and powerless, fell drawlingly intoned upon the ears of sleepy hearers, unmoved and stately. Nobody was converted, nobody was aroused, nobody comforted. Methodism came into such surroundings with her beautiful gospel of light and love poured warm and bright with burning eloquence from the lips of God-ordained evangelists, who felt the religion they taught. It was "Christianity in earnest," said Dr. Chalmers, the greatest Presbyterian divine of Scotland, and its intense earnestness born of that pentecostal fire which its preachers got from God was the secret of its power. What power it has wielded! No movement since the days of Peter and Paul has manifested such results.

One hundred and fifty-three years ago it began its career with twelve members. She has now 8,000,000. Over 1,300,000 of these are in our own Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She has an adherence of over 25,000,000 of men, women and children. No other movement ever achieved such tremendous results. The comparative progress of the various churches in America exhibits the marvelous power of the Methodist movement. The figures were compiled in 1890 from the United States census of that year. The Protestant Episcopal Church began its work in America 285 years ago, and now numbers 480,176 members; the Congregationalists began 271 years ago, and now number 491,985; the Presbyterians began 192 years ago, and now number 1,229,012; the Baptists began 253 years ago, and now number 4,202,291; the Methodists began 125 years ago, and now number 5,000,000. The average yearly increase of the Episcopalians has been 1,684, Congregationalists has been 1,815, Presbyterians has been 6,401, Baptists has been 16,965, Methodists has been 40,000. Methodism has grown nearly 2½ times more rapidly than the Baptist Church, and 23 times more rapidly than the Episcopal. If Methodism continues to grow for another hundred years at the same rate she has grown for a century past, she will number 400,000,000—that is to say, that there will then be as many Methodists in the world as there are Christians of all denominations. Methodism will have accomplished in 225 years what it required all Christendom to do in 1,900. Will she do it? God grant that she may! She will do it if she remains true to her Lord and true to her lordly mission. She may do it. She is just as evangelical to-day as ever; just as aggressive, just as successful. With more than 100,000 preachers and 8,000,000 of members scattered over the world, she is preaching "the everlasting gospel" of a full, free and present salvation to earth's sin-cursed millions. She is still moving on with the same majestic tread. Our own M. E. Church, South, in 1866 numbered only 429,233; to-day more than 1,305,715. Thus, in twenty-eight years she has increased more than threefold, and our own Mississippi Conference has nearly doubled her membership in the last fifteen years. With what a majestic tread this mighty Methodism, the apocalyptic angel of God, moves on to the conquest of the world for Christ!

It has been said that the sun never goes down on the dominions of Queen Victoria, and that England's drum-beat is heard all around the world. Brethren, the sun never goes down on this sanctified army of Methodists; and the hallelujahs from her revivals, the music of her grand old Wesleyan hymns, and the thunder of burning eloquence from her pentecostal pulpits are heard all around the world. Her churches and chapels stand under the shadow of Windsor Castle and on the seven hills of Rome; in the canyons of the Sierra Nevadas and the valleys of the Alps, and among the foot-hills of the Himalayas. They are crowded among the shops and tenements of America's metropolis, and are scattered over the pine hills of Georgia and the swamps of Louisiana. Methodist preachers founding missions on the frozen shores of Alaska, and traveling circuits in the land of the Montezumas. "The world is my parish," was the motto of John Wesley, and the sons of Wesley for a century and a quarter have been organizing this parish.

"I saw an angel," says St. John; an angel, a messenger of God. Methodism is an angel of God, a messenger from heaven to a fallen world, bearing God's tender messages of love and sweet offers of salvation to earth's fallen millions. Oh, she has been an angel of light lovelier than the dawn to thousands and thousands of hearts and homes! She stands to-day, in her sanctified grandeur, the most colossal child of Providence, and the most beautiful known to the ages since the dawn of the Christian era. "She stands," did I say? No, no, no; she does not stand, she moves. "An angel flying," says the Book of Revelation. Methodism never has been bound to one place, or one condition or grade or class of humanity. The world is her parish; all men are her parishioners. She carries the message of God "to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." "An angel flying," crowned with a diadem of an immortal mission, robed in the splendor of transcendent hope, voiced like the choirs of God, she preaches as she flies. Methodism has something grander to do than read prayers and observe feast days; something grander than to wrangle over dusty dogmas and obsolete ceremonies. She preaches the love of God as the hope of the world; she preaches the gospel, the good news of salvation, to a ruined world.

Good and Bad Novels.

Whatever influence novels have upon the mind of a reader is due to giving him a wider acquaintance than his own experience affords with life, or what passes for life. Novels deal only with the interesting parts of life, leaving out of sight the commonplace matters which make up more than three-fourths of real life, otherwise they would not be read. Good novels represent these interesting features as they are, and give the real feelings of honorable men and women toward the actions and occurrences which make up the story. Bad novels, on the contrary, make their readers believe themselves and others to be what they are not, disturb their judgments, and fill them with false hopes as to what they may expect at the hands of destiny. Novels impel their readers to pursue the thoughts and foster the emotions of the accomplished or smart heroes and heroines whom they have been led to admire. When these thoughts and emotions are pure, generous and elevated, fiction becomes an agent for good; but when its model characters are willful, pompous, immoral and impossibly successful withal, its effect is deplorably degrading.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Care of Converts.

There seems to be so many "sickly" and "weak" among us. Many come from irreligious homes. Many are daily in an environment of wickedness, especially in the cities—the country people are more isolated in their daily work, and have a better chance to cultivate communion with God. The spirit of the times is so intensely secular, so unspiritual, that the new spiritual life must begin with a struggle against all these peculiar influences, to say nothing of "the flesh" and "the devil," those ancient and ever-potent allies of "the world."

The future welfare of these souls, as well as the future power and stability of the church, depends upon the Christian character and spiritual health of these converts. Their Christian character must be built up and established; their spirituality must be fed, cultivated, increased; they must be instructed in the Word of God—fed on "the sincere milk of the Word;" they must be brought into living sympathy with the work and life of the church, the body of Christ; they must be warned against the wiles of the devil, the insidious influences of the world, and the tendencies of the flesh.

In this great work lies the pastor's chief responsibility. He must be a shepherd, not a master; a father, not a boss. While in his preaching he must at times be corrective, yet he can do more with the bread of Heaven than with the rod of carnal discipline. Nor can he do all his work in the pulpit. He must do personal work with the people in their homes. He must gain their confidence, so that they will make him their confidant. He must study their needs, their weaknesses, their advantages. He must know how to speak a word in season to him that is weak. It's a wonderful responsibility, this care of converts. It is enough to make a seraph tremble. The duty often involves such delicate tact, such heavenly wisdom, such holy courage. It takes a man, every inch of him baptized with the Holy Ghost, and filled with divine love, to do this work, and do it acceptably.

But the church also has a part in this work. Ye that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please your own selves. Class leaders, according to our Discipline, are under-shepherds of the pastor, assistant pastors. If they take no interest in the lambs of the flock, loss must result. Many class leaders seem to think their duty done if they hold the prayer meeting when their turn comes. But it is not. We need a better enforcing of the Discipline in this respect. We need a revival of the old evangelical type of class leader. We need class leaders who watch over the members of their classes, who know the spiritual condition of those entrusted to them, and who watch with fatherly solicitude over them. Their work in the interest of the new converts must be supplemented by the helpfulness of all the older and more experienced members of the class.

To succeed in this work of building up the young converts we would point out two prime factors which will be powerful means to the end.

First, incite them to seek holiness, zealously, definitely, unceasingly. Urge them to go on unto perfection. This is the best preventive of apostasy. It makes backsliding impossible. Nor does anything else so rapidly develop Christian character or foster spirituality as this. Holiness is the natural magnet of the converted soul. They grow in that direction as plants grow toward the sun. Let them have plenty of holiness by communication with the holy Jesus, and by the example of the older Christians around them.

Second, cultivate love for and interest in the church to which they belong. If they love the church, her life, her spirit, her laws and order, her institutions and her instrumentalities, it will be a great help to them in the spiritual life. The church is the body of Christ. He who properly loves the church thereby loves Christ himself, who loves the church and gave himself for it. So we say, make them evangelical. It is not enough that their names be on the church roll. Nor is it enough that they are interested in the immediate local congregation. They must feel their identification with the whole body of the church; their participation in her enterprises must be intelligent and hearty; their share of responsibility for her success must be deeply felt. A person can not be truly evangelical without being also actually Christian.—Messenger.

Hopeful Experiment.

The work begun by the Rev. David H. Greer, rector of St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal Church, in this city, of loaning money to deserving and industrious persons in temporary distress, and able to give chattel mortgages to secure the loans, is most benevolent in conception, and will be equally beneficent in results. No articles of personal property are to be received and kept as security for money loaned, but an interest of six per cent. is to be charged; names of applicants are to be kept secret.

Its test will be when parties fail to pay interest. If it comes to be understood that their goods will never be taken away, the institution will become a mere means of giving. If the goods are taken and sold, many a pitiful cry will be raised. But such is the wisdom displayed by Dr. Greer that all difficulties will doubtless be overcome.

It is not his design to compete with the city pawnshops. There is, therefore, room for another enterprise where personal property will be received and kept, which will require still more care. Growing up with the belief that pawnbrokers were essentially grasping, extortioners of the worst kind, and vampires, we long since modified that belief, and now hold that pawnbroking, properly and legitimately conducted, is an undertaking in which a Christian can engage. We have known Christian pawnbrokers, and beginning as a skeptic as to the possibility in the business, followed two of them closely, reaching the belief in one case, at least, that the man was a public benefactor; yet, to save himself, he often had to sell out property in an apparently heartless manner.—New York Advocate.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Bishop Galloway will deliver the literary address at Northwestern University, Chicago, June 14.

Prof. M. M. Black will resign his chair in Millsaps College at the approaching commencement.

Rev. E. E. Hoss has been appointed fraternal delegate to the Methodist Church in Canada. A capital appointment.

Miss Minnie Buntyn, of Meridian, Miss., who has been for the past year connected with our Mission School in Laredo, Texas, is at home for the Summer.

Rev. Mr. Norwood, agent of the American Bible Society for Venezuela and Colombia, has been sojourning in the Crescent City recently. Having spent many years in Mexico, Central America and South America, he is full of information concerning all matters pertaining to mission work in those regions. He has given several interesting talks of this description while in New Orleans.

Centenary.

The recent action of the General Conferenoe transferring that part of the Mississippi Conferenoe lying in Louisiana to the Louisiana Conference makes Centenary College the individual property of the Louisiana Conferenoe. Before this action Centenary had two Conferences to sustain it, but now the sole ownership is invested in the Louisiana Conference. This great educational plant, worth more than one hundred thousand dollars, has for the past half century been invaluable to Southern Methodism. It has educated a large per cent. of the ministers and ministers' sons in the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences, and its enlightening and Christianizing influence has gone out all over the Southern States. Now that Centenary's magnificent buildings and splendid equipments are turned over to the patronage of the Louisiana Conference, it becomes the imperative duty of each minister in this Conference to redouble his energy in behalf of the college. Should the members of the Louisiana Conference do this, assisted by the loyal friends of Centenary outside of this Conference, the college will continue on the same substantial basis upon which it now stands, and has stood for many years. In many respects Centenary affords opportunities to be found at few institutions. It is within thirty-five minutes' drive of the Mississippi Valley railroad, and has all the advantages of being conveniently located with none of the drawbacks of a city location. Though afforded daily communication with the world by means of the mails, yet the boys are not confronted by the temptations of a city life. The noise and attractions of a city are not here to distract the student from quiet, close study. There are no public places of a corrupting tendency. There are no gambling shops to entice him, no progressive enchre parties where young ladies teach him the card playing. No temptation to ruin him at the age when the development of his character and mind needs all the strength of moral and religious influences to produce the growth and permanency of all that is noble and good within him. Here his inherited evil tendencies, or those acquired by association or other circumstances, have a chance to die from inactivity. The only public places here for a student to attend are churches, Young Men's Christian Association, Epworth Leagues and Sunday-schools. When invited to social entertainments, he goes neither to a dancing nor a card party, for the entertainment is invariably of a moral and literary character. The environment of Centenary is the product of fifty years' growth, and to-day this college stands at a place in its religious and intellectual usefulness that it would take a new college twenty years to reach. The state of morality and intelligence in the vicinity of Centenary contributes largely to its favorable surroundings. This high state of society is the result of Centenary's long years of good influence upon the community, and to-day this college stands in the very prime of a brilliant and useful career. Institutions, like individuals, grow strong from experience, and the accumulated wisdom of half a century makes Centenary a power in Southern Methodism. It is deeply rooted and has become indigenous to the soil. The original act of the Louisiana Legislature authorizing the sale of Louisiana College to the Methodist Church stipulated that the college should never be sold except for educational purposes. The reduction of tuition to thirty dollars per session of ten months puts the college in the reach of students of limited means. Free tuition to theological students and preachers' sons should recommend it to the church and ministry. It is the duty of Christians to educate their sons at Christian colleges; and it is as much the duty of ministers to advocate Christian education and support their church schools as any other requirement of the Discipline. This is a great opportunity to the Louisiana Conference. If the brethren rally to Centenary, they can educate their sons, strengthen Louisiana Methodism, and rid the State of its ignorance. Brethren, we do not stand alone. During Centenary's long, useful and noble record it has made staunch friends in other Conferences and other States; these friends will ever be loyal to Centenary and zealous in their efforts to sustain the college they love. Centenary has its students and alumni in nearly every Southern State; these remember their alma mater with genuine sincerity. Brethren, let us be up and at work. Centenary has reached that point in her history where inertia and delay must give way to earnest zeal and uniting, energetic effort. Outside of Louisiana, Centenary has true friends who will help us most substantially if we rouse ourselves and get to work.

C. C. MILLER.

Report of Woman's Missionary Society of Rayne Memorial Church.

In making a report of the past year's work of the Rayne Memorial Society, it has been thought best to give, first, a little history of this society, since it has the honor to be the first Woman's Missionary Society organized in the Southern Methodist Church, with the exception of an independent one which was conducted for some years previously by ladies in the city of Baltimore. One bright Spring morning, April 26 1877 (shortly after the organization of the Central Mexican Mission by Bishop Keener), a small company of the women of Rayne Memorial Church were called together by Mrs. Bishop J. C. Keener, who, after some introductory words, with the gentle wisdom and great love for the Master's work which have always been the ruling principles of her life, explained to the listening friends the great necessity which then seemed to have arisen for the women of the church to begin to take an active part in furthering the cause of missions. This new field, Mexico, lay open, white unto the harvest, near at hand, and needy beyond description; so, very soon after the organization of this society, with the consenting vote of its members, this mission was adopted as the child of their love and care, and for sixteen years it was the pleasure and honor of the society to contribute toward the maintenance of the girls' school connected with the mission in the City of Mexico, sending the funds collected direct to the superintendent of the mission, as a rule. The funds were never diverted from this mission save in two instances, the first being in response to a request from the secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society of Nashville, Tenn., to aid them in sending out their first missionary to China, Miss Lochie Rankin, in 1878. By a special vote this request was responded to by sending all the money in the treasury at that time, $40, to the society in Nashville. The other was a similar assistance given to a home mission in Louisiana. The society never, at any time, regretted their choice of a mission field. The results of their efforts were greater than was expected, in proportion to the money that was contributed, and the sweet words of gratitude which came from the school and teachers only caused a sense of unworthiness and feelings of regret that so very little was being done. As the years went on, however, it was sorrowfully noticed that with the fluctuating congregations, and owing to other causes, the society was dwindling to a very few faithful ones, and these began to realize that, perhaps, more good could be accomplished with the small means by uniting with the general Woman's Missionary Society of the church. It was also hoped that in this way the Mexican Mission might receive more help in the future; so, in January, 1893, the Rayne Memorial Society decided to join the Woman's Board of Missions. But immediately following this decision came a most urgent call for help from the school in Mexico, which, if not given, might cause a suspension of the school, as the resources of the Parent Board of Missions were crippled to such an extent as made it impossible to help them. It was then decided to postpone uniting with the Woman's Board for a few months and to raise $125 for the school. This was accomplished by May, 1893; and from that time the society has been one of the numerous and glorious sisterhoods of united missionary workers in our beloved Southern Methodist Church.

The amount of money contributed for the year, beginning May, 1893, is small, $47 85, owing partly to the stringency of the times, and the unusually large amount collected for the school early in the year, and, sadly do we say it, owing to the lack of interest in those who should be heart and soul in this work. In completing this little history, it may not be inappropriate to state the entire sum collected by the society since its organization. It is done not with the least feeling of pride, but rather with a heartfelt sorrow that the sum is so small, when it might have been so much more; $2,557,85 is the amount. Of this, $450 was donated and collected by two ladies of the society, and $150 was collected by the Sunday-school at the suggestion and through the help and influence of a number of members of the society. This sum, $600, was given to the Parent Board in 1892, to assist in paying the general missionary debt. While this review of a seventeen years' membership in a missionary society leaves us nothing to be proud of, we certainly can thank and praise our gracious Master that his good spirit led us to do this much and has not permitted us to be entirely forgetful of the needs of his perishing children in heathen lands; and we pray that from henceforth our love for him may be so great that our hands may be ever ready and our feet ever swift to fulfill his command in sending the gospel to those for whom he died.

MRS. LINUS PARKER,
District Secretary.

Columbus District Conference.

The Columbus District Conference, of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, met in West Point, May 1, 1894. The Conference president, Mrs. S. E. Dean, District Secretary Mrs. J. W. McElroy and twelve delegates were in attendance. The meeting opened with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. J. W. McElroy, after which she very briefly, but plainly, discussed, "How, When and Where to Work." Several Bible verses were repeated bearing upon the work and God's many precious promises. The cordial welcome from the society of West Point to the visiting sisters and brethren was very beautifully given in the form of an address by Miss Susie Duke, which made all feel at home. The response by Miss Evie Connell, in words fitly chosen, expressed our sincere appreciation of such heartfelt hospitality. After the singing of several songs the meeting adjourned till half-past three in the afternoon.

The afternoon session was opened with devotional exercises by our president, Mrs. S. E. Dean. The recording secretary was then elected, and the reports from the district societies were as follows: Artesia—Verbal report by Miss Guerry; good work and still increasing. Brooksville—Written report. Crawford—Report made by district secretary. Cobb Switch—No report. Columbus Adults—$91 77 the year's work, and the banner society of the district. Earnest Workers of Columbus—A suburban society working hard. Addie Gordon Society, of the I. I. and C.—Written report; working with great interest. Lula Lipscomb Helpers, of Columbus—Working with great interest and missionary zeal. Macon—Written report; a small membership of zealous workers doing a great work. Starkville—Good report, splendid attendance, and $79 collected. Mrs. Wier was asked how she worked in her society, and in a few words told of missionary teas, the Advocate's kind words, and her own genial nature by which she drew her members toward this grand cause. Little Workers, of Starkville—Still alive. West Point—No written report, but a good verbal report made by Mrs. E. M. Sullivan. Nineteen members, five Advocates taken, and having just built their church, were unable to do as much as they would like to have done. Resolutions were then passed that the West Point juveniles be reorganized, and several of the dear sisters covenanted to work more faithfully for our Master's cause. Friday afternoon was appointed for first meeting. Mrs. Dean spoke very impressively of the children's work, and told of her success in the way of almost converting a geography class into one of missions. Our district secretary made her report of an increase of 59 members in the adults, but a decrease of 47 members in the juvenile societies. She urges each secretary to be prompt in sending to her their quarterly reports. A leaflet, "A Suggestion from Dennis," was read by Miss Carrie Thomas. After a song we were led in prayer by Mrs. Wier. Conference adjourned till 7:45 in the evening.

At the evening session the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. T. C. Wier. The programme was as follows: History of the Missionary Work—By Mrs. T. G. McGahey. Address—By Conference president, Mrs. S. E. Dean. Recitation, How to Shine—By Miss Vesta Propst. Recitation, A Missionary Man—By Robert Kirksey. The exercises were interspersed with excellent music by the choir. A collection was taken, after which Conference adjourned to meet Wednesday morning.

Wednesday, May 2, at half past nine A. M., Conference opened with Scripture reading by Mrs. S. E Dean; prayer by Mrs. J. W. McElroy; a song was sung; the minutes of all the sessions read, corrected, and approved. Resolutions were adopted thanking the good people of West Point for their hospitality; also the pastor, Dr. Sullivan; the presiding elder, Dr. Wier, and other brethren who have encouraged us by their presence, kind words, and earnest prayers. Toasts were also tendered to the choir for their sweet and inspiring songs, and to the congregations for their presence and their interest in our proceedings. Mrs. Dean made a few words of praise, followed by nearly all the ladies present. While the song, "God be with you till we meet again," was sung, all present came forward and shook hands with our president and secretary, after which Bro. Wier pronounced the benediction, and the District Conference stood adjourned. MRS. S. E. DEAN, Pres.
MRS. T. G. MCGAHEY, Rec. Sec.

Children of Mississippi.

Dr. Cooper tells us the work of raising money to build the boarding hall for Millsaps College moves along steadily. He says the hall will be built.

The children, both boys and girls, are responding nicely, and many more promise to send help later on in the year. We ought to hurry up with this work, for September will soon be here and the poor boys will need that hall. Many of them are depending on cheap board in this hall during the next session of this fine school. It it is not built and ready, some of these boys will have to stay at home. This will not do. We must provide for them. They need this help right now—next year may be too late for some of them. So now, dear children, hurry up and do what you can and do it quickly. No matter how small the amounts you may have on hand, send them on. They will double just as soon as they get into Dr. Cooper's hands.

Since your uncle wrote his last letter he has spoken to large congregations of children in Memphis, Paris and Bells, Tenn., and everywhere the children are engaged in the Lord's work in some one or more of the many ways open to them.

It is a lovely sight to see the boys and girls all over the land doing their part in "extending the kingdom of Christ from the rivers to the ends of the earth." I know our Lord is greatly pleased at this.

When I go from home again to speak to the children in other States, I want to tell them what the children of Mississippi have done. If I can tell them you have built a boarding hall for poor boys on the campus of Millsaps College, they will open their eyes wide, and say: "My, my, that is fine. What a noble work they have done."

We have just as pretty, as good and as smart children in Mississippi as they have in Tennessee or anywhere else. May God bless you all!

Your uncle, GILDEROY.

Church Extension Notice.

To the Pastors of the Louisiana Annual Conference:

There remains of unpaid appropriations upon the books of your Conference Board of Church Extension $475. In some cases the money is very much needed just now. Will the brethren, wherever it is possible, please take up their church extension collections at once, or very shortly, and remit the money to the Conference treasurer, No. 473 Dryades street, New Orleans? According to provision of the Discipline, a collection must be taken in each congregation. The collections should not be pooled at the end of the year, and then divided pro rata among the claims. Wherever the collection can now be taken without conflicting with the pastor's plans, it may be made a means of relief.

Treasurer.

"Questions for Self-Examination."

BY REV. ASHBEL GREEN, D. D.

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE, of May 10, you publish a communication from A. J. Brown, Newton, Miss., stating: "I send you a very old manuscript, written by a lady about forty years since. She has been dead about two years. On the manuscript is written, 'By A. Green, D. D.' This may mean A. L. P. Green," etc.

The manuscript sent you, and published in connection with the note, is a portion of Tract No. 113, Vol. IV., publication of the American Tract Society, page 237, written "By Rev. Ashbel Green, D. D. Questions and Counsel for Those Who Hope That a Work of Saving Grace Has Been Wrought Upon Their Hearts."

Rev. Ashbel Green, D. D., an American theologian, was born in Hanover, N. J., in 1762; graduated at Princeton in 1782; became pastor of Second Presbyterian Church, in Philadelphia, in 1787; chaplain to Congress, 1792 to 1800; a principal founder of the Philadelphia Bible Society in 1809; appointed president of Princeton College in 1812; resigned that position in 1822, and returned to Philadelphia, where he edited the Christian Advocate; died in 1848. True Genius.

I shall never forget almost the last thing Dr. E. G. Robinson said to us as we were about graduating from the theological seminary: "Gentlemen, the time has come when you must begin the duty and conflict of the work you have chosen; do not be troubled about your place, about whether or not you will ever be heard of. But be determined that, wherever you are, you do good work; and even though you may have a parish in the nether side of Kamtchatka, your good work will be heard of, and you will be wanted; for the world is on the perpetual lookout for good work." Thomas Carlyle said: "Genius is an immense capacity for taking trouble." George Eliot tells us "Genius is, at first, little more than a great capacity for receiving discipline." I read once how a certain prominent man, a judge, wishing to have a rough fence built, sent for a carpenter and said to him: "I want this fence mended to keep out the cattle. There are some unplaned boards—use them. It is out of sight from the house, so you need not take time to make a neat job. I will only pay you a dollar and a half."

But the judge, coming to look at the work, found the boards planed and the work finished with excellent neatness. The judge thought the young man had done it that he might claim more pay, and somewhat angrily said: "I told you this fence was to be covered with vines. I do not care how it looks." "I do," said the carpenter. "How much do you charge?" asked the judge. "A dollar and a half," said the man, shouldering his tools. "Why did you spend all that labor on the job, if not for the money?" "For the job, sir." "Nobody would have seen the poor work on it." "But I should have known it was there, sir." "No, I'll take only the dollar and a half"—and he took it and went away.

Ten years afterwards this carpenter was the successful competitor for a great contract the judge had to give out—the man successful among the crowd of others seeking it. "I knew," said the judge, telling the story afterwards, "we should have only good, genuine work from him; I gave him the contract, and it made a rich man of him."

I have walked and ridden in England along the roads on which William Carey, the great founder of modern missions, was wont to tramp, carrying to market his load of cobbled shoes. I have sat in his cobbler's shop, and explored the poor country villages in which a century ago he used to preach to little clumps of villagers, when he was an utterly unknown and stringently poor dissenting minister. Really I do not think you could crowd more than fifty people into the humble, straw-thatched building which was his church. But when, in his later years, and when he had achieved so magnificently in India that his fame had become as wide as the world, he said to Eustace Carey: "Eustace, if they write my life, and say I am a genius, they will say falsely; but if they say I can plod, they will tell the truth. Yes, Eustace, I can plod." And it was the painstaking plodding that did it all.

When Dr. Moffat came from Africa he was altogether surprised at the welcoming acclaim he met for the splendid Christianizing and civilizing work he had been doing there among the Bechuanas. In his surprise he said: "I never thought, when I was working in South Africa, to see a day like this. I simply did the work of the day in the day, and never thought that any one in England would think of me or it." But they did. You can not hide, even in Africa, thorough days' works.

"If thou hast yesterday thy duty done,
And thereby cleared firm footing for to-day,
Whatever clouds may dark to-morrow's sun,
Thou shalt not miss thy solitary way."

—Dr. Wayland Hoyt, in S. S. Times.

A Religion of Joy.

There are people we meet with sometimes who do us good as rivers of water in a dry place. After meeting them one's soul is like a watered garden. There is freshness, a new energy, a new sweetness in us because of their influence. They bless us and invigorate us. Hope seems to sing; and life seems a cheerier and an easier thing. And there are others—how restful is it to come near them? The fever and heat seem to die out of life; one is reconciled to a thousand things by the sight of them. They are as the shadows of a great rock. Thank God, indeed, for such men and such women—for the holy charm they carry with them; the blessed spell they can lay upon us.

For Christ's sake ought we not, every one of us, to set ourselves to be such—gracious, helpful, tender, strong, eager to befriend folks? Alas! there are other people who are so different. They aggravate one's failings and life's difficulties. Where they live, it seems as if in Summer it is unbearingly hot—they set you down at the very equator; and in Winter it is intolerably cold—they set you at the very Pole. The dust always sweeps in blinding gusts about their door. And other people are like those shelters and resting-places which the wisdom of our county council is setting up here and there, where trees are planted, and wearied people rest, and little children play; people who see sunshine in Winter and shade in Summer, who see rivers of water in seasons of drought—do let this be our religion. If Jesus Christ is ours, and we do live in any communion with him, surely we shall come to have something of his love, and breathe something of his spirit; to carry about us something of his pity and power. If the hem of his garment could convey his virtue, shall not the church, which is his body, have some grace to enrich and bless men? We may think and call ourselves Christians; but we shall be very much mistaken unless this is going to be true of us, "and a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest." How can those who blight and wither men be Christians? How can the hard and pitiless and unhelpful call themselves by the name of the Lord Jesus? How can those who blaze and belch out angry fires think themselves the disciples of the meek and lowly Savior? Let us take these words as an ideal of life and a test of our religion.—Mark Guy Pearse.

A Problem for the Critics.

The Interior gets a good deal of fun out of the higher critics. Just now it gives them a nut to crack in the shape of a prize offer, if they will unravel the authorship of a composite production of living authors. It says: "There is nothing to be compared with the certainty and positiveness of a modern critic. Prof. Driver knows all about it, and Canon Cheyne knows the whole story of the composition of the Pentateuch just as certainly as if he had chosen the writers himself and presided at the redaction of their various productions. That is all right. Now, if the brethren will agree upon these certainties, and not continue to contradict each other, we may have some confidence in their results. But to bring the matter right home, we know a gentleman who would like to put up a small sum as prize or forfeit upon a practical test. He will select passages from the most eminent and now living divines, men with whose writings all critics are familiar. He will join them into one whole by the means of one or more competent editors. And he will defy the whole combined faculties of all the known universities to separate the matter into its component parts and assign each to its particular writer, and to distinguish the work of each editor in the redaction. Our friend insists that if critics can not do this with men now living, whose style they know, they can hardly do it for men some thousands of years dead, whose style must be surmised from fragments. This looks like an opportunity for our brethren of the schools to make a telling point, or lose some prestige. We do not think the offer likely to be accepted."

The Power beyond the Life.

To the casual observer of men they appear to be very much alike, that is, in general they act very much alike, are prompted by similar motives for the accomplishment of similar ends. But on closer scrutiny, a more careful examination of motives prompting action and of the ends sought by the efforts put forth, develops a wide difference in the ruling influences back of all the outward activities. Here is where men often mistake and greatly misjudge each other. The apostle Paul exclaims: "It is a very small thing that I should be judged of you or of man's judgment."

This same apostle was a grand illustration of the idea we would bring out. In early life, self-righteous, ambitious, a violent, maddened persecutor. Later after life, a zealous disciple of him whom he had despised, counting all things but loss for Christ Jesus. Outwardly the same energetic man, but with the power unseen back of life, O what a change! In one case, moved by the spirit of persecution and death; in the other, obedient to the heavenly vision.

See the same difference in men in the busy round of daily life as you meet them; apparently much the same, yet how different! One devising schemes of self-indulgence, self-aggrandizement, mischief, iniquity, and wrong; the other, plans of benevolence, deeds of pity and compassion, love to God and love to man—such are the forces back of the visible life. Such is the Christian life, often unrecognized, despised, and rejected; but it is there, silently working out unnumbered blessings in the dark ways of sin and sorrow.—Religious Herald.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-trained, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

HOMINY CROQUETTES.—Two cups of cold boiled hominy; one egg beaten light; pinch of salt; teaspoonful of sugar; a little milk. Beat the egg into the hominy, mash it free from lumps. Add milk cautiously until the hominy is as soft as it can be handled. Stir in the salt and sugar, and form the mixture into croquettes with floured hands. Set aside for an hour in a cool place to become firm. Fry in deep fat to a good brown.

CHOCOLATE CAKE.—One cupful of sugar, ½ cupful of butter, 3 eggs (leave out the whites of 2 for frosting), ⅔ of a cupful of sweet milk, ½ teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves, 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, 1½ cupfuls of flour, half a ten-cent cake of chocolate. Bake the chocolate and stir it into the milk. Mix the spices and baking powder with the flour. Stir all the ingredients together and bake in three layers, which are to be put together, with plain white frosting. Frost the top of the cake.

BANANA PUDDING.—Beat 2 eggs until light, add half a pint of sweet milk, then slowly stir in 2 cupfuls of flour, beat rapidly two minutes, add 2 tablespoonfuls of melted butter, half a teaspoonful of salt, and a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder. Have ready prepared 4 bananas, peeled; slice and sprinkle flour over them, stir into the batter carefully, so as not to break the slices; turn into a buttered pudding-dish, set it in a steamer over a kettle of boiling water, steam one and a half hours; serve with sauce.

COOKIES.—One cupful of butter or salted lard, two cupfuls of sugar, four cupfuls of flour, five eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, flavoring to taste. Rub butter and sugar to a cream, add the beaten yolks of four eggs, put the soda into a little warm water, and add to the mixture; then stir in the whites of five eggs beaten to a stiff froth, the four cupfuls of flour, and roll out on a well-floured paste-board. Bake in a tolerably quick oven. These cookies grow better with age.—Selected.

HINTS ON BREAD MAKING.—Too much salt makes bread heavy. Too long in the oven makes bread yellow. Do not increase the heat after bread has been put to bake.

Bread made with scalding milk and water retains its moisture and freshness longer than when made with lukewarm liquids.

Bread cracks around the edges because it is not allowed to rise long enough.

If yeast is slow about rising, stir in a spoonful of flour—beating well.

HYGIENE.

Typhoid Fever.

BY VICTOR C. VAUGHN, M. D.

TYPHOID FEVER PREVENTED.

I have said that typhoid fever is a preventable disease, and that the large number of deaths from this disease is unnecessary. This is true, not only theoretically, but practical demonstrations are not wanting. Prior to 1859 the city of Munich, in Bavaria, was a veritable hot-bed of typhoid fever. There were no sewers and no public water supply. Most of the houses were furnished with large brick or wooden flues which were built from the cellar up through the different floors. Into these the excretions from the body were dropped and accumulated in the cellars. Other waste material was deposited in cess-pools, and garbage was thrown into back yards. The air in the houses was foul and offensive to the sense of smell. The drinking water was taken from shallow wells in the yards, and these often received the ooze from the cess-pools and vaults. In 1859 the citizens were compelled to seal tightly the bottoms and sides of these receptacles of filth, and later a system of sewerage was introduced, and later still a supply of wholesome drinking water was obtained.

From 1851 to 1859 the typhoid deaths per 1,000 in Munich averaged 24.2. This has been gradually decreased, until in 1884 it was 1.4 per 1,000. This shows what has been done in an old and crowded city, and Vienna has practically repeated the demonstration made by Munich.

ITS CAUSES.

Typhoid fever is due to a germ which is comparatively well-known to bacteriologists. Whether this germ always shows certain characteristic forms of growth or not is a matter about which there are still some differences of opinion, but that this germ or class of germs is the active agent in the causation of the disease, there is no doubt. The typhoid bacillus must find its way into the intestines before it can produce the disease. It is in the great majority of instances carried into the body with food or drink. Some very eminent authorities will tell you that the germ is never contained in the inhaled air. To this statement I should object. I believe that this is an exceptional method, but I am confident that it does occasionally occur. The majority of cases of typhoid fever, however, arise from a contaminated water. That a drinking water infected with the discharges from a person sick with typhoid fever may cause an epidemic of the disease, they can no longer be any doubt. The records of sanitary science abound in histories of such cases. It probably is a safe estimate to say that bad drinking water causes not less than 40,000 deaths in each year in this country.

CAN THIS BE TRUE?

Can this be true? Is our drinking water so frequently and so dangerously contaminated?

A few years ago the discharges from the body of a man sick with typhoid fever were thrown upon the snow on the banks of the stream supplying water to the city of Plymouth, Pa., and hundreds of cases of typhoid fever resulted. Chicago pours a part of her sewerage into the same basin from which she takes her drinking water, and complains because the physicians report so many cases of typhoid fever. The Iowa farmer, with his many broad and fertile acres, often locates privy vault, cess-pool, pig-pen and well in close proximity, and demonstrates that he is not to be outdone by the inhabitant of the city in the amount of patronage which he bestows upon the undertaker. Men and women who would not sit at a table covered with a soiled cloth, drink from costly glasses the diluted discharges of some sick man. It is not pleasant to recite these details, but no one can deny their truth.

EACH MUST BEGIN AT HOME.

One must recognize his own faults before he is likely to make any attempt to improve himself. Like charity and all other good things, one's activity in sanitation should begin at home. See to it that cellars, back yards and outhouses are clean. If there be any doubt about the plumbing being in perfect order, call in a competent man, and remedy any defects which he may detect. If there be any suspicion in regard to the water supply, boil the water which you drink. On the whole, I think it best to boil the water anyhow, and then you may investigate its character afterward. See to the ventilation of the house. Do not take the air from the cellar. Get the air from out of doors; the supply is more abundant there than elsewhere. Ascertain whether or not your milkman is diluting his milk; and, if so, ask him to use boiled water in the dilution. You may be willing to pay him seven cents a quart for water; but it is not unreasonable, if you are doing this, to ask him to inform you of the character of the water for which you are paying.—Independent.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Peas.

Our farmers must pardon us for making frequent allusions to the importance of planting peas. The season for "laying-by" corn is at hand; every available space should be filled with this crop. The expense of the crop is little, except the seed—sowing broadcast at last plowing of corn—and yet for the Southern farmer on his thin lands he plants no crop, where there is the same benefit derived from it. Clover may give a like result as a benefit to the soil, yet clover can not be planted as peas, not under the same circumstances in corn. The pea and the leguminous plants are nitrogen collectors. They have the power to fix atmospheric nitrogen in the soil. They add value to the soil instead of depreciation. The cereals, root crops, corn, cotton, etc., are nitrogen consumers. They are exhaustive crops; hence the value of the pea crop to the farmer.

The question is often asked, Will the crop be of the same value to the land if the vines are removed, as if they should not? Certainly not. The Experimental Station of Alabama made the test and found that the vines contain several times more in weight than the roots. The comparative value on one acre in dollars and cents of phosphoric acid, potash and nitrogen was, for the vines, $26.35, and that of the roots, $3.15. This plainly shows the value of the vines to the land. If anyone should use the total amount, $29.50, on fertilizers to the acre on his farm, he would be frightened at the cost; yet, as a fact, peas are adding an increased value at every planting to his land. The finest strawberries we ever saw followed a pea crop. The best tomato crop we ever had was a crop following a very heavy pea crop.

Many farmers say they would plant the crop for forage, were it not so difficult to cure. This we have learned to be an easy matter when once prepared for it. Prepare the overhead of a barn or any other building or covering, with one by four-inch lumber or small poles, so that the space between the pieces of lumber or poles will be about three inches apart. Cut the pea vines in the morning, and when well wilted and dry haul them to the building prepared as mentioned. Pile them in the building, it matters not how deep, provided holes can be made through as hereafter mentioned. Three or four days after putting up the vines, take a piece of timber or pole two inches thick, sharpen and push it through the vines from under side three or four times to the square yard. The vines being well wilted, the holes will remain open and allow all the gas and heat to escape. Upon this plan we have saved the finest pea-vine hay we ever saw. One point particularly about it: all other plans we have tried caused the loss of the pea leaves; this saves them all.

Time.

The young man that spends an hour each evening in idleness and lounging around on the street's corners will in one year have lost three hundred and sixty-five hours, which, if they had been properly spent in reading good books, would have made him a much wiser and better man.

In this age there is no excuse for being ignorant. Books are cheap and numerous. It does not require a college course to make a man wise. Poverty need not prevent a young farmer from spending, at least, one hour each day in reading and study. It is the constant and imperceptible growth that makes the mighty oak which can stand the storms of ages. It is likewise the mind which each day acquires some new thought, some new truth, becomes wise, great and useful. How precious, how precious is time; it is the gold of life, the wealth of eternity.

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

Join the Church.

No man or woman professing to follow Christ has any right to stay outside the church organization. All such should belong to some branch of Christ's church. The Lord Jesus has declared himself to be the head of the church. He founded it, having bought it with his blood. He appointed its ministers and its ordinances. It is clearly his will that it be perpetuated; and no one who regards his commands can afford to shirk his part in its maintenance. He has directed that his followers be baptized in his name; that they partake of bread and wine in company in remembrance of him; and that they forsake not the assembling of themselves together for his worship and for mutual aid in his service. These things could not be rightly attended to, nor could a vigorous effort be put forth for the salvation of the world, without a definite organization under proper officers and leaders. The privileges which the church provides are great, admittedly so, and no one has a right, as we look at it, to appropriate these privileges without sharing also in the burdens and responsibilities which they involve. No one can go to heaven alone, unless circumstances beyond his control combine to isolate him wholly from his fellow-believers and his fellow-men.

Since, then, whoever loves God will want to make it known, will want to work for him, will want to be in the society of his people, and will want to obey his commands—all of which things are best compassed by connection with some branch of his church—it is evident how perfectly valueless is the declaration of great love for God on the part of those who shun the church; except, indeed, so far as "invincible ignorance" and dense darkness may suffice to excuse them for this as for any other palpable wrong-doing.—Exchange.

Sectarian Appropriations.

Protestants stand in the way of their own interests and of purity of government when they accept the pittance of public moneys thrown to them as a sop to close their months against the large appropriations to Roman Catholics. The Northwestern Christian Advocate on this point says: "It is stated that the State of New York appropriated to sixteen Roman Catholic institutions, in 1890 alone, $1,079,986, and to all other institutions of all other churches, in the same year, $946,649. These figures express exactly the sums to which neither Protestant nor Romanist institutions were entitled. We are almost more concerned about the sum given to Protestants. The pittance given to each of these effectually shuts their mouths, and proscribes protest against that which was given to Romanists by politicians for political ends. No one should wonder that 'secularists' and infidels protest also. Such misuse of public funds tends to strengthen the cause of the infidel against all churches."

The Work of the General Conference.

In our judgment the late General Conference wrought well, in the main, both in what it did and in what it left undone. Its work in behalf of the Epworth League is especially praiseworthy. The time had arrived when a forward movement was demanded. The opponents of the movement were simply fighting a cyclone. We bespeak for the Epworth League Board the hearty co-operation of both pastors and people. No work in which the church can engage is of more vital importance than its work in behalf of the young. We confidently expect large results in this field in the near future.

The advance movement in the cause of education is also eminently worthy of commendation. This movement was not, like the Epworth League legislation, in response to a popular demand. There was no public clamor for such legislation; neither is there, so far as our observation goes, any strong sentiment in its favor among the masses. Indeed, we suppose that if such a measure had been submitted in advance of the General Conference to a popular vote, the result would have been adverse. This does not prove, however, that the legislation is unwise.

The District Conference and lay representation did not come into being in response to a popular demand; yet the wisdom of the legislation which introduced these new features into our economy is universally conceded. Other instances of a happy prescience on the part of the law-making power might be adduced. So we believe it will be in this case. We do not look for large results in the immediate future; but we believe that with anything like skillful manipulation of our educational machinery, the wisdom of this legislation will be made more and more manifest with each revolving year. Methodism must educate her sons and daughters, her ministers and her laymen, or else she must retire from her commanding position and occupy a very humble seat in the synagogue of the coming century. And if we are to educate, we must have a system of education. Our various institutions of learning need to be correlated. There ought to be something like a uniform standard in schools of the same grade. The present chapter on education is merely a beginning in the right direction. Changes will be made from time to time at the bidding of experience, until in the course of years we shall have an educational system worthy of the sons of Wesley. Methodism as to her polity has always been characterized by great flexibility. She has ever adapted herself to her environments. So she will continue to do. In the educational field, as well as elsewhere, she will meet the demands of the age. We verily believe that in the next generation no work of the General Conference of 1894 will be regarded as more wise than its work in the cause of education. We say this without reference to the matter of making appropriations to Paine and Lane Institutes. This we believe to be a mistake which will be rectified in a short while.

In the temperance cause we think the General Conference of 1894 simply carried to completion the work begun in 1886.

The change of the ratio of representation from one in thirty-six to one in forty-eight is a wise move, as it will make the General Conference a much smaller body.

As to federation we have already spoken. To what we have said we will only add that we regard the action of the General Conference of 1894 on this subject as only the initial step in a movement which is destined to have a glorious consummation. We believe that future General Conferences will enlarge our policy of federation until it shall include not only Episcopal Methodism, but other branches of the faith as well. Yea, we believe that the time will come when all the great evangelical churches of Protestant America will confer together with reference to the common weal and with reference to the conquest of the world for Christ.

As to the transfer of the licensing of local preachers from the Quarterly to the District Conference, we believe, as we stated before the General Conference began, that this measure will result in an increased efficiency of our great army of local preachers. The new machinery may not work smoothly at first, but all will be right in the end; and the time will soon come when we will wonder why we did not take this new departure sooner. So we believe. To those who doubt we only say, Wait and see.

Concerning what the General Conference did not do we may speak at another time.

From Labor to Rest.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has lost one of its leaders, Rev. J. O. Peck, D. D., corresponding secretary of the Missionary Society, who died in Brooklyn on May 17. He was a man of pre-eminent abilities. He was a preacher of remarkable force, and as a pastor he had few equals. Concerning his work as missionary secretary, we clip the following from Zion's Herald:

No officer of any bank or business institution of any sort was more faithful in his work at the desk than Dr. Peck; he was systematic in all the details of business, and had a horror of leaving anything undone that could be attended to. It was his custom to clear up the docket of each day before leaving the office. Added to this was the field work of visiting the Conferences, district conventions and missionary meetings, and preaching missionary sermons and assisting in taking up the collections almost every Sabbath. His voice has been heard from Maine to California and from the Canada border to the Gulf of Mexico. Like too many of our great public men, there can be no doubt that he overtaxed himself and drew too much upon his reserve forces; but he wrought gloriously, and his work is well done. He will hold an imperishable place in the history of the church he loved and which sincerely mourns his too early departure.

Vitality in Discourse.

BY PROF. T. W. HUNT.

All true expression, oral or written, essay, address, dissertation and sermon, should be interiorly vital. It should be full of life-living and life-giving, pervaded with quickening energy, impulsive and expulsive, proceeding from opening to ending, with an ever-accelerated momentum, and so fixing itself in the innermost heart of the reader and hearer. All genuine discourse is possessed of the vis vivida. It is spirited and inspiriting, stimulating all dormant faculties and feelings, and, because full of the very life itself, sending the pulsations of life throbbing through the souls of men. Here, again, how we rebuke, in this essential, much of the secular and sacred discourse of the day, in its lamentable lack of vital force! How much mechanical, artificial, soulless authorship! How much unnatural and unpardonable lethargy in the composition of pulpit productions; manufacturing discourses, as we say, rather than composing them under the best and strongest impulses of the heart, when feeling is at its fullest, when "the fire burns" and we must give utterance to that which is in us.

On the secular side the one quality or principle that will best express what we here mean by vitality is, personality. A writer is vital when he expresses himself in his full measure and in his own way. He may lack this or that, may pass to this or that extreme, but he will never fail in such instances of being cogent and impressive. The bane of much of our discourse, at this point, is servility. We think in the thoughts of others, and therefore artificially. We speak in the words of others, and therefore dependently. Mere interpreters or automatons, we surrender what identity we have, and are therefore impotent. Personality is power. On the sacred side this quality comes to its best expression in Christian personality, in character, in spirituality. Other things being equal, that sermonizer is the most vital who is the most spiritual. Sermons that are characteristically spiritual are thereby living. It is the spirit of power that is in them and in their respective authors as they pen them. Given the presence of this divine agent in the heart and the presence of a distinctively saintly character in the man, what limit should be placed to that specifically vital quality which the sermon should exhibit? It should fairly beat and throb with life, while those who read it and hear it should be spiritually kindled and fired, and incited to all that is good. In the light of such a homiletic essential, what a goodly list of names confront us! We note but a few: Knox and Latimer, Whitefield and the Wesleys, Baxter and Payson, Larned and Summerfield. These men were, in the best sense, possessed; on fire with zeal for God and the truth; writing, as they wrote, from the soul out; and, with all their faults and shortcomings, never guilty of the sin of lifelessness.—Homiletic Review.

NOTES.

Rev. Henry M. Smith, D. D., editor of the Southwestern Presbyterian, of this city, from 1869 to 1899, died in Bay St. Louis on June 4.

***

Money contributed to the Kobe Industrial School will be well invested. Let our people gladden the heart of Sister Lambuth by aiding her in this noble enterprise.

***

It is our opinion that the General Conference of 1894 dispatched more business in a little over two weeks than the average State Legislature or the United States Congress dispatches in as many months.

***

Our thanks are due and are hereby tendered to somebody for a copy of the Vanderbilt Register for the session of 1893-4. Vanderbilt is a noble institution, and should be the pride of every Southern Methodist.

***

The Union Gospel Mission, of this city, is greatly in need of funds. Open-air meetings for the Summer are in contemplation; but the work can not go on without money. Contributions should be sent to E. A. Vail, 163 Camp street.

***

"How does the new plan of entertaining the General Conference work?" is sometimes asked. Admirably. Nobody wants to go back to the old plan. The new plan gives more time for committee work and in other ways facilitates business.

***

Mrs. Harmon, wife of Dr. J. W. Harmon, of the Mississippi Conference, died on Sunday last at the residence of her son-in-law, S. S. Cope, Paulding, Miss. The funeral services were held at Central Church, Meridian, on Monday afternoon, Rev. W. W. Hopper officiating. The interment took place Tuesday at Jackson, Miss.

***

Rev. H. P. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, had a family reunion a short time since, at which all his children and grandchildren, seventeen in number, were present. The youngest grandchild was baptized by the grandsire. It was said to have been a very enjoyable occasion. May the family circle remain unbroken for many years to come!

***

Rev. J. W. Chambers, of the Mississippi Conference, formerly financial agent of Millsaps College, has accepted the presidency of Whitworth College. Bro. Chambers has been eminently successful in the pastorate. He has also had considerable experience as an educator. He is a graduate of Centenary College. We bespeak for him a prosperous career in his new field.

***

Rev. H. M. DuBose, we learn, has tendered his resignation as editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate. His facile, sparkling pen will be greatly missed by his brethren of the tripod. Highly cultured, sunny-souled and magnanimous, he has, during his brief career as a journalist, endeared himself to the editorial fraternity. Our best wishes will attend him in his new field of labor, whatever it may be.

***

Rev. J. W. Honnoll, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been re-elected president of Malone College for a term of five years. We congratulate Bro. Honnoll upon the success which he has achieved in his new field. Although without previous experience as an educator, he has now an enviable reputation as a college president. The institution enters upon a new scholastic year with gratifying prospects.

***

An esteemed brother recently sent us two dollars to renew his own subscription and eight dollars to pay for the ADVOCATE for persons who are unable to pay for it themselves. This is an example worthy of imitation. We know of no way in which money can be invested to better advantage than in sending a good religious paper into homes where none goes. May the blessings of God rest upon our brother and upon his contribution!

***

The Chautauqua movement is still spreading. The following Southern States now have Chautauquas: Tennessee, Texas, Louisiana, Florida and Georgia. Alabama has also fallen into line. Her Assembly is to open July 24 and close Aug. 9. In the list of incorporators are found the names of a number of the leading citizens of the State, both clerical and lay. The editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is on the programme for two addresses.

***

A biography of Rev. W. E. M. Linfield is to be written by his son, R. P. Linfield, who will be thankful for material in the shape of facts or incidents. Dr. Linfield's numerous friends in Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana will doubtless take pleasure in complying with this request. Dr. Linfield was a preacher of pre-eminent abilities. In his prime he had few equals in the Southern pulpit. We request the Alabama Advocate and the Nashville Advocate to publish the request of Bro. Linfield. His address is Fayette, Miss.

To Our Brethren.

We have entered upon another four years of work for our Publishing House. We purpose to do during this term of office what we have ever done since the agency of the House was first committed to our hands—to give our undivided attention to the business with which we are intrusted. This we understand to be the primary condition of our employment, and, having accepted the trust, we do not set it forth as virtue in ourselves to comply with this condition. We shall give the House our whole time, our best thought, and be diligent in our endeavors for its maintenance and development. But as we have said many times, of ourselves we can do nothing. Without the sympathy and co-operation of our brethren our efforts to maintain and build up our House will end in failure. We owe a great debt for the thoughtful support of our brethren in the past. They remembered that they had set us to work for them, and not for ourselves, and they worked with us, encouraged us, and helped us forward. The result was creditable to them and to us, and beneficent to the church. We freely admit that we are greatly gratified that our part in these labors was so appreciated that we were returned to our places. Our desire is intensified, if that could be, to show ourselves worthy of such honor. Brethren, we are yours to work with you to the utmost of our ability for the accomplishment of the purposes for which our House was established. But remember it is with you. Give us your hands, and let us make mutual pledge of truth to extend as widely as possible the usefulness of our House, and to make it a constantly growing monument of the public spirit and unity of our church.

The conference of coal operators to attempt a settlement of the strike have adjourned, having accomplished nothing. The conference passed resolutions deploring the fact that the Southern operators refused to meet with those from Northern Illinois, and announced that the latter were ready to fix a scale fair to all operators.

Pueblo, Colo., was visited, on May 30, by the worst flood in its history. Several thousand people were rendered homeless and property was damaged to the amount of probably $300,000, although it is impossible at this time to estimate the exact loss. Four breaks in the levee on the north side and two on the south side have flooded the town. The disaster has been caused by a continuous downpour of rain.

Senator Caffery has given notice that he will move to amend the Rivers and Harbors bill so as to authorize the expenditure of $10 000 "in removing obstructions from Grand river and Pigeon Bayous, forming part of the Bayon Plaquemine route;" also, to amend by appropriating $350 000 "to connect Bayon Plaquemine with the Mississippi river by a look," and to appropriate $5,000 for improving Bayou Grosse Tete, from Rosedale to its junction with Bayon Plaquemine.

The delegates to the Constitutional Convention to be held in Hawaii have been peaceably elected, and it is probable that a constitution will be regularly framed and adopted and a republican form of government inaugurated, to succeed the provisional arrangement entered into at the time of the overthrow of the old regime.

A Popular Elocutionist.

MRS. J. W. REYNOLDS, OF ELKTON, OHIO, RESTORED TO HEALTH.

Mrs. Reynolds, the well-known elocutionist and authoress, says she has suffered with congestion of the lungs, catarrh of the head, and was troubled with a bad cough. She had tried a number of physicians, but they all failed to cure her. She was induced to try Pe-ru-na, and immediately a marked change took place. After using Pe-ru-na her cough ceased, and in a short time her other ailments were cured. She is now completely restored to health, and gives all the credit to Pe-ru-na.

Speaking of lung diseases, Dr. Hartman says in a recent lecture: "For the multitudes of people that I treat annually for every imaginable form of throat and lung disease, Pe-ru-na is my invariable prescription. People come hundreds of miles, at great expense, to consult me for acute and chronic coughs, to return home with some advice and a bottle of Pe-ru-na, which they can continue to get at the nearest drug store; and the fame I enjoy in the treatment of such troubles comes from the use of this wonderful compound."

A free book on chronic diseases of the lungs, chronic catarrh, etc., sent by the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

Sunday-School Conference, Grenada District.

The first session of the Sunday-school Conference of the Grenada district met at Pittsboro, April 27-29.

On arriving at this charming little town, we found all doors thrown open and homes ready for our reception. We are sorry to say but few of the ministers were present.

We feel that it was "good to be there." For, while we were permitted to enjoy the many good things prepared for us to eat, our souls were made to feast on spiritual food. It was indeed a "time of refreshing."

Our esteemed presiding elder, Bro. Burroughs, was on hand with his words of encouragement; in consequence of which everything was done in "decency and order." We realize that "to know him is to love him."

Bro. Thomas being absent, the opening sermon was preached by Rev. E. P. Craddock.

Questions of interest and importance in reference to the Sunday-school were discussed and some resolutions were passed.

On account of the lack of interest on the part of teachers and pupils, especially during Winter months, and of the want of vitality in the Sunday-school work, it was resolved that there be a Sunday-school Teachers' Institute held for the Grenada district at the time and place of the District Conference.

Sunday morning our hearts were made to rejoice while attending an old-time love-feast, as different ones, with voices of praise, told of God's goodness and mercy to them.

A Tonic for Nervous Prostration.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. A. E. CAROTHERS, San Antonio, Texas, says: "It is the best tonic I know of in debility and nervous prostration, with sleeplessness, caused by mental overwork or prolonged lactation."

Important!

Rev. H. E. Partridge writes us the District Conference for Seashore district will begin June 13 instead of June 20, as in his notice of last issue. The mistake arose from some confusion of dates in his mind. We presume this will also change the date of the W. P. and H. M. S. meeting, which was to occur during the District Conference.

Rates to Seashore District Conference.

The N. O. and N. E. R. R. will sell round-trip tickets to Ellisville to persons attending District Conference at one and a third fare (four cents per mile) from points between Meridian and New Orleans. In buying tickets ask for special rate.

A FORTUNE LOST.

It was not at Monte Carlo or Baden Baden, but at home, in her own house, when her system broke down under the strain of Uterine trouble, that her fortune and good health were lost. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC restored it rapidly by its wonderful influence and tonic power.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

Notice.

To the Preachers of Meridian District—

Brethren: Please send me a list of your delegates that will probably attend our District Conference, which convenes in Shubuta, June 21. We want to know who of you will come by private conveyance. That all may be present at the Sunday-school Conference, I hope you will come on Wednesday. Of course we expect you, Dr. Black, as you belong to us all.

D. P. BRADFORD, P. C.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. C. Calloway, Enpora, Miss.: "Allow me to announce through the ADVOCATE that my health has sufficiently improved to enable me to work some. If any of the brethren need my service, they will please address me at Enpora, Miss."

Rev. H. C. Brown, P. C., Whitting-ton circuit, May 31: "I closed a twenty days' meeting at Coalville Church last Sunday night. The power of God was manifested in the salvation of souls. While all of the results will not be revealed until the great day, yet some fruits were given unto us. Sixty persons were converted, four entered into the experience of entire sanctification, and thirty-three united with the church. Over 90 per cent. of those converted now testify and pray in public and have family altars. We have yet five more meetings to hold. Pray for us. We are indebted to Bro. Van Valkenburgh for a week of faithful work."

Rev. E. F. Edgar: "Our people of Thomastown, as well as many others, were highly entertained on the night of April 25. The entertainment was given to aid in building a new Methodist Church at Thomastown, which consisted of a lecture by the very distinguished and facetious 'Gilderoy,' an elegant supper furnished by our noble women, and delightful music. The occasion was a very enjoyable one indeed every way. The lecture was 'on the marriage relation,' and proved very highly interesting, often provoking great laughter, and again profound seriousness. It was truly characteristic, and superbly enjoyed by all. The financial result was very gratifying, amounting to about eighty-five dollars. This will go far towards helping a very worthy people to build for themselves a suitable house of worship. May the Lord continue to bless and prosper all who help in this cause!"

Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, Utica, Miss., May 14: "Rev. Joe J. Jones, assisted by Rev. F. M. Keen both in the singing and preaching, has just closed a thirteen days' revival at Utica. The good that was done can not be estimated. The church, all branches, and community never needed religious revival and moral uplifting more than when the meeting began. The very worst element dominated our town with their pernicious influence, defying law, moral and civil. Bro. Jones, by plain, practical and fearless denunciation of sin in high and low places, in the church and out of it, brought about a change in the town government and in the morals of the whole community. Thirteen united with the church, and, with but few exceptions, all the backsliddden and those who had broken the rules of the church by card playing, dancing, drinking, swearing, and in any other way publicly, confessed their sins, renewed their vows and pledged themselves to consistent membership. I heartily endorse Bro. Jones in his great work and commend him to the church as a faithful, conscientious Christian, earnestly desiring her good and the salvation of sinners. If thirteen days—from two to three sermons daily—is any test of a man, I must say that Bro. Jones has been misrepresented and unjustly criticised by the public. A member of the Mississippi Conference heard him, and had but this to say: He is not rough as I expected; not Joe Jones as represented to me. Bro. Jones did me good, and his more than brotherly kindness to me during my long-continued illness will not soon be forgotten. God bless him and Bro. Keen for faithful, earnest work and for the great good they have done in Utica!"

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE PARABLE OF THE TARES.

(Matt. xiii, 21-30; Ps. xv, 1-5.)

Reciting parables is spiritual portrait-painting.

1. True preaching is sowing gospel seed. This makes us responsible for

(1) The enlargement of the acreage. Extension of the field.

(2) Proper tillage of the soil. Some preachers are said to be incomprehensible on Sunday, and invisible during the week. Visit much.

(3) The use of authorized seed. The gospel. Neither more nor less. Away with politics and political economy in our pulpits!

2. Christ speaks of the pernicious influence of an "enemy." This is Satan, operating as a diabolical trinity in unity.

(1) Satan is the chief of wicked spirits. Very powerful. (See Job.) Almost omnipresent by means of his subalterns. The embodiment of malignity. "Hath great wrath."

(2) The world. Satan the owner. Offered to give it to Christ. He manipulates it to his advantage.

(3) The flesh. Is Satan's beast of burden.

3. The enemy had sown tares. Weeds are plentiful.

(1) Debauched public opinion.

(2) Hypocrisy in social life.

(3) Vanity, pride, ostentation.

(4) Sensuality, carnality, dishonesty.

(5) Unholy strife among the so-called followers of the meek and lowly Jesus.

4. Our authority for disciplinary regulation is here explained. Preachers are not licensed executioners.

(1) The servants ready to gather and to destroy the tares. Righteous indignation because of existing wickedness is natural.

(2) The Master enjoins, for the sake of the wheat, to spare temporarily the tares.

(3) Less ado made about worldliness and more emphatic extolling the life in Christ would work wonders. The wheat remains wheat notwithstanding the tares.

(4) The Master declares that the present removal of the tares might injure the wheat. Harshly disciplining the husband, you will lose his wife. Lose the parents, if you lovelessly treat the children. It is only to prevent blood-poisoning that amputation is being resorted to.

(5) On the last day God will appropriately dispose of the tares, as well as the wheat. The former shall be burned. Shall be precipitated into the bottomless pit, where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth. The wheat will be gathered into God's barn.

Thanks.

I hereby return thanks to Bros. Monnger, Downer, B. F. Jones, Dr. F. Caruthers, Delas Peels and others who have contributed to our building church fund. Work on our church has begun in real earnest, and, if our funds do not run short, will be pushed to completion. H. P. LEWIS.

Good Character Important.

Besides the happy satisfaction that a clear conscience and good character bring to every heart, it has a commercial value that it is well to take into consideration. For instance, B. F. Johnson & Co. of Richmond, Va., are advertising in this paper, and offer specially good business opportunities to men of character and standing in their respective communities. They want parties to work all or part of their time, as may suit their convenience.

What Ails You?

If you have sudden darting pains in the joints or muscles, and it recurs every time you get cold, and appears in new places without leaving any of old ones, the best thing to do this is to send five dollars to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, for a month's treatment of Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism. They will send you two large bottles of their remedy by return express. If you have the above symptoms, you have the Rheumatism, and should begin at once with the known cure. Delay with any disease is dangerous—with Rheumatism it is simply suicidal. Agents Wanted.

The new joke in Congress is said to be this: It consists of a pretentiously bound volume, which is banded around. It is entitled, "What Congress Has Done." The cover is carefully worded, but the inside pages are perfectly blank.

HOME CIRCLE.

"NOT STRANGERS THERE."

BY FRANCES L. MACE.

To whom would heaven's door so freely open
As to a little child,
Who stands with timid feet upon its threshold,
Lovely and undefiled?

And such a one of late was lowly lying,
With fast-receding breath;
Over her face the first, last shadow falling—
She was afraid of death!

Her loved ones said, "O do not fear to enter
That land so wide and fair!"
To all their words of cheer she could but answer,
"I do not know them there!"

But even as she spoke her hands were lifted
In sudden, sweet surprise,
And the reflection of some dawning splendor
Illumined her wondering eyes.

No longer clinging to her tender watchers,
And darkened by their woe,
She looked as if she saw some loved one beckon,
And was in haste to go.

What she beheld we saw not; and her rapture
Our hearts not yet might share;
But with a last bright smile she whispered gladly,
"There are not strangers there!"

The Boys Who Are Wanted.

I want all the boys, and all the girls, too, to read this and see if they are like Harry. Do they try to make things easy for mother? Do they help carry mother's burdens? Do they notice if there is any water in; if mother has wood to cook the dinner? O children, do try to make things easy for mother! Now read this slowly.

"Come, Harry! it's seven o'clock, and snowing fast," called his mother from the foot of the stairs.

"Yes, mother. Why didn't you call me before? There'll be the paths to sweep before school, and I like to do them before breakfast."

"I thought you were tired, dear, and needed a morning nap."

"Please do not humor me in that way, mother; you know I'm the one to take care of you."

It did not take Harry long to dress that morning, although he did not slight his simple toilet; neither did he forget to kneel down and ask God's help upon the beginning of the new day; but he was out of bed with a bound, and his fingers flew fast.

"No drones in this hive, are there, mamee?" he said, running down stairs and giving his mother a resounding kiss.

"Shall I have time to do anything before breakfast?"

"No, dear; the bell is just going to ring."

"Excuse me, please, mother, this morning," Harry said, as he finished before the rest. "I want everything easy for you before I go to school."

A happy smile was her only answer; but she said, as the door closed behind him:

"Dear boy! I believe that is the motto of his life—'I want to make things easy for mother.' He's never too tired or busy to help me. He's solid comfort."

"He's solid gold; a boy worth having," said Uncle Ned; "I wish there were more of them."

Harry found the broom and began sweeping the snow away on either side of the path with a will. Suddenly looking up, he saw a lady watching him from across the way.

"Good-morning, Mrs. Martin," he said, lifting his hat. "Isn't this a royal morning for work?"

"I should think you thought so, my dear," she replied. "You seem to make easy work of everything. How does it happen?"

"Oh, I don't know, ma'am. Boys ought to be ready for everything, I think. Work comes easy to me; I'm young and strong, you know."

"So is Jamie; but he makes a fuss over everything he does. I wish he could catch some of your spirit. You'll make your mark in the world if you keep on as you've begun, Harry."

"And I mean to, Mrs. Martin, if God spares my life. I must make things easy for mother, you know."

Mrs. Martin sighed. "I wish Jamie felt so," she said.

"Perhaps he don't feel the need of doing, because you're rich, Mrs. Martin. We're poor, you know; but we shan't always be so," and Harry's broom flew faster and faster over the frozen ground.

"Excuse me if I talk and work too," he said. "Mother needs me in the house before school. I have to be boy and girl too, you see."

"Don't you find that pretty hard, my child?"

"Oh, no! I don't like wiping dishes as well as sweeping snow, to be sure; but that's no matter. I never stop to think what I like; it's what's got to be done to save mother."

"Bless you, my boy! Don't you ever think of yourself?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! I'm a selfish cub anyway; but I'm trying to do better every day, and it's easier since I asked God to help me before I begin."

"Are you a Christian, Harry?"

"Oh, yes'm! I've belonged to the army of the Lord just a year, and it's been the happiest year of my life. Fighting Satan and sin is great fun when a boy sets about it. I don't mean he shall conquer, Mrs. Martin. I like to knock him a blow whenever I can. Good morning."

Mrs. Martin stood looking after the brave, bright boy, who had already begun to be a blessing in the world, until he disappeared out of sight.

"Those are the boys who are wanted," she said. "Those are the boys who are wanted."—Presbyterian.

Heed This Law.

The warden of one of our State penitentiaries said to a visitor that almost the first expression of dissatisfaction on the part of a new prisoner was called forth by the routine and monotony of prison life.

Some men show intense feeling against it for the first few weeks of their confinement; but after two or three years it seems, in some cases, as if they could not do without it. The warden had known discharged prisoners to return and ask for work inside, just "to get back to the regularity of prison life."

Captains of sea-going vessels and officers of the army observe the same trait of human nature. The discipline, the inflexible routine, which are irksome to the raw recruit and to the sailor in his earlier voyages, obtain so firm a hold on their minds and habits that they prefer not to live outside of them. Jack goes back to his ship and the soldier re-enlists until each grows gray, or death takes them. Some of Bonaparte's marshals, men of low birth, had learned in their youth vulgar tricks of the eye, the hand, grimaces and foolish laughter. Even the emperor and his brothers and sisters were not guiltless of such habits. He could not rid them of these signs of childish vulgarity. They could not rid themselves of them. He could make them kings and queens, and they could handle their sceptres right royally; but old habits ruled them still.

A century ago, John Vaux, a young man making "the grand tour," wrote: "I was impatient to plunge into the dissipation of Paris. I had not, however, counted on the hold which old habits had upon me. They had been cleanly. Every act, word, or familiar custom of my pure English life at home held me now like an iron cord. I could not plunge into the foul depths. I wished to do it, but I could not."

There are few young men who do not wish to make their lives solid and enduring. Let them remember that this inexorable natural law is equally strong in good as in bad habits.

Every high, pure aim in his father or mother; every honest, modest custom of a young man's home; the cleanly life of his boyhood; the prayers he learned; the habits of reverence, of kind, unselfish action—these are as so many stones in the rampart which shall defend him in middle age from storm and ruin.—The Youth's Companion.

BEN'S COMPLAINT.

I am the youngest of the lot,
The latest born of six;
I often wish that I were not—
It's put me in a fix.

"He's mother's baby!" mamma's name
For me, a boy of eight;
At this I often blush for shame,
The name I truly hate!

I better like papa's plan,
I think my papa knows;
Alond he cries, "He's father's man!
Why, bless me, how he grows!"

I can not make my mama know,
Nor can I make her see
How big I am, how fast I grow;
"Her baby" she calls me.

And what discourages me more,
And often puzzles me,
My mama says when I'm a score,
I'll still her baby be.

How to Cure Fickleness.

A correspondent is in trouble—trouble of a serious, but not an uncommon sort. He writes:

"No matter what I take in hand, I soon tire of it. I am an experienced mechanic; have worked many years at my present trade; but a wandering inclination—a constant hankering for change—makes it impossible for me to concentrate my energies upon my work. The result is that I have never acquired first-rate skill, and consequently can not earn first-rate wages. My natural capacity is good enough, but this fickleness of mind, much as I fight against it, seems likely to be my life-long curse.

"Can you tell me, as well as thousands of other readers, how to acquire the ability to stick to one thing? If so, you will do us an incalculable favor."

Evidently our correspondent needs no homily upon the mischievous effect of fickleness and indecision. So far he is better off than some of his companions in misery. Now if he will really be free from the slavery into which he has fallen, let him begin at the beginning, and set about acquiring, little by little, the habit of acting according to reason instead of listening to every idle breath of impulse and passion.

There is no jumping into such a habit. The very word implies something to which a man must habituate himself. The will, like the memory of any other faculty, is to be strengthened by exercise. Let him begin then to exercise his will—in other words, to act decidedly, both as to matters in general, and, especially, as to the matter of his daily employment.

He has settled it that his present occupation is one for which he is well fitted. Very well. Now let him act accordingly, treating all impulses to change as so many temptations to foolishness. What if he has forty such impulses every day? He may still keep at his work, determined to excel in it.

The gymnast may feel never so lazy as he strips for his hour of exercise; but if he keeps at the pulley-weights and the dumbbells, his muscles will be strengthened, his lazy feeling to the contrary notwithstanding; and the probability is that he will not work very long before his listless mood will have passed away and been forgotten.

Let our friend who wishes to strengthen his will, follow the same course. What he has to fear is not so much idle impulses as idle actions. His impulses, it may be, he can not help; his actions, like the gymnast's, are within his own power.

Whether it be a man's arms or his will that is under discipline, the result is a question only of time and patience.—Youth's Companion.

Our Boys.

There has been so much said and written lately about what a girl should read and what she should not read, and so many warnings that such and such studies are all right for boys, but should be shunned by girls, as "her head is not to be educated at the expense of her heart," that we have come to wonder if the male members of the race were supposed to have no heart.

We do not like to shut them out altogether from this precious possession; indeed, we can not do so, as here and there we meet with men who give such indisputable proof of the fact that they have not all run to "head," that we must admit that Adam's heart was not the "rib" that was taken from him of which to form Eve. Then, since a boy has a heart, why is it that its development is so utterly neglected? How does it come that we are so anxious that all the tenderness of our daughter's heart be carefully nurtured, and our son's left to harden till he comes to think it unmanly to admit that he has a heart? I would like to put in a plea for the boys.

If God gave a boy and a girl alike a heart, he intended the one to be as loving and tender and sympathetic as the other, and if people would only give both an equal chance the one would develop as naturally as the other. But instead of teaching a boy to cultivate the heart qualities, mothers, while they may not actually try to repress them, so utterly neglect their culture that the boy instinctively gets the idea that these graces are only for women; and so that he may appear manly he trains himself to laugh at another's pain and appear indifferent where he should show only loving sympathy.

Is it not time, then, that we were looking into this matter a little, and if certain books are going to destroy the tenderness of the sister's heart, then to keep them from the hands of our boys. Will the Judge of all the earth hold the father or mother guiltless who have turned aside these young feet from or even neglected to guide them into the path made by the footprints of him whose "new best name is love?"—M. I. K.

A Story for Boys.

Mr. Perry was a Southern gentleman, exceedingly polite and a very temperate man. One day he met an acquaintance, who called out: "Halloo, Perry! I was just going to get a drink. Come in and take something."

"Thank you," said Perry. "I don't care for anything."

"But," persisted the other, "come in and take something just for sociability's sake."

"I want to be sociable," answered Perry. "I am anxious to be sociable, but I can't drink with you."

"All right," growled the friend. "If you don't want to be sociable, I'll go without drinking."

The two men walked silently along for a minute or two, the sociable man in a state of great irritation, until Perry suddenly halted in front of a drug store.

"I'm not feeling well to-day," said he, with a pleasant smile, "and I think I'll go in here and get a dose of castor oil. Will you join me?"

"What!" exclaimed the other, "in a dose of castor oil?"

"Yes, I'll pay for it."

"Ugh!" cried the sociable man, with a wiry face. "I hate the stuff."

"But I want you to take a glass of oil with me just to be sociable, you know."

"I won't do it."

"Indeed, my friend," said Perry, gravely, "your sociable whisky is just as distasteful to me as my oil is to you. Don't you think I have as much reason to be offended with you as you have with me?"

The sociable man saw the point, and it would be money, health and morals saved if the lesson could be firmly implanted in the mind of every young man in the land.—Exchange.

One hard truth for us to master is that we are not always to be the judge of the success or failure of the impression that we have tried to make. This is especially true of work with children. Those of us who have children of our own have often been startled by questions asked concerning things talked of in their presence, when we thought they had paid no attention whatever, even when we wanted to impress them. We are too apt to think that this is only true of things that we do not want them to hear, but it is not so. Because this is true we should be extremely careful what we teach them and how we do it. Isaiah (lv, 10, 11) says: "For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater; so shall my word be, that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." This promise will encourage us to stick close to his word.—Christian Worker.

Get the individual to work, and you will get the multitude to work; for each individual who becomes an efficient worker will continue to be one, and after awhile the whole lump will be leavened.

gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as inoperable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.
TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations.
PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.
STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting.
STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE SHADOW OF DEATH.

The Sunday school of Jefferson Street M. E. Church, South, Natchez, Miss., has recently lost three of its members by that dreaded malady among children, diptheria. The first to leave us was

ALMA WEST. She was born on March 4, 1887. Her parents, Mr. H. F. and Mrs. Emma West, had dedicated her to God, and were bringing her up to love and serve him. She was rapidly developing in that direction. The first of this year, when others were forming new resolutions for the new year, she entered into the spirit of the season and expressed a determination to live nearer to God this year. But the Lord translated her to a better world. She entered into life eternal, after patiently suffering twelve days, Jan. 24, 1894. Just two months after Alma was taken sick her sister,

MARIE WEST, was stricken with the same disease. She was born Oct. 27, 1888. Though so young, she loved the Sunday-school, and generally accompanied her parents to church every Sabbath. She did not seem to want to get well, saying on one occasion that her sister was gone and she had no one to play with. After ten days of suffering the Lord took her to himself. Her body sleeps beside that of her sister in the cemetery; but Alma and Marie are together in heaven, and will be there to welcome their parents when God shall take them.

RUTH ELINOR FITZPATRICK was born Dec. 29, 1886. She had been a member of the Sabbath-school for several years. A healthy, bright and happy girl, she had a smile for everyone she met. She, too, had been baptized, and was a child of the church. She had just joined the "Trueheart Torch-bearers," a juvenile missionary society, and had made arrangements to make her own money for the society. Suddenly and violently she was attacked with the prevailing disease, and, after four days of suffering, entered into rest. Her mother, who was ill at the time, did not see her after she was taken sick, but she will see her bright little girl again in a better world.

The death of these little girls so near together, and so nearly of the same age, cast a gloom over our Sunday-school. May the Lord comfort the sorrowing parents and lead us all to a closer walk with God! W. B. LAWIS.

Natchez, Miss.

BROWN—WILLIAM LOUIS BROWN, son of W. R. and Olivia Brown, was born in Jackson county, Miss., Oct. 2, 1866; died at Bartow, Fla., May 11, 1894. This is the record of sense and sight. Faith has another.

"Born again," never to die, when this child of earth "passed from death unto life" by faith on the Son of God, and henceforth became a member of that immortal family one day to gather in the "house of many mansions," where the heavenly Father shall be the head of all; the "Elder Brother," Jesus, shall glorify the home circle by his presence; and all the brethren and sisters that love has gathered in the ages shall be assembled no more to be scattered or lost. This is the exalted destiny, the "high calling," of those who become "children of God by faith in Jesus Christ."

Not all walk worthy of this grand vocation. He did. For pure, generous unselfishness, for unwearied service for others, and for bright and genial companionship few have equaled, fewer have surpassed him. Such rare souls die not. They live down here in the undying memory of loving hearts. They live in the "works" that "follow them." They live in the glory land to carry on a higher service than any earth can furnish.

GEO. O. BARNES.

BARNES—Bro. W. G. BARNES went to be with him whom he had loved for many years on March 2, 1894. He was born in Robinson county, N. C., Oct. 22, 1814; came to Mississippi in 1831; joined the church in 1834; was converted while on his way to camp meeting at old Crystal Springs. He left home to go and find Jesus, but found him in the way. Was married in 1838 to Miss Eliza M. Risher.

Born and reared in a Christian home, and recognizing his obligation, he ceased not to offer prayer and praise morn and night during his long life. His Christian character was emphatic, his faith steadfast, his hope full of joy and peace. His life was a sacrifice for Christ, and was made more perfect each year. He loved everybody, and lived such a holy life that all knew him to be a leader of the hosts of Israel. He died as he lived—rejoicing, shouting, with the city of God in full view, and simply fell on sleep to go and be with Jesus, who he longed to see. He left a wife and nine children. W. T. GRIFFIN, Pastor.

FORTNER—Mrs. E. B FORTNER went to her home Feb 18 1894 from the earthly home of her son, H. T. Fortner, Terry, Miss., at the age of seventy-seven years ten months and twenty-seven days.

Sister Fortner was born March 2, 1816, in Tennessee; moved to Mississippi in early girlhood; was a member of the M. E Church over sixty years. One by one God is gathering those who love him home.

For several years she had been blind, but her spiritual eyes were opened to see more clearly into the hidden things, and she grew in grace. She loved the church and God's people, and was never so happy as when one of the tried and true ones would visit her and talk about God's dealings with his people. She had a very social disposition; was a good neighbor. Her last hours were hours of peace. She was simply "trusting Jesus," and said she would soon be in heaven, and sweetly fell asleep to awake on the sunny shores of everlasting life, and is watching and waiting for the host of loved ones left behind, some of whom are on their way up there. May God so move upon them that the others may be soon found in the way!

W. T. GRIFFIN, Pastor.

TUCKER—Rev. ISAIAH TUCKER, son of Isaiah and Melissa Tucker, was born in East Baton Rouge parish, La., May 14 1855, and died in Waco, Texas, March 28, 1894.

At the age of fourteen he was regenerated and joined the M E Church under the ministry of Rev. Epaphroditus Simmons. Shortly afterward he felt it his duty to preach the gospel, but owing to his limited education at that time he thought it impossible to do so, and tried to dismiss the matter from his mind. But, finding he had either to preach or endanger his own salvation, he applied for and received license at Adams Church, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, in 1886. From that time till his death he exercised his office as a local preacher as opportunity afforded. On May 31, 1890, he was married to Miss Mattie A. Beall, of Amite county, Miss., to whom were born two daughters. To his last moments he was resigned to God's will, and died in the triumph of his faith.

He left behind a wife, two children, a mother, three brothers and many relatives and friends. His brother, J. N. TUCKER.

DAVIS—Died, in Brandon, Miss., May 4, 1894, little ELIZABETH, infant daughter of J. L. and Georgie A. Davis, aged seven months.

Little did I think the last time I saw little Elizabeth that the time was drawing so near to hand, as she seemed to be the very picture of health; but God knew what was best and has taken her to make up his jewels in heaven. Though the little darling's stay upon earth was short, she had closely twined herself around her parents' hearts, being a perfect child in every way. She was too pure and beautiful for this earth, and God has taken her.

Dear parents, dry your tears; little Elizabeth is only transplanted to bloom forever in heaven's soil. Our Father has many ways to wean our hearts from the world. May this dispensation draw you nearer the precious cross of Jesus! Your ties in heaven are strengthening. EUNICE L. W.

PIPES—Mrs. COADMANNAL PIPES was born in St. Helena parish, La., Dec. 14, 1829, and died at the residence of her son, Rev. Thos. W. Pipes, in Lincoln parish, La., May 15, 1894, aged sixty-four years. She was married to Charles Pipes, March 4, 1847. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church soon after her marriage, and to her death she was a consistent and zealous Christian, walking worthy of her high calling, and testifying to the efficacy of the blood of Christ to save from all sin, and that he had kept that which she had committed to him.

A large congregation of sympathizing friends, with weeping children and relatives, followed her remains to its last resting-place.

JNO. A. MILLER.

Ruston, La.

ATKINS—SUSAN F. GILMORE was born May 7, 1836, in Danville county, Va. She was married to John H. Atkins, Feb. 13, 1861. She joined the Presbyterian Church when about seventeen years old. She united with the Methodist Church after her marriage, to be with her husband. She died May 8, being fifty eight years and one day of age. She suffered a great deal physically, especially the last three years. She leaves three daughters and one son, who is a local preacher in our church, and a husband who is quite old and feeble.

May God bless those who are left behind and comfort them in this great hour of need is my prayer. Their pastor, C. W. PERKINS.

Tyro, Miss.

MORGAN—JOHN A. MORGAN was born Oct. 26, 1836, and died near Abbeville, Lafayette county, Miss., May 4, 1894.

He had been a professor of religion and a member of the church for thirty years. He leaves a grief-stricken wife and three daughters and relatives to mourn his death. A great many friends and neighbors followed his remains to the grave, where the writer noticed the funeral and burial service. May God succor the poor blind, heart-broken widow and orphan children, and bring them all together in the morn of the resurrection, never to be again separated! BEN P. JACO, P. C.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

The cranks who tried to build a tower whose top would reach to heaven have never ceased to have a respectable following. Men still try to build Babels, and always with the same result; the builders are confused and scattered. There is but one way, and there will never be another. Jesus is the only ladder connecting earth with heaven on which the angels of God ascend and descend—ascend with our prayers, descend with blessings.—Inland Advocate.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

How many families are impoverished to make the brewers rich, and how many men are made drunkards to roll up this vast wealth! The New York World gives a partial list of millionaire brewers of New York City, stating their wealth as follows: George Ehret, worth $15 000,000; Jacob Ruppert, worth $10 000,000; Peter Doelger, worth $7 500 000; James Everard, worth $5 000,000; estate of Henry Clausen, Jr., worth $5 000 000; Anton G. and J. C. G. Hupfel, worth $2 500 000; and Bernheimer and Schmid, worth $5,000,000. These figures show the enormous profits of the beer business, and also where much of the money, especially of the workingmen of the city, who are so largely patrons of the beer saloons, has gone to in the last twenty-five years.

One Phase of the Character of Christ.

The meekness of Christ is recognized, the gentleness of Christ has been fully portrayed, the popularity of Christ among the common people is well known; but there is one feature of his character presented in one great fact of his life that has not been so fully brought out. While he invited the weary, comforted the mourner, healed the sick, and freely forgave the penitent, he defied and denounced the Scribes and Pharisees. He boldly proclaimed open war with that class of society. The antagonism was sharp, prolonged, and irreconcilable. It was this active, open war waged by him that aroused the enmity, opposition, persecution and murderous hatred of these people, resulting ultimately in his death.

This was bad policy on his part. These were the leaders of society, the moulders of public sentiment, the influential ruling class. To oppose them was to put himself in a hopeless minority, and expose himself to the taunts of the rabble, who were controlled by these leaders. To put himself in this position would sacrifice his reputation as a man of sound judgment and insure the desertion of the prudent, the peaceful, the conservative and the aspiring. He must break with the better class of society, and depend on creating a sentiment before he could secure a following, which was a hazardous and almost hopeless undertaking.

Why should this be done? Could not prudence and fidelity be so combined as to secure larger results and less opposition? What hope could he have of reaching a class whose hatred he excited by his severe denunciation? After he had denounced them as hypocrites, would they ever love him?

The reason for this deliberate hostility to this class of people is found in the fact not simply that they were bad (others were bad—as bad as they were; others hated and rejected him), but these were teachers, his rivals in the leadership of religious thought. Rejecting the authority of Moses, they substituted the authority of themselves; they taught in their own name; they made void the law by their philosophy. Claiming a purity they did not possess, they made a party and went into power on its shoulders. Professing to seek the public good, they used the deluded public to advance their own interests; they were political religionists; they used the arts of the politician to secure popularity and power; they sacrificed principle for personal advantages; they were consummate hypocrites; corrupt, foul, impure within; polite, elegant, moral without; members of the church, children of darkness, teachers of morality, murderers of true piety, advocates of the public good, feasting upon spoils, whited sepulchres, glittering dross, polite knaves.

Against these false pretenses the honest, frank, brave soul of Christ blazed and burned with the intensity of divine purity. The infinite depths of the awful Godhead are stirred into wrathful indignation, and the fierce lightnings of terrible denunciations flash to light up and expose the dark caverns of hidden corruption. The blessed Christ could speak kindly to the poor, fallen woman thrust into his presence by those who had tempted her to ruin; he prayed for the deluded crowd that mocked his death agonies, saying, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do;" he saved the dying thief and pardoned repenting Peter, but he had no compromise, no soft word, no let-up for the hypocritical Scribes and Pharisees. He did not forget them when he stood before Pilate declaring that their sin was greater than his—'He that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin."

He that has the mind of Christ will be like him. Self must die, ambition must perish. Honesty of soul will impel the man into an aggressive war upon all that is false, and empty, and deceitful. An intense hatred of sham and pretense will drive him into collision with the hypocrite, and render him unpopular with the false, whose secret corruption he exposes. He touches with the spear of Ithuriel, and falsehood lies exposed in hideous mass. The maledictions of his foes are the tokens of divine favor. The man who has no enemies among the bad is as hopelessly lost as he who has no friends among the good. The life that does not draw the devil's fire will not harm the devil's kingdom. The soul that does not hate and expose hypocrisy must sacrifice its own integrity and self-respect. We must fight to win.

"The Marriage Law."

Under the caption of "The Marriage Law," the Vicksburg Post contains the following facts touching this important subject:

By the code of 1892, for the first time in the history of Mississippi, the common law on the subject of what constitutes a valid marriage has been changed, so as to require the issuance of a marriage license as an essential to the validity of the marriage.

No marriage, however publicly and solemnly celebrated in any church by a regularly ordained priest or minister of the gospel, is valid without the prior issuance of a marriage license by the circuit court. Such a marriage is absolutely null and void, and the children of such a marriage are illegitimate.

This is a very drastic and severe law. No emergency or exigency or urgency is so great as to excuse the failure to get the license, and no circumstances of whatever character can render the marriage legal, or give it the least validity or binding force.

On the other hand, the very singular incongruity presented by the code of 1892, is this, that it does not require any public ceremony or celebration of the marriage as a condition of its validity. And this is a common law marriage, provided only that the parties first procure a license. In other words, if the two parties first get a license, and then verbally or in writing agree that they are married, then they are lawfully married. But if they do not get a license, although they are married in a church full of people by an ordained minister of the gospel in the most solemn manner, then the whole ceremony is worthless, and such a marriage is void.

Prohibitory Laws in the Past.

A historical retrospect of the legal efforts to control and restrict the use of spirits suggests an evolution and growth that has not been considered before. Outside of biblical literature, whose teachings and laws are so often quoted, a remarkable chapter of legal enactments and restrictions can be traced. Beginning with the fragmentary inscriptions found on Egyptian papyri and monuments, and extending to the codes, philosophies and enactments of the greatest philosophers, rulers and judges of Grecian and Roman civilization, there is a continuous record of prohibitory laws and restrictions concerning the use of spirits and drunkenness. The laws of the Spartans were far more absolute than any modern enactments, and were also remarkable for the clear comprehension of the nature of spirits and their action on the body. These laws were active for many years, and were highly commended.

English history contains many records of prohibitory, restrictive laws, some of which were very prominent for a time, then fell into disuse. Laws of similar import have followed the path of civilization from the earliest dawn and wherever spirits have been used. They have been urged and defended by the greatest philosophers, teachers and leaders of civilization.—From "Should Prohibitory Laws Be Abolished?" by Dr. T. D. Crothers, in The Popular Science Monthly for June.

A Hint to Preachers.

Rev. D. M. Stearns, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal Church, Germantown, Pa., is setting an example which it would be well to follow. He has a remarkable grasp of the gospel, believes most intensely in the verbal inspiration of the Bible, looks with longing gaze for the coming of his Lord, and is a tremendous worker. A letter has just been received from him, in which he sets forth the blessing that has fallen upon his Bible classes, and the extraordinary interest awakened among them in foreign missions.

"The increasing interest in the simplicity of the Word, as presented to these many classes, and the development of the missionary spirit, leads me to think, I trust by the Holy Spirit, that the Lord would have all competent Bible teachers to let him use them in this way. Look at the last four months just closing, January to May. Fifteen Bible classes with an attendance of over 3,000, and twelve of them with an attendance of, perhaps, 2,400. I meet with them every week, and in these four months they have given over $4 500 to missions. One day, in the offering of one class, I found three gold $20 pieces; another day a diamond ruby ring, worth at least $60, was given; and from another class came diamond ear rings, worth fully $100. Now, let scores of ministers, who know the Lord, permit him to use them thus, and think what he might do for the Book and missions to hasten his return."—The Truth.

It Went for the Widows and Orphans.

Mr. Frank Rigge, of Washington, is quoted as saying that Mr. Pickett, who sold the archives of the Confederate government to the United States, and has been heartily anathematized in the South for doing so, did not make a dollar by the transaction. "The facts have never been told," said Mr. Rigge, "for Mr. Pickett exacted the strictest pledges of secrecy from my father in regard to the disposition of the money. But both of them are dead now, and there is no reason why the truth should not be known. Mr. Pickett never had the benefit of one penny of the money he received from the government for those records. He deposited the entire amount, as soon as he received it, in our bank to the credit of 'George W. Rigge, trustee for,' and it was distributed in small amounts among the widows of Confederate officers. Mr. Pickett made out the list of the people to whom he wished it sent. The checks were all signed by my father. Each one was accompanied by a letter, which he prepared and which my father signed, saying that the inclosure was forwarded at the request of a gentleman who felt an interest in their welfare, but for reasons of his own desired that his identity should not be disclosed. The account was carried for several years, and all the checks and vouchers are now packed away in our bank."—Picayune.

Royal Recognition.

Isaac Pitman, the father of phonography, and George Williams, the founder of the Young Men's Christian Association, were last week knighted by the Queen. Mr. Pitman is eighty-two years old. He issued his first book on phonography when he was twenty-four years of age, and since that time has published eighty volumes on the subject, among them a complete translation of the Bible into phonography. He still edits the Phonetic Journal. Mr. Pitman is a vegetarian and a devotee of phonetic spelling. Sir George Williams is reported to have made a speech a few days ago, in which he says that the Queen's knighting him is a tribute to the growing power and influence of the Young Men's Christian Association.

In 1859 there was not a convert in Japan. In 1884 there were nearly 7,000. In 1859 there were no copies of the Bible, but in 1883 57 593 parts of the Bible and 20,368 Bibles or Testaments were distributed. There were two weekly papers with a circulation of 2,700 each in 1884. In 1886 there were about one hundred evangelical churches in Japan, twenty of which were self-supporting, and ten others of which received no foreign aid. There were also schools and colleges and a number of seminaries. In 1892 there were about two hundred churches in Japan.—Guardian.

Gambling and Drinking.

The practice of gambling—so fatal to character and often destructive to the soul—commonly begins just as drunkenness begins. At the bottom of the first glass of wine or other intoxicant lies the adder; and underneath the first dollar staked on a game of chance, or a horse-race, or a ball-match is concealed a serpent. When a young man puts up his first wager at a card-table, or any game or race, he puts a coal of fire into his bosom; and such coals often kindle into conflagrations which "will burn unto the lowest hell!" Gambling for a dime is as essentially a sin as gambling for a thousand dollars. There is always a first inch at the top of every precipice.

We do not declare that everyone who plays a game of whist is a gambler, any more than that everyone who drinks a glass of wine is a tippler. Yet cards are dangerous articles, just as wine glasses are; and it is the path of absolute safety to let them both severely alone. All games of chance have a strange fascination. Archdeacon Farrar truly remarks that "there is a gambling element in human nature," and it must be kept under watch in the same way as inborn sensual appetites are watched.

With the excitement of a game of hazard comes a strong temptation to risk a stake on the game; as soon as the stake is laid, conscience is apt to go with it, and the devil takes a hand in the game. A winner increases his stakes; a loser plays on to make up losses; and the only safe way, therefore, is to stop before you begin.

Card-tables and pool-rooms are not the only places where gambling is practiced. Tens of thousands are tempted to take a small risk in mining stocks or some other volatile "securities" that are playing up and down on 'Change. I have known a half-dozen boys—of respectable families—to "pool" their pocket-money in a venture on a share or two of stock.

It is time that every young man banished that heathenish word "luck" out of his vocabulary. Life is never a game of chance; and God never intended this world to be a vast "pool-room" in which success or failure turns on a throw of the dice. Let us not only aim to put race-tracks and pool-rooms under the ban of prohibitory law, but let us teach our young men that every dollar gained except by honest industry is, in the end, a loss, and will eat into the soul like fire!—Rev. Dr. Cuyler, in N. Y. Evangelist.

In Rome, Also.

It is singular to contemplate the spectacle of an impressive Methodist dedication in the Eternal City, with Bishop Newman as the special preacher of the day. Other of our churches have been set apart for worship in Rome, but this particular dedication was quite out of the common.

We congratulate the Pope upon the good fruits of a free gospel from a free country upon the Holy See, and upon all Italy. Time was when it was not allowed to hold "Methodist meetings" under the shadow of the Vatican. The present contrast is so great that we scarcely wonder that Rome begins to announce its conversion to liberty. Little wonder, too, that it is really trying to teach republicanism to native Americans. Let the good work go on. One of the most golden points in the matter is that the present Pope is the most liberal of his race, and that he may wonder why we are so greatly impressed by the occasion of which our non-bishop was the center. No evangelical sermon has ever attracted more attention in Quirinal or Vatican. Some things are being straightened out in this world. We wish the straightening might advance at all points in Chicago also.—Northwestern Advocate.

I have no faith in that woman who talks of grace and glory abroad and uses no soap at home. Let the buttons be on the shirts, let the children's socks be mended, let the roast mutton be done to a turn, let the house be as neat as a new pin and the home be as happy as home can be. Even then there will be room for those little deeds of love and faith which, in my Master's name, I seek of you. Serve God by doing common actions in a heavenly spirit, and then fill in the cracks and crevices of time with the holy service.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Higher Critics Should Agree.

The following summary of the various theories, invented by Higher Criticism with regard to the origin and authorship of the various books of the Bible, is given by the late editor of the Methodist Review. It is worth reading by those who are disposed to follow the teachings of this baptized infidelity, because it will make it easy for them to heed the injunction, "Pay your money, and take your choice."

Grand total of the theories respecting the Old Testament books, 539. The work of the theorist, as regards the New Testament, is equally comprehensive and instructive. The number of theories applied to the New Testament books is 208. Adding to 539, we have a total of 747 theories applied to the biblical books since 1850, or within forty years. Of the 747 theories, 603 are defunct, and many of the remaining 144 are in the last stages of degeneracy and dissolution.

Comparative Religions.

Rev. James Johnston has convicted Prof. Max Muller of the grossest dishonesty in editing "The Sacred Books of the East." He charges and proves that the Professor has omitted large portions without the slightest intimation that these have been left out, and, therefore, making a totally false impression as to the character of these books. "When challenged, the Professor frankly admitted that he had left out portions for the very sufficient reason that if he had translated them as they exist in the originals, he would have been persecuted for publishing obscene literature." Yet these are the books lauded to the skies at the Parliament of Religions amid the clapping of white-handed American women.

The Christian Observer has this remarkable statement about Dr. Talmage's Tabernacle: "It is a singular coincidence that Dr. Talmage's Tabernacle should have been destroyed immediately at the conclusion of the twenty-fifth anniversary sermon, that it is the third time that it has been destroyed, and that all three of the fires have occurred on the Sabbath day. It is also a notable coincidence that Dr. Talmage's church appears on the roll of the Northern Assembly as the banner church in the matter of congregational selfishness. With a membership of 4,447, among whom are millionaires, it may be multi-millionaries, it does not report a single dollar for foreign missions, for home missions, or any cause of general benevolence. On the contrary, not many months ago, it was publishing appeals in the newspapers to the good people all over the land to come to its aid with small contributions to help it in meeting the mortgage on its property. One is almost tempted to ask whether these mysterious and repeated fires are sent as an object lesson to teach the churches that there is no pecuniary profit in systematic selfishness."

King Alexander of Servia struck a daring and defiant blow when, by a stroke of his pen, he annulled last week the Constitution which guaranteed the liberties of his kingdom, and restored that of 1869, which confers upon the king despotic power. Representative government, freedom of the press, of speech and of conscience, and the privilege of local self-government are all swept away. Every outspoken opponent to this tyrannical policy has been sent to jail or has fled the country. The radicals are in a majority in Servia, but the suddenness of this coup d'etat has paralyzed them. The king has promised a new Constitution. If he does not speedily grant some alleviation, his kingdom will be rent by civil war.—Zion's Herald.

To the outsider the strike of the Pullman Car Company employees seems ungrateful. The company has been singularly considerate and generous toward its workmen. When the strike was talked about, the officials assured the men that they were running the works at a loss, and offered to let their committee inspect the books in proof. But the employees were stubborn, and demanded the restoration of the old wages as the condition of continuing work. This the managers could not consent to, and the strike followed. Corporations, it seems, are not the only organizations which "have no souls."—Zion's Herald.

An Inquiry.

Who will explain the difference? A Catholic bishop or priest can go into any town or city in Kentucky and deliver a lecture against Protestantism, without the slightest disturbance, or even the thought of such a thing. But let a Protestant, either layman or preacher, deliver a lecture against the un-American features of Catholicism, and he is set on by a mob, unless protected by the police. Witness recent scenes in Maysville, Covington, Lexington and other points. Why this difference? Do Catholics propose to suppress free speech in free America? That would seem to be their purpose, so far as Protestants are concerned. But this will prove a boomerang, and the first thing they know they will find on their hands a bigger case of trouble than they can control. If we do not misread the signs of the times, a point will soon be reached where forbearance will cease to be a virtue, and organized Romanism, which seeks, among other things, the overthrow of our public school system, will be brought face to face with a counter organization, whose chief corner-stone is the protection of these interests, as well as the guarantee of free speech to all alike. Of the wisdom of this movement we do not now express an opinion; it is the fact only to which we refer. Only the other day a Catholic mob in Lexington, Kentucky, attempted to assault Rev. J. M. Taulbee, of the Kentucky Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, while lecturing in that city to an audience of men and women, some 400 in number. That no one was killed seemed almost a miracle, though some were hurt. How long shall this thing continue?—Central Methodist.

Famine in Asia Minor.

In the northeast corner of the present Asiatic Turkey, at the head-waters of the rivers of Eden, under the shadow of Ararat, there is now terrible suffering from famine. For two years crops have been poor, the people, for many years, have been living from hand to mouth, misgovernment and robbery have despoiled them, and now there are, in the city of Erzroom and within fifty miles of there, 100,000 people who know not where they will get the next week's food, and 350 000 in the whole region of the Armenian plateau in the same condition.

Falls excelling in height and grandeur Niagara's cataract have been discovered in Labrador; but we need not go out of our own country to find her most successful rival. In Idaho, according to Prof. G. Frederick Wright, nearly four times as deep as that of Niagara is the gorge down which the Shoshone river pours its mighty volume. The walls tower on either side a thousand feet high. And even above the falls there is a canyon three times as wide as that of Niagara and more than twice as deep. The tourist of the future will not be satisfied till he has gazed upon this surpassing wonder.—Exchange.

General Booth says that people whom the Social Scheme took from the streets, absolutely on the verge of starvation, are now earning from fourteen to twenty shillings a week. At the present time sufficient employment is found for between 600 to 700 men in London to supply comfortably all their wants, and work could be found immediately for 300 or 400 more if some slight assistance, similar to that given by the Camberwell Guardians, were forthcoming.

Ohio is to be congratulated on getting out of a bad situation. Some time ago that State tried the plan of regulating the social evil. The registration of houses of ill-fame and the supervision of the inmates was ordered. The experiment has turned out a dismal failure, the sentiment of the people being strongly averse to the law. The law has been repealed, and the protecting hand of the State taken away from this terrible evil.—Exchange.

The London Telegraph gives the amounts which have been left by will to religious and charitable purposes for six years. In 1888, 1889, and 1890 these amounts aggregated about $5,000,000. In 1891, $6,000,000; 1892 fell below the other years, reporting $4,000,000. But in 1893 the amount arose to $7,000,000.

THOSE EVENING BELLS.

BY THOMAS MOORE.

Those evening bells! Those evening bells!
How many a tale their music tells
Of youth, and home, and that sweet time
When last I heard their soothing chime!

Those joyous hours are passed away;
And many a heart that then was gay
Within the tomb now darkly dwells,
And hears no more those evening bells.

And so 'twill be when I am gone—
That tuneful peal will still ring on;
While other bards shall walk these dells,
And sing your praise, sweet evening bells.

Bishop Galloway Goes Around the World.

By the plan of episcopal visitation, Bishop Galloway is appointed to Western Asia. He starts to his appointment about the first of July; he goes by the Canadian Pacific railroad to Vanconver; he crosses the ocean on the steamer Empire of China, which sails July 16 His first Conference is at Kwansei Gakuin, Japan, Aug. 3. The second at Suchow, China, Oct. 11. In the interior he will visit all of our missions, look into the situation, study their needs upon the ground, also visit the missions of other churches, that he may learn all he can about the workings and prospects of Protestant missions in the Celestial and Sunrise Empires. He leaves China for the west by way of the south, and when he has proceeded on his westward journey nearly 2,500 miles south to double the Malay peninsula, he is only fifteen degrees west of Suchow, where he started, though about thirty degrees south of it, and near the equator. He then turns northwest, and about 2,000 miles brings him to the southern point of British India. Here he remains a few days; then through the Arabian and Red Seas for about 4,000 miles to Suez; now south into the land of the Pharaohs; then north into Palestine to view the ground made sacred by Bible scenes. Then still homeward through Europe; he sails from Joppa, the same port from whence Jonah sailed when he was running away from an appointment he did not like, perhaps mainly because of its distance. The Bishop is returning from an appointment more thousands of miles from home than Jonah was hundreds. He expects to arrive at home about the first of next March.

The Bishop has already been around considerably, and as he gathers as he goes, he will know a thing or two when he gets back. I once heard Judge Mayers say that the Methodist Bishops were the smartest men in the world, or the biggest fools if they are not; for they have the best chance of anybody. Here, he says, is a well-educated young man. He is placed three or four years on circuits in the country; then he has two or three railroad towns in his charge; then he is stationed in a city; then made presiding elder; then he edits the church paper; he attends annually several District and Annual Conferences; then he is elected Bishop; visits Texas, Mexico, California; then Kentucky, Virginia, Georgia and Florida. Now, what is to hinder him from knowing about all one brain can contain? I think the judge is about right on this point.

The Bishop leaves America at a point 120 degrees west from Greenwich. He lands at Suchow, China, 120 degrees east from Greenwich. This gives him 120 degrees the other third of the earth's circumference on the Pacific Ocean. Quite a trip. I wish he would take me along with him as junior preacher on the East Asia circuit this year.

Indian Mission.

On the twenty-first ultimo we held the first separate Quarterly Conference for the Indian Mission. Heretofore it met us in Quarterly Conference on the Neshoba circuit. There is a neat little church-house, with a bell to call the people together. Bro. Cammack, the missionary, has bought 160 acres of land, which is divided into 20-acre lots, for the Indians to settle on, and be convenient to the church and school. The land has been deeded to the church, and to be used by those who build on and use it. Some of the lots—nearly all of them—have been spoken for. The land has not been entirely paid for. We owe something over one hundred dollars yet. It is to be hoped the friends of the mission will send in money to finish paying for it. We need more land, and some land adjoining can be bought on reasonable terms. There are thirty members on the roll. I saw most of them. Nearly everyone can sing, has been trained to sing by note, and they sing very well. Most of them pray in public when called on. The day of our appointment I heard two of them pray, and although I could not understand the Choctaw, I was sure they spoke fluently and with some emotion. One read the Choctaw as I read the Scripture lesson, a verse at a time, and then read the text in Choctaw. Another interpreted the divisions of the subject so they could the better comprehend the sermon as I delivered it. The communion service was a delightful one. The dinner on the ground was a good and bountiful one. Several white families came and brought baskets. The cooking of the Choctaws was a pleasant surprise to me, so nice and tastefully arranged. I think they are as great lovers of coffee as white people.

There has only been one accession this year, but the work is taking deep hold on them. Bro. Cammack has a good interpreter, and another who is somewhat educated, who is beginning to hold meetings and exhort his people. Possibly he is a coming preacher and a good case. S. J. Tubby, the preacher, lives near by the church, and is improving his education. I was shown the two children named Warren Cammack and Mollie Cammack, which show the love they have for our missionary and his wife, who has been an earnest worker in the mission from the beginning, and to whom much of the praise is due for the success thus far.

We hope to have your prayers, brethren, and money enough to uphold the effort of our faithful missionary.

Aberdeen District Conference.

The best District Conference the writer ever attended was the twenty-fifth session of the Aberdeen District (North Mississippi) Conference, which convened in Shannon, Miss., Thursday, April 26, 1894.

The first day—devoted to Sunday-school work—was full of interest. The splendid programme, for a large part discussed by intelligent laymen, would have been enjoyed by anyone who has any interest in this great work of the church.

Only a few hours were spent in the reports from the pastoral charges; but a good programme for the District Conference, prepared by the presiding elder, was enough to fill the two days devoted to this work. Education, missions, religious literature, woman's work, Christian giving, and others were the topics discussed. Preachers and laymen were both assigned these subjects, and the discussions were strong-spirited and spicy.

Rev. J. B. Stone, former presiding elder, was with us. He is at home with us, and we are happy with him.

Bros. H. R. Tucker, J. W. Bell, and J. E Buck, from the Corinth district, helped us with their presence and preaching.

Bro. Bachman was there, and not in vain.

Dr. Cooper, agent of Millsaps College, made us love him, and augmented our zeal for the college. We have joined Kosciusko and Winona in the effort to build R. P. Mitchel Home.

A movement was conceived and a plan established which will result in a district parsonage. It will soon be a reality.

Following statistics were presented for the sixteen pastoral charges: Parsonages, 10; members, 6,130; prayer meetings, 41; family altars, 165; pastoral visits made, 1,662; ADVOCATES taken, 293; new subscribers, 21; Sunday-schools, 54; Epworth Leagues, 4; Woman's Missionary Societies, 10; Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Societies, 7. Vicksburg District Conference.

A combination of circumstances prevent the holding of our District Conference before the last of July; and after consulting with several brethren, I call upon all members of the Conference to meet in Harriston as follows: On Saturday, July 28, at 10 A. M., in a Sunday-school convention; at 11 A. M. a sermon will be preached by W. B. Lewis on the spiritual training of children; at 8 P. M. a sermon by J. N. Tucker on Methodism. The subjects to be discussed are the following: The Office and Work of the Sunday-school Superintendent, The Qualification and Work of Teachers, Every Child the Possessor of Its Own Bible and the Bible in the Sunday-school, How to Secure the Attendance of Our Young People upon the Sunday-school, Sunday-school Libraries, The Epworth League, Education by the Church. Some one will be appointed to lead in the discussion of each subject in a speech, or paper, not to exceed fifteen minutes in length, and the brethren to follow with speeches not to exceed ten minutes in length.

Sunday, at 9 A. M., children's service; 11 A. M., preaching and the communion; 4 P. M., love-feast; 8 P. M., missionary mass meeting.

Monday and Tuesday will be devoted to the regular business of the District Conference, with preaching at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. Let all the brethren come prepared to give all this time cheerfully and heartily to the temporal and spiritual interests of the church in the bounds of the district. The preachers will please carefully write out such items on the disciplinary questions as they wish to go to record. This will not prevent discussion by themselves and the laymen, but will greatly aid the secretary.

Glad Tidings from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: A late letter from our dear sister, Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, written from Culleoka, Tenn., brings the joyful news of a great revival in our church at Kobe, Japan. Many souls are happily converted; among them a number of the girls attending the nucleus of an industrial school she is just inaugurating there, and who have felt some of the soul-winning influence of this gracious mother in Israel. Her heart is echoing the joy of the redeemed to us. With this new seal of God's approval of her cherished project, can we longer delay to give the help and encouragement within our power? This is a good time for votive offerings to our God. Send money and subscriptions—one or both—to Dr. Black, or to Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, at Culleoka, Tenn. Now is the time to speak, even if the money is delayed. J. P. DRAKE.

MOLLIE A. CLARK, Conf. Treas.

Opportunity and Character.

It is not opportunity and the lack of opportunity, not ability and the lack of ability, that makes the difference in the power of human lives for good. It is faith and the lack of faith, character and the lack of character. It is consecration and concentration, and the failure to consecrate and concentrate. It is courage and self-denial over against cowardice and selfishness.

There is a potential hero of faith, a possible prophet of larger truth, in every soul. The door of supreme opportunity swings open to every man and woman, church and nation. In some great moment God stands before each, and says: "Now is thy time! Show what is in thee! Show the world thy vision or thy blindness!" And what makes one great and the other small is, that one grasps what the other passes by. One enters the door of opportunity which the other fails to enter because of the cowardice of unbelief. One looks at himself and falls, while the other looks God and his universe in the face and dares to trust—trust in spite of the stupidity of the church, the mockery and unbelief of the world, the misunderstanding of friends.

Harlan Page, pressed with business cares, battling with ill-health, led a hundred young men into the ministry by consecrating his personal influence to Christ. Every business man has the same Christ and the same opportunity. John Wesley became the apostle of a new dispensation of divine grace to the world; yet every student in Oxford had the same opportunity to gather about him a half-dozen fellow-students for prayer and Scripture study and divine guidance. The noble daughter of William E Dodge has consecrated herself and wealth and time to solving the problem of the poor in New York City; yet many rich men's daughters have the same opportunity. George Muller, beginning in poverty, has built up those orphan homes in Bristol, England, which are a miracle of prayer the unbelief of the world can not gainsay; yet there were other students in the German university where he studied upon whom the same spirit of prayer was pressing. Time would fail me to tell of the many who, through faith, have seen the purpose of God in their day, which the pride and unbelief of the world would not see, and have made them their opportunity.

It, therefore, behooves us each to be about our Father's business, watchful for our opportunities, for the night cometh in which no man can work. In an hour when we think not the Son of man may come to us, in the supreme moment of our life, and find us sleeping on the threshold of a matchless opportunity. It is God's part to estimate the value of our service; it is our part to serve and question not.—George D. Herron, in The Christian Cynosure.

Don't Worry.

A great many hours that might be spent in a better way are spent in worrying. And what about? Some useless thing. Some little sorrow that must after a time turn to joy. Some small care that is like the boy's tiny snowball that was very small at first, but by being rolled over and over at last became so big that he could not see over it. Some unaccountable slip on the path up and over the hill difficulty. Some floating cloud between your mortal eyes and the garish light of the sun through which you can see the blue firmament.

And any one of these little things killed your courage, and you cry out with Job: "Know now that God hath overthrown me, and hath compassed me with his net. And where is now my hope? As for my hope, who shall see it?"

It is so common with the children of earth to make mistakes and then blame God for them, that the sooner they can hold a mirror up to themselves, the sooner will they discover to whom the mischief belongs. God has established laws that can not be broken without ensuing trouble; even in so small a thing as the gratification of the appetite, the silly man indulges in the partaking of food that is hard to digest, and because necessary symptoms of trespass come, he blames the Creator for making for him imperfect work. What mockery that is! The fact is that the laws of health have been outraged, and trouble inevitably comes.

Two roads start from a given point, one seems to be a little more inviting than the other, flowers are blooming at the path, the skies are blue, bright faces smile, and fingers beckon the traveler to partake of the pleasure cup from which ceaseless draughts are to be had.

The other road is hilly, the path is steep, some roses are blooming, but better than that the water of life, clear as crystal, is gushing from the smitten rock, and "the rod of Aaron was budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds." At the start the prospect was gloomy, but it grows easier all the time. And all the way along it is Jesus, and Jesus knows how to make the rough spots plain, and to make the child of God forget the dark clouds; for every now and then there are rifts that show the blue beyond.

The easier path leads to destruction, but the traveler who chooses it from the start can not blame the Lord if life grows hard and difficult to endure. No one can choose evil and expect good, and everyone who possesses common sense must soon discover for himself that no verity has greater claim to his attention than the one that insists upon the existence of a beautiful law of compensation that unfolds like the bud on the rosebush, and shows the beauties that are within. Do good and get good; do evil and reap discomfort, are the inexorable decrees of this law. It is not necessary to have a God to interpret those decrees for those whose eyes have been opened to behold the wonders that surround every one upon the earth.

There is the hint that suggests the danger, it is the unopened eyes that enjoy no beholding. In the unseen world about us there are such grand things that help one to know God. You eat your piece of bread, but how often do you trace its history?

The tiny seed was planted in the furrow in the field; as Jesus told the disciples it can not be quickened, except it die, so out of death springs life, and when the blade has been forgotten in the bearded grain, and the small kernels of wheat have been through the hopper, the flour to make your bread is at hand, and your hunger is satisfied. Who but a God could hide and cover the wheat under the snow, so that in the Spring and Summer it may be developing its perfect life.

If you understand the transitions of the grain of wheat, so ought you to understand the developing of yourself. The storm arises, the winds blow, the rains fall, but God has hidden you in a cleft in a rock, and he has put his hand over you so that the storm may not beat too hard upon you, and by and by when the storms are over you have been kept from destruction, and while you have been hidden (who can hide you in the day of trouble like our God?), you have been growing and developing and been perfected until you will in his time go on from glory unto glory, until you have put on immortality, and then when you see the Savior, not darkly, but face to face, you will know even as you are known. The worries of this life will all have disappeared. And as you look back over the path over which you have come, you will wonder that you had not more faith and less worry about the crooked things that God is sure to make straight.—The Christian Work.

Temptations.

How can we avoid these temptations?

Some temptations can not be avoided; others can. If we have formed the appetite for strong drink, we can in some measure avoid the temptation to gratify the appetite by keeping away from the place where such liquor is sold, and by forsaking the company of those who indulge the appetite.

But there are temptations which can not be avoided. They come without warning; they come unexpectedly. It is our business, then, not to avoid, but to conquer. As Luther said: "We can not prevent the swallows from flying over our head, but we can prevent them from building their nests in our hair." How can we conquer?

First, by having our minds imbued with the principles of God's Word. It was in this way that the Psalmist expected to conquer: "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee." It was in this way that Christ met and foiled the tempter. But with the knowledge of the Word, there must also be a willingness to obey it. Eve knew what God had said to her, but she trusted in the devil's word rather than in God's.

Secondly, by realizing that God's eye is upon us, and that he is near to help and uphold. Others had been doing wrong, but Nehemiah said, "So did not I, because of the fear of God." It was this sense of God's presence that enabled Joseph and Daniel to overcome their temptation.

When we look to Jesus, we can reverently say:

"Temptations lose their power
When thou art nigh."

Strength in Joy.

There is strength in work, strength in rest, and abundance of strength in joy. The prophet wrote, "The joy of the Lord is your strength." To be buoyant in our devotions and religious activities is to evince good spiritual health and to exemplify a spirit which is contagious. No one is drawn toward a gloomy, despondent Christian except in pity and charity, but everybody is attracted by robust, vigorous, cheerful piety, the faith that works by love.

Nothing would help forward the progress of Christianity to a greater extent than hearty, joyous experience among all Christians. Duty would seem a pleasure and pain a sweetness and blessing were the well-spring of joy ever bubbling over in the hearts of God's people. There is no providential circumstance nor environment that would not prove conducive to soul-strength were the unfailing fountain of joy full to repleteness in the souls of all Christ's disciples. A sergeant who had a leg carried away by a shell in the second Bull Run battle, declared himself, though suffering, and hopelessly wounded, to be "the happiest man you ever saw." He lay on the field all night, engaged in prayer. He said: "I prayed, and Christ seemed to come and stand by my side all night; and he comforted me. I felt that my sins were all washed away in his blood, and I do tell you, chaplain, that I forgot all about my wounds for the moment. It was the happiest night of my life." In a few days he was transferred to that land where there is "fullness of joy," and where suffering never enters. His is a good spirit to emulate. We are all dying—not from flesh wounds or limb dismemberment, but from the ravages of disease and slow natural decay. Soon life will end, The grave will receive us. Eternity will be our portion. But rejoice. Let each day be our happiest day, and each hour our best hour. Forget your aches and wounds and troubles. Thank God for every phase of experience. If one thing won't develop the weak side of your character, perhaps another will. In mercy God is trying to make a complete Christian of you. Praise his name. Joy in his goodness. You will become a tower of strength and a world of blessing to others as soon as you learn to "rejoice in the Lord always, and in everything to give thanks."—Michigan Advocate.

Unseen Goodness.

There is more good in most people than we are accustomed to give them credit for. Very many conceal their best feelings, having a sort of shame about them. Or perhaps no occasion offers wherein they can be appropriately disclosed. We do not generally know how much good-will is felt toward us until we come into severe trouble, and that may not be until we die. Men are prevented by a thousand things from understanding the excellences of their neighbors. But God sees them all. And no doubt much that passes for evil in the sight of men is good to him.

We should certainly make an effort, both for our own sakes and for others', to obviate this evil. We should have a keener eye for excellences, and should not be so reluctant to speak about them. Men and women need encouragement. Why should it be so grudgingly bestowed, or so generally withheld? Is it a lurking jealousy, a contemptible envy, an idea that we lower ourselves by raising others, which shuts our mouths? Or is it only a foolish diffidence, and a thoughtlessness concerning what will give pleasure? Whatever it be, it is not good. Let us speak more words of approval and love, and so make this earth a sunnier place to live in.

There is noble doing and enduring all about us, mostly hid away from common view. Few of the truest heroes ever find a chronicler to make them famous. They do not know that they have done anything of special worth. But they have been, nevertheless, fighting a right good fight, giving up their comfort and strength to others with no thought of any special merit or reward. There will come a grand surprise to such souls by and by. To them, amazed and unaware of what they have wrought, the Christ will say: "Well done; ye have ministered to me." It is every way fitting that we do what we can to anticipate these judgments on the last day and get the crowns on the right heads even now.—Zion's Herald.

Silent Voices.

We are often enraptured by the eloquence of speech, and thrilled by the power of music. We mingle in the throng and commotion of human life. But there are sweeter joys and higher pleasures than these. Silence has a tongue more potent than the jargon of human voices.

Go into the sick-room where, resigned and serene, the Christian lies awaiting the summons to come home; the eye, the countenance, the expressive silence tell an eloquent story where no word is uttered.

We saw a frail boy who had never walked a step, whom the people pitied and said, "Poor fellow!" But he was always cheerful, and never complained at his lot, while others, who said he had a hard life wheeling about the room, worried and fretted over many things. And so his sweet and gentle life was an eloquent speech which no words can utter.

Go, then, to the graves where loved ones sleep. Some of them have been there. The leaning stones and touches of time tell the story. But how we recall their unselfishness, their devotion! In the silence they are talking to us, though no words fall on our ears. How ambition and passion are rebuked as we stand by the graves of our dear dead, when dried leaves are rustling, to remind us of our short stay, and where their silent voices, loving, pathetic, tender, are calling us away to the better and eternal life.—Selected.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

HOW TO MAKE CRYSTALLIZED FRUIT.—Make a boiling syrup of two parts sugar and one part water. Scald the fruit in this from one to five minutes, according to size. Roll in powdered sugar and place on a sieve to dry. Fruit so treated is nice to serve at luncheon as a substitute for bonbons.

LEMON TAPIOCA.—Two tablespoonfuls of tapioca soaked over night in one-half cup of cold water. In the morning add one-half cup of cold water and the peeled rind of one lemon. Set on the stove and boil until clear. Take out the rind, add the juice of the lemon and one teaspoonful of lemon extract, one-half cup of sugar, one-half cup of boiling water, a little salt and boil up. Put in a mold to cool and serve with sugar and cream.—Ledger.

HOW TO MAKE CARAMEL CAKE.—One cup of butter, 2 of sugar, a scant cup of milk, 1½ cups of flour, cup cornstarch, whites of 7 eggs, 3 teaspoons baking powder in the flour. Bake in a long pan. Take half pound brown sugar, scant quarter pound chocolate, half cup of milk, butter the size of an egg, 2 teaspoons vanilla. Mix thoroughly and cook as syrup until still enough to spread. Spread on cake and set in the oven to dry. This is good with baked green apples or vanilla ice cream.

BROWN BREAD RECIPE.—The following recipe for brown bread may prove just the one "Hard Times" is in search of:" Three half-pint cupfuls of Indian corn meal, same of rye meal, one-half or two-thirds cupful of molasses (according to taste), sour milk enough to mix (it will depend somewhat upon the kind of meal and the consistency of the milk). It will be better if the milk is solid "honny-clabber," and will probably take about two cupfuls, half a teaspoonful of saleratus stirred in the milk, and a little salt. Steam four hours, taking care not to let the water stop boiling. Set in the oven to form a top crust, if desired. Use no sweet milk.—M. A. S., in Good Housekeeping.

STRAWBERRY SPONGE CAKES.—Thoroughly beat a scant pint of granulated sugar and the yolks of six eggs together, add the whites beaten to a stiff froth, then two teacupfuls of pastry flour and one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder sifted together three times, and lastly two tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Bake in duplicate cake pans. During the latter operation make a soft frosting by boiling one cupful of granulated sugar and one-half cupful of milk until it will drop from the spoon in strings. Pour it into a bowl, add one teaspoonful of flour, and beat until thick enough to spread. Remove one cake from the pan, spread the frosting over, and cover well with strawberries cut in halves; then dust with sugar and place the other cake over. Arrange even-sized strawberries neatly over the top.—London Queen.

HYGIENE.

Consumption Only Slightly Contagious.

Dr. Richardson says that in a hospital for consumptives with which he has long been connected he has never known any of the nurses to contract the disease. From this he argues that it is not contagious. Bacteriologists, however, tell us that in some large cities there is rarely a case in one house but another follows sooner or later. They claim that the germs of the disease are kept alive in the walls, in dust and other places. They seem to ignore the fact that these houses may be very unsanitary in other respects, may be dark, damp, unventilated and fit places for this disease to develop. Now, consumption is only slightly, if at all contagious. The germs are seldom transferred from one person to another. If people were not so ignorant and so selfish there would be no need of this ever happening. The germs do not or only rarely go in the breath; they go in the expectorated matter which may be taken into the system by kissing, or by several other ways of contact, or by the expectorated matter drying up and becoming a part of the dust of the air. If this were always expectorated on soft tissue paper or old rags and put into the fire, or some strong disinfectant, there would be little or no danger. The Popular Science News says:

"It is not necessary to put restrictions upon those suffering from consumption other than to insist upon their expectorating into a rag, and seeing that this is burned. To refuse to do this much for their fellows and themselves when they come to know the facts, is really criminal. It is an utterly false policy that refuses to let tuberculous patients know that they are suffering from such a disease. There are but few of them who could not double their span of life by such knowledge and the care it would engender. Many of them, indeed, would be cured permanently by the resisting power of nature backed by vigilant care. Consumption is not the hopeless disease that some believe it to be. The scarred lungs so frequently found by the pathologist at the post-mortem table attests the fact that a large number of incipient cases wholly recover. Still more would recover but for the barbarous course at present pursued that makes the patient a menace to himself and to others. He incessantly lives in an atmosphere of his own poison that keeps augmenting his troubles daily. The dust of his room is laden with germs that he eats, drink and breathes. All of these could be kept out of his system if he would destroy them as soon as expectorated. But no; he is allowed to go on hurrying himself to his grave, thus hourly sowing the seeds of his own production upon himself."—Journal of Hygiene.

Ice Cream in Dyspepsia.

The report recently in one of the medical journals from a well-known physician of recovery in three cases of gastric ulcer following a diet of ice cream revives attention to the beneficence of this diet in certain forms of dyspepsia. The first patient of the trio was a woman of thirty-five, who had lost twenty-five pounds from inability to assimilate food, and also suffered great pain. She was put on the ice cream diet, and for two months she consumed from one to three quarts daily. By the end of that time she had gained twenty-four pounds and her ordinary diet was resumed.

The theory is that the healthy intestines recover first from the chill of the frozen food, and do the digestive work, giving the diseased membrane rest and semi-insensibility, while the cream affords ample and excellent nourishment. Physicians who prescribe the diet are careful to avoid chemical flavorings, and prefer, usually insist, upon the ice cream being made at home, of pure materials and under the best conditions.—New York Sun.

How She Keeps Well.

I have no time to be ill, so I take time for the little precautions which keep one well. I am always rather hurried in the morning, but not enough to omit my bath and take cold. If, unfortunately, I have taken cold, I know I shall have no time to coddle influenza or bronchitis, so I make myself a hot lemonade, and put on an extra covering on the bed at night. Then in the morning I throw off coverings gradually, until I am cool enough to venture to rise and take the cold bath. That is nearly sure to arm me against further damage. Then, too, I can't give up a day every week or fortnight to nervous headache, so I must give an hour every day to walking in the open air. I try to keep my small belongings in order, and put each thing back in the place I took it from, so I don't wear out my nerves hunting for the button-hook or hair curler. I can't stop the machinery, so I try to keep it in running order.

It is well to know, however, that a cold bath in the morning may benefit young and strong constitution, but is injurious to weak persons and the aged.—Selected.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Bermuda Grass.

Many condemn Bermuda grass because it is hard to eradicate when once it has a foothold on the farm. Our experience with it of about twenty-five years proves that the difficulty of destruction is over-balanced in its value as a farm grass. It has no superior to the Southern farmer. When all kinds of stock eat a forage plant with relish and keep in healthy condition on it, certainly this classes it among the valuable grasses. This certainly is true of Bermuda. Hogs, sheep, cows and horses do well on it. In one respect it has no superior. During dry, hot weather, when all other grasses are about dead and of little value, the Bermuda, in a dry and parched condition will fatten cows and horses. This fact certainly shows its nutritious character. It is well it is hard to destroy, and that it is on many farms. Many farmers are so careless about their stock; in such cases it is a blessing in disguise.

Now, as to destroying it, we do not claim we can do it as easily as some other grasses. Yet we have adopted a method which has never failed, with a little after attention. When it is thoroughly set, and desired to be destroyed, plow the land two or three times in Winter. Plant heavily in oats in the Spring. As soon as the oats are gathered plow again the land, shallow, follow with Whip-poor-will peas. This gives two crops in one season on the land. The following Winter plow shallow again; the next season the Bermuda will be very little in the way, and by a little attention every sprig may be destroyed in that plot of land. If after the oat crop mentioned is gathered, and the farmer has no peas, plow shallow, and let the land remain until dry weather; plow again, harrow and cross harrow, and there will be little grass left living.

One remarkable fact about Bermuda grass: It seems to be a land restorer instead of being a land exhauster. After a vigorous growth of it upon land several years, and then destroyed, much better crops follow than before the grass was allowed to grow. Add to the foregoing the quality of its being one of our best hay-producing grasses, and it seems we can claim for it the highest merits. We will, perhaps, say more of it hereafter.

Crystal Springs Notes.

There have been shipped up to date about two hundred carloads of different kinds of truck from this point. Have been shipping tomatoes ever since May 20. Are now shipping at the rate of six to ten carloads of tomatoes a day. The crop, however, we are all of the opinion, will not be as heavy as last year. Will say more of this crop next week.

Swine Notes.

An industrious, thrifty pig or grown animal is a most excellent muscular power to work over the compost heap or manure pile. Grains of corn mixed in the heap as it is being built is the only incentive needed to call into action this force. If the pig must root, we had much rather he would indulge his propensity here than in the pasture field.

A sow suckling pigs should be fed as she will bear without injury to the pigs. At the same time it is best to teach the pigs to eat as soon as possible, and feed them liberally of such food as is best calculated to produce rapid growth without laying on fat. All evidence points plainly to the fact that young animals give the best return for food.

The larger part of the swine feeding should be done in the Summer or early Fall—that is, if the feeder wants the greatest gain for feed consumed. This should be the great point aimed at—the greatest gain for food consumed. A feeder is always safe in making this one of his objects, whereas when he feeds for a certain time and price his calculations may not be realized.

When the pigs are confined to dry lots they will enjoy almost anything in the shape of green food, a sod from the fence corner, turnip tops that have grown in the pit or cellar, potato parings raw, and many other things that are wasted. If they are in a muddy lot they will enjoy the relief given from wading in the mud by a coat of fresh clean straw. Better use the straw this way than to let it rot down in stubble field, is the writer's experience in this matter.—Southern Cultivator.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

Criticising the Veto.

The Richmond Advocate, of May 31, has a long article from the pen of Dr. Paul Whitehead criticising the veto of the Bishops. He holds that the veto was wholly unnecessary, as the point which the vote aims to guard, viz., the right of a preacher to be tried by preachers, is sufficiently guarded in paragraph 46, which expressly excludes laymen from participation in all Conference action that involves ministerial character.

It is a very readable paper, and contains some very plausible arguments in support of the writer's position. Still, all things considered, we think the Bishops did wisely in interposing their veto. Had they failed to do so, and then excluded laymen from committees of trial, as they certainly would have done, would have caused an amount of snarling such as Episcopal Methodism had never witnessed. This we say while admitting that the principles enunciated by Dr. Whitehead should ordinarily obtain.

Three Successive Steps.

The three conditions of success in Christian work were well laid down by Edward Payson: "Love your work; be diligent in it; expect success." These conditions form three successive steps. The first draws us to the work at the outset. The second comes with growing experience in doing it. Diligence comes with practice, as we get over the clumsiness of first efforts, and find what are for us the best methods. Lastly, the expectation of success is the crown of our growth in the work, and in most cases an indispensable condition of success. Our Lord, in his dealings with his apostles, takes pains to awaken this assurance in them. He tells them to leave their nets, for he will make them "fishers of men." He bids Paul speak boldly in Corinth, for he has much people in that city. He did not look for great results from hopeless effort, nor are we entitled to do so.—Sunday-School Times.

The following from the Washington, Ga., Chronicle, will be of interest to many of our readers:

At the close of the services at our Methodist Church, Sunday morning, the beloved pastor, Rev. W. W. Wadsworth, announced to his congregation that the month of June would end his connection with that church—that he had been appointed by Bishop Haygood to accompany Bishop Galloway on a trip around the world.

Mr. Wadsworth informs us that his trip around the world will cost about twelve hundred dollars. It is the general desire of the Methodist congregation in this place to have Rev. Dr. Bounds fill out the year as pastor of the church, after Rev. Mr. Wadsworth closes his pastorate.

The Darkey in Yankeedom.

"A tempest in a teapot" has been raging in Indianapolis lately. A desirable position in a charity hospital in the city was won in a competitive examination by a youthful and aspiring son of Esculapius by the name of Furniss. This would have been all right if the young M. D.'s cuticle had been of the right color; but as he is an "American citizen of African descent," trouble has arisen. The sick hoosiers in the hospital have raised a howl equal to an old-time rebel yell. An effort has been made to induce the young pill roller to resign; but, having read the Constitution of his country, he knows that no difference ought to be made on account of "race, color or previous condition of servitude," and so he proposes to fight it out on that line if it takes all this Summer and several other Summers. The patients threaten to leave. That would probably make very little difference to the managers if the patients were all charity patients; but, as quite a number of them belong to a class who add largely to the revenues of the institution, there is trouble in the camp. If this had occurred "away down South in Dixie," what a howl would have gone up from the Northern press! As it is, "we shall see what we shall see."

Dr. W. C. Bass.

Rev. E. N. Rowe, D. D., of the Virginia Conference, has been elected president of Wesleyan Female College, Macon, Ga., Dr. Bass, the former president, having resigned on account of ill-health. Mrs. Alice Cobb, who has been a member of the faculty for many years, is associate president. We clip the following concerning the Wesleyan commencement from the Wesleyan Advocate:

In many respects this was one of the most satisfactory and enjoyable commencement occasions the college has ever given to its patrons and the public, yet there was a shadow that dimmed its beauty and made solemn its exercises. We allude to the fact that this was the last occasion of the kind over which the present, and for so long a time, president, Dr. W. C. Bass, will preside. Any allusion to this would always bring a hush over the crowded audiences, and a tear to the eye of the hundreds of admirers of this grand man. He has been connected with Wesleyan as professor and president for thirty-five years, and has done more for female education than any other living man. The Board of Trustees, so loth to give him up, unanimously elected him professor emeritus of the evidences of Christianity.

We heartily endorse what the Wesleyan says of Dr. Bass. Few men have served God and their generation better than he. Hundreds of homes in Georgia and other States are purer and happier on account of the impress of his fine Christian character. Very few men have contributed as largely in proportion to their means for the diffusion of the benefits of a Christian education. Many of his brethren of the itinerant fraternity have been able through his munificence to educate their daughters, when otherwise they could not have done so. Nor are preachers the only beneficiaries of his liberality. Aspiring young womanhood has ever found in him a friend indeed. And his benefactions have been bestowed in such a quiet, unostentatious way that they have not been trumpeted to the world. The Board of Trustees have done the right thing in giving him an emeritus professorship.

Old Rip Still Alive.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate criticises the statement by Dr. Henry Wade Rogers that the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1844, was a separation, not a secession. We have long thought that Rip Van Winkle was dead; but it seems that he is alive and editing one of the leading papers of the M. E. Church. The man who denies the simple fact of history stated by Dr. Rogers is much more belated than old Rip was when he woke from his famous nap.

Minimum, Average, Maximum.

Christians, or at least church members, may perhaps be divided, like ancient Gaul, into three parts. There is the minimum Christian, the average Christian, and the maximum Christian. The three types will be readily recognized.

The minimum man is seeking how to get to heaven as cheaply as possible, whether it be in point of purse or personal self-denial. A number of important points as to worldly amusements and other such things do not seem to be quite clear to him, but he always gives himself the benefit of any doubts, and he is quite certain that it is not his duty to be peculiar. He knows, of course, that he can not serve both God and Mammon, but he sees no harm in being on friendly terms with the latter potentate, and he is found in the lodge-room decidedly more than he is in the class-meeting.

The average Christian does rather better than the brother just described. Instead of refusing to give anything at all to missions, he puts down fifty cents as his annual subscription toward evangelizing the world. Instead of being found in church two or three times a year, he is, as a rule, in his seat, unless it should be very hot or very cold or pretty sure to rain, or unless he is extremely tired. He does not smoke—that is, as a habit; he indulges in a cigar only once in a while, and then feels rather ashamed of it, so much so that he pulls it quickly out of his mouth and throws it away if he sees his pastor coming. He certainly has a conscience, and though he does not always attend to its monitions, he does not sin without pretty soon repenting of it and purposing to do better. On the whole, he is improving, but it must be confessed his progress is slow.

Mr. Maximum is altogether different. When the contribution box or subscription paper comes around, he does not ask, "What is my share?" or "How little will answer?" but, "How much of the Lord's funds is it his will to use just here?" His seat at church is never vacant when it is possible for him to be present. The pastor can depend upon him for support in any and every good work. He is not seeing how little he can do and yet not miss heaven; he is planning for an abundant entrance. He has an ambition to receive the heartiest kind of a "well done" from the Master's lips. He does promptly every known duty, and he is perpetually inquiring what more he can do. He is making rapid advancement in the divine life, stretching forward in the race for the prize of his high calling.

Happy is that church which has at least a few of this last class of Christians! They have always been rare, and we fear always will be. Reader, where do you belong?—Zion's Herald.

About Rasps.

A rasp is a good thing in its place, and may sometimes be used to great advantage; but there is no sense in a man carrying a rasp and rubbing it across the nose of every man he meets. He may think it shows his independence, but it only shows his impudence and lack of sense. These raspy people are generally the most sensitive, and quickly resent the kind of treatment they extend to others. When the rasp is applied to their own noses, they show their resentment with more vigor than elegance. Every man has a right to his own opinion, and although it may not be accepted by others, his right should be recognized and treated with respect. If they differ from him, they should manifest their dissent in a respectful manner. Very much depends on the manner in which a thing is done. It may be done in a rough and raspy manner so as to arouse antagonism, or it may be done in a kind and gentle spirit that will conciliate favor. A man who desires to have influence with others should remember that he can never succeed by rubbing his rasp across their noses.—Recorder.

Object of the Sermon.

What should be the outcome of the sermon, and indeed of the whole service, on the worshipers who assemble in the sanctuary? Their spiritual ideas should become exalted and invigorated. Their spiritual life should take to itself new strength. They should feel ready for tasks that before were difficult or impossible, ready to forgive everybody, to serve everybody. They should be made ashamed of all distrust, all lack of love. God and eternity should be brought nearer. Earth and time should seem smaller. To live for self should have grown repulsive; for others, attractive. Doubt and fear should disappear. Faith and rest should appear easy. The true prizes of being should shine and heaven be just at hand. Happy the preacher who can perform this work for those who sit at his feet! Happy the people who hear the joyful sound!—Zion's Herald.

The pastor who falls into a state of impatience and evil forebodings because of the discouragements which he happens to meet in his work, will necessarily impart his spirit to his church and official board. Like priest, like people. A sunny-hearted pastor makes a people with sunny hearts; while dejection and discontent in the preacher will defeat the progress and good intentions of the best body of lay people that ever existed.—Exchange.

The Secret of Power.

The power of a church is not measured by its numerical strength, the Religious Telescope truly says. It thus points out the true source of success: "The power of a church is not uniformly indicated by its increase in membership, and yet a church that has power is likely to be steadily growing in numbers. The really powerful church is the one that secures definite results—results spiritual and otherwise in the conversion of souls and in the culture, upbuilding and usefulness of believers. It requires a power that not every church has to produce these results. It is said that there is a church in Chicago that during the pastorate of one man has furnished forty young men to the ministry. We know nothing of the pastor or the membership of this church, but if through their efforts forty young men have been led to consecrate themselves to the work of the ministry during a few years they must have had unusual spiritual power. There must have been a spiritual pulpit, a spiritual people, with spiritual prayer and other meetings, calculated to develop and promote such a spirit of loyalty to Christ as finds expression in aggressive Christian effort."

From a Successful Man.

I think the habit of generosity may be cultivated like other habits. And I have felt that it is a great mistake to put off being generous until you are dead. In the first place, you lose the pleasure of witnessing the good that you may do; and again, no one can administer your gifts for you as well as you can do it for yourself. It is a great pleasure to be brought into personal relations of that kind, and to make people feel that you are not a philanthropist in the abstract, but that you are interested in them personally, and care for their welfare. In that way, you benefit them not merely in a natural way, but you make them feel that men are really brothers, and that they were made to help one another. Not only is that feeling agreeable in itself, but it will be apt to prompt them to carry out the principles themselves. Put yourself in to all you do, and let others feel that you are there. Do not only contribute to a charitable object, but go yourself and help. It may seem an inconvenience at first, but soon you will come to consider it worthy any inconvenience.

Perhaps I ought to say a word about the companions a young man should choose for himself in life. You should try to make companions of the best people you become acquainted with. In order to do this you must have something in yourself that may be a return to them for what they give you. It is not necessary for this purpose to be a genius, nor to have a remarkable intellect, nor extraordinary erudition. But be yourself and be a man, and learn to think of others before yourself, and you will have friends enough, and of the best. To be intimate with the magnanimous and the noble aids to form those qualities in one's-self. A man is known by the company he keeps, and those who know what friends you have will be able to form a very correct idea of what you yourself are. You should see to it that this estimate be as high as your opportunity may secure.

I can not better sum up my advice to young people than to say that I have derived, and still find, the greatest pleasure in my life from doing good to others. Do good constantly, patiently, and wisely, and you will never have cause to say that your life was not worth living.—George W. Childs.

The remains of Dr. H. M. Smith, whose death in Bay St. Louis we chronicled last week, were brought to this city for interment. Dr. Smith was for twenty-one years editor of the Southwestern Presbyterian. The funeral services were held in Dr. Palmer's Church, and were largely attended. The funeral address was delivered by Dr. Palmer. Dr. Smith was a strong preacher and an editor of fine abilities. He was a man who had the courage of his convictions.

Rev. J. J. Smylie, late of the Mississippi Conference, has been evangelizing for several months in Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, and has had large success. He is now holding a meeting at Troy, Kansas, with gratifying prospects. His interesting family are with him. His address will be Troy, Kansas, for the next three weeks.

No matter if you are hidden in an obscure post, never content yourself with doing your second-best, however unimportant the occasion.—General Sheridan.

The following from the Alabama Advocate will be appreciated by members of the General Conference and readers of the Daily Advocate:

The Texas delegation was heard on the floor from the first. They caught the ear of the Conference at the beginning, and were strictly in the midst thereafter.—Texas Advocate. Did you hear anything from the Tennessee and Virginia delegations? It seems to us the Daily mentioned the fact that one or two delegates from each of these Conferences got the floor a time or two—though we may be mistaken.

***

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., has been elected president of Centenary College. We congratulate the Board of Trustees upon the wisdom of their choice. Able, scholarly, dignified, personally popular, and possessed of fine executive abilities, he is emphatically the right man in the right place. Now, if the preachers of the Louisiana Conference and the friends of Centenary generally will go to work in good earnest, the grand old institution will enter upon a new era of prosperity. Since the college has become the property of the Louisiana Conference, this ought to be a stimulus to greater diligence in its behalf.

The following clipping from a Dawson, Ga., correspondent of the Wesleyan Advocate will be read with interest by the numerous friends of Dr. J. H. Scruggs in Mississippi and Louisiana:

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Scruggs, has interwoven himself into the hearts of all our people. One of the strongest men in the pulpit, he is equally strong as a good shepherd, leading his flock by "the still waters." He has successfully inaugurated an Epworth League, that has become a great power for good in the church here. Bro. Scruggs is alive to the interests of our young people, and is lovingly drawn to them all the time, "putting them to work" in the vineyard of our blessed Savior. Our Sunday-school is prosperous—increasing in interest and members every Sabbath. Our congregations are large and attentive, and our weekly prayer meetings are well attended. The Woman's Missionary Society and the Juvenile Missionary Society are doing good work.

***

A disgraceful state of affairs has existed in court circles in this city for some time past. Certain officials have used all the power and influence of their official position to throw practice into the hands of certain attorneys who were willing to pay for such service by dividing the fees. Attempts have been made to break up this system, but in vain. Even a change of court officials every month does not suffice. Those who get into the clutches of the law find by experience that it is best to employ the attorney named by the officials having them in charge. This corrupt practice has become so notorious that the State Legislature has taken it in hand. A bill has passed the Senate making it a felony for any officer to solicit legal business for an attorney-at-law. It is hoped that the House will concur.

***

The Medical Congress in session at Washington, a few days since, discussed at great length the subject of leprosy and its treatment. Treatises were read by a number of the leading physicians of the country. The Congress resolved to memorialize the United States Congress to establish a leper hospital, to which all persons afflicted with the disease shall be sent. Dr. Wyman, surgeon-general of the Marine Hospital Service, has prepared a bill to be submitted to the United States Congress at an early day. The question of the treatment of leprosy is becoming a live one in Louisiana. Leprosy exists here; and there is very general dissatisfaction with the present system of caring for its victims. The Louisiana Legislature, now in session, will doubtless either ask the United States government to take the matter in hand, or else establish a different system from that which now exists.

Whitworth College.

Notwithstanding the hard times, this deservedly popular institution of learning has just closed another prosperous and gratifying session. And while the present management ceases by the mutual consent of the retiring president and the Board of Trustees, the church and the general public can rest perfectly assured that neither will suffer any loss of the brilliant past, but that the moral and intellectual education of the girls and young women of this great Southwest will be carried forward to the highest point of attainment under the wise and efficient management of the Rev. J. W. Chambers.

The best equipped instructors that money can secure will be placed in charge of every department of college work, and the buildings will be thoroughly repaired and refurnished throughout with the latest and most approved furniture and fixtures for comfort and thorough work.

The friends of Whitworth College were never more hopeful of its future, nor enthusiastic in its support than they are at this moment, and we are sure that when the general public understands the plans of the new president as laid before the trustees and the friends present, that this hopeful enthusiasm will take possession of all, and that the development of these plans will insure the success of the college. J. M. WEEMS.

Malose Female College, Holly Springs, Miss.

This institution has just closed a very successful session. The commencement sermon was preached Sunday, May 27, by the Rev. Julien C. Brown, D. D. The discourse was sensible and seasonable. The administration of the Rev. J. W. Honnoll has been so satisfactory and successful that he was re-elected president for a term of seven years. The following able faculty was also selected: Mrs. S. H. Fort, lady principal; Miss Christine Burns, mathematics; Miss Maggie Ford, preparatory; Mrs. Carrie W. Smith, primary; Miss Mary Paine, art; Mrs. M. W. Sykes and Miss Mary Stone, music. This is a Methodist faculty. Mrs. Sykes is a daughter of the Rev. David Wiggins, of precious memory; Miss Burns is the sister-in-law of the Rev. Dr. S. A. Steel, and Miss Stone is the daughter of the Rev. J. B. Stone, presiding elder of this district.

Holly Springs is the highest point in Mississippi, and perhaps the healthiest town in the State. Board can be obtained in the family of the president at $10 a month.

Our church here is strong, and we have one of the best Sunday-schools in the Conference. J. S. OAKLEY.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. THE LITTLE ARM-CHAIR.

Nobody sits in the little arm-chair;
It stands in a corner dim;
But a white-haired mother gazing there
And yearningly thinking of him,
Sees through the dust of long ago
The bloom of her boy's sweet face
As he rocks so merrily to and fro,
With a laugh that cheers the place.

Sometimes he holds a book in his hand,
Sometimes a pencil and slate;
And the lesson is hard to understand,
And the figures hard to mate;
But she sees the nod of the father's head,
So proud of his little son,
And she hears the word so often said:
"No fear for our little one."

They were wonderful days, the dear sweet days,
When a child with sunny hair
Was here to scold, to kiss and to praise
At her knee in the little chair.
She lost him back in her busy years,
When the great world caught the man
And he strode away passed hopes and fears
To his place in the battle's van.

And now and then in a wistful dream,
Like a picture out of date,
She sees a head with a golden gleam
Bent over a pencil and slate.
And she lives again the happy day,
The days of her young life's spring,
When the small arm-chair stood just in the way,
The center of everything.

Reprimanding Children in Unjust Superlatives

BY SUSAN TEALL PERRY.

Be very careful, mothers, when you have an occasion to reprimand your children, that you do it in just and truthful words. We are so apt to let our different moods and tenses control us, and speak and act from impulse instead of good judgment in dealing with the little ones.

Tommy's mother sat sewing in her rocking chair one afternoon. It was one of those days when things had been going at cross purposes in the domestic apartment. She felt exasperated and irritated as she sat alone thinking over the unpleasant aspect of affairs. At an inopportune moment Tommy came rushing up the stairs, plunged into the room with a great show of enthusiasm, and in his haste to get to his mother's side, overturned her tall work-basket which stood by her chair. Tommy was the bearer of important news; he had passed in his arithmetic examinations, notwithstanding his mother's anxiety lest he should not, and had reached a high mark in that study which had always been the most difficult one to him. This had insured him promotion to a higher grade. Surely his mother would be as proud and happy as a queen of her boy. But the overturning of the work-basket, with the overturning in her mind of the things that had gone cross-grained that day, quite overcame her justice and happy sympathy.

"Oh, Tommy," she exclaimed, "you are the very worst boy in the world! You are always sure to do some mischief or other, when you come home. I fairly dread the time when you come home from school!"

What a chill had been thrown over Tommy's enthusiasm! He was astonished at his mother's estimate of him. "The worst boy in the world!" He does not remember when he has had such a mishap before, and yet his mother says he is sure to do some mischief every time he comes into the house.

That dear, loving mother would have risen in righteous indignation had anyone else spoken so untruthfully and unjustly of her Tommy. Later when that mother came to herself, she was very sorry for the petulant words she had spoken, and made it all right with Tommy, as true, noble mothers always do towards their children when they know they have been in the wrong, but after all the impression of that first sore shock will never be quite done away.

Another mother was sweeping and dusting her parlors one morning. She had been hindered in her work, she was not feeling as well as usual that morning either, and being overworked, she was nervously tired. Little Mary came in and took in the situation at a glance. "I'll help you get straightened out again, mama," she said in a sweet tone of voice. "I'll dust all these things on the table, and put them back in their places." The winning little fingers worked busily, but after a time little Mary went to her mother with the tears streaming down her face, and holding up a broken vase sobbed out: "Oh, I am so sorry, mama. I thought I was dusting this vase very carefully, but all at once it fell to pieces in my hands."

Mother was hurried and worried and tired. She did not stop to think of little Mary's kind, loving endeavors to help her, and exclaimed in harsh tones: "There, I knew well enough if you undertook to help, you would break something. You are the most careless girl I ever saw. I wish I had dusted the things myself."

Little Mary is conscientious and sensitive, and she feels that she has committed a great fault. She is wretched in consequence, especially as she is not allowed to help mama any more. She does not remember that she ever broke anything before when she was helping mama, and yet mama says "she is the most careless girl in the world."

After Mary's mother had brought order out of disorder, and rested herself so that her nerves were stronger, her unfair censure of little Mary came to her mind. "The dear little thing was sorry for me, and wanted to help me, and how unkind and unjust I was to her!" she acknowledged to herself. Then the wrongs were righted with dear little Mary, but the hour of grieved surprise could not be blotted out.

Oh, if we could only put aside business troubles, vexations, and our own misdoings, and not visit them upon the heads and hearts of our little children! They are not to blame for the existence of our different moods, but unconsciously our disturbing element gets into their atmosphere and clouds it over. There are times when we should justly censure, but let us always do it in gentle, grieved tones, and not in exasperating words. There is no such grand power in moulding character as that of love and justice combined with gentleness and kindness.

A Word to Business Men.

Within five minutes' walk of the place where I now write, there is employed, I am told, a quiet, inoffensive man, who has long been known as an infidel—a disbeliever in Christianity and the Bible. He had a son, a quiet, studious young man, who naturally followed his father's ways of thinking. One day the young man packed his bag with dynamite bombs, and on the fourth of December, 1891, called at the office of Russell Sage, at 71 Broadway, handed him a letter demanding one million two hundred thousand dollars, and failing to get the money, dropped his bombs, was blown to pieces himself, while others were killed or wounded and the building was wrecked by the explosion. December 15, the head and effects of the assassin were identified by his parents, and his remains were taken away.

Said his mother to the coroner: "My son was always mild-mannered. I am positive that he had never harbored any bad feelings towards Russell Sage. He advocated the limitation of wealth. He was regular in his habits, and was a free-thinker and believed in no hereafter. I never knew him to handle explosives, and it is a great mystery to me how he learned of them."

This is infidelity gone to seed! The early Christian training of a godly mother may make an infidel a peaceable and orderly citizen; but when his children and his children's children grow up, look out! Who are the anarchists, dynamiters and nihilists? Atheists or infidels to a man—men without Bible, or Christ, or God; having no hope, and believing in no hereafter. And infidelity spreads, especially where the Bible is unknown or prohibited, and the papers are burdened with dynamite outrages in France, Spain, Italy, Russia and America.—Hastings.

A thankful heart always finds something good, even when all things seem evil. A thankful heart finds roses amid its thorns, and rejoices, when the unthankful heart finds thorns amid the roses, and complains.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Missionary Music.

Have you ever brought a penny to the missionary box—
A penny which you might have spent like other little folks?
And when it falls among the rest, have you ever heard a ring
Like a pleasant sound of welcome which the other pennies sing?

This is missionary music, and it has a pleasant sound,
For pennies make a shilling, and shillings make a pound,
And many pounds together the gospel news will send,
Which tell the distant heathen that the Savior is their friend.

And, oh! what joyous music is the missionary song,
When it seems to come from every heart and sounds from every tongue;
When happy Christian little ones all sing with one accord
Of the time when realms of darkness shall be kingdoms of the Lord!

But sweeter far than all which Jesus loves to hear
Are children's voices when they breathe a missionary prayer;
And many a one from distant lands will reach his heavenly home,
In answer to the children's prayer, "Oh, Lord, thy kingdom come."

Then, missionary children, let this music never cease;
Work on, work on, in earnest for the Lord, the Prince of Peace,
There is praying work and paying work for every heart and hand,
Till the missionary chorus shall go forth through all the land.

—The Home Missionary.

Manners and Manner.

BY EMMA C. HEWITT.

It has been a long time, boys, since you and I have had a talk together, hasn't it? But there are one or two little things I feel inspired to speak about, and one is politeness. Now I see you look disgusted, and I hesrd some of you go so far as to say that you don't want to prance and mince like a French dancing master. But that has nothing to do with what I am thinking of.

When you read of self-made men and the wonderful way in which they have been enabled to battle against circumstances of faulty education and origin, you feel that all such things are accessories, and if the man "has the true stuff in him," that is all that is necessary. Now don't understand me to be saying anything against a self-made man, for there is no human being I honor more, but I quite agree with the immortal Holmes when he shows that it would have been so much easier for the self-made man to rise to eminence if he had not had the lack of home and school education to contend against.

Plenty of you have all the facilities for this education, but you neglect it and put on a manner that is intended to impress the beholder with your ability—your "smartness," in plain terms—but which only serves to show you up in an unpleasant light; and an impression once made by the boy is very often remembered in the man.

Nowhere should manners be more carefully practiced than in your homes. "Why," exclaimed a young lady once, "I never saw anyone like your brother. He's just as polite to you as he is to anyone else. He always takes off his hat when he comes in or goes ont, just the same as if you were another girl." The girl thus addressed looked at the speaker in wide-eyed surprise. She had always been used to exchanging the courtesies of life with this same brother. "Why shouldn't he be as polite to me as anyone else?" (Truly! why shouldn't he?) "O I don't know! Boys are not, that's all!"

Now, boys, I don't think that's a very good record for you as "boys," is it? and yet I am compelled to attest to the truth of the statement.

Now for manner! It does not hnrt a boy a bit, nor make him any the less a man, to know how to make a graceful bow; and many have been the times when a young man would have given all he possessed to appear at ease in the presence of some one whose worldly position made it desirable for him to appear at his best.

While, then, polish is not absolutely necessary to success in some lines of life, it is an emolient that very materially aids the wheels of life to revolve smoothly. And I speak the truth when I say that more than one good position has been lost through some awkwardness or a feeling of diffidence born of a sense of lack of polish when among those whose bearing betrayed the daily exercise of the finer courtesies of life.—Christian at Work.

Conscience is a good friend, but an uncomfortable enemy. He will give you no peace if you are on the wrong side.—Boston Budget.

Wait for a Man.

Some writers enjoy building jokes at the expense of people they call "old maids." The wit they display is usually very cheap. The caricatures they paint are most untruthful. This kind of satire has gradually created a sentiment among our girls against reaching even the verge of womanhood in an unmarried state. Many a young girl has accepted the hand of a worthless young fellow with a full knowledge that he was in every way her inferior, but then she might not have another offer, and the chance of being an "old maid" must not be thought of. We met one such a few years since. We were often in her father's home fifteen years ago. A happier, more radiant girl we never knew. We then laughed at her determination never to be an "old maid." At nineteen she married against the protest of her parents, married a poor little two-by-four dude, with waxed mustache and soft hands. Most of the time since she has supported the family by her own hard work, and is now careworn and broken. What a change fifteen years have wrought! And yet no one is surprised. It is a clear case of cause and effect.

Do not be in too great a hurry to marry, girls. Do not accept the first offer for fear another may not come. Do not dread becoming an "old maid." You would better live an old maid till you are a hundred and one than to marry the first fellow that comes along, only to find out when too late that you married a drunkard or a brute, or a poor little society ninny who must be kept from starvation by your own hard toil. Some of the best women in all the land are old maids, girls. It is no disgrace to belong to that fraternity. And some of the women who a while ago joyfully exchanged their "old maid's" life for the marriage estate are sitting in homes of wretchedness and want today, heart-broken and despairing. The girl who marries an industrious, honorable, true-hearted young fellow is entitled to all the congratulations she receives from her friends. But better a thousand times fight life's battles alone than to be legally bound to the brainless, heartless, conscienceless thing that often passes current in society as a man. Wait for a man, girls. And again I say unto you, wait.—Epworth Herald.

Bits of Wisdom.

A young girl once heard a bit of wisdom from the lips of a very aged woman—a woman who had rounded the full term of ninety years, and, with eyes still bright and clear, looked out upon the inrolling waters of eternity. The girl was impressed by the emphasis with which the venerable dame said to her:

"Bessie, never insist on having the last word."

The determination to have the final word leads to more quarrels and more bitterness of feeling at home than almost anything else in domestic life. The fact is, that one may so control her tongue and her eyes that she may allow her opponent the pleasure of this coveted concluding thrust, and yet placidly retain her own opinion, and in the homely colloquial parlance of the up-country, where one finds strong-willed people living together in great peace, with the most pronounced diversity of characteristics, "do as she's a mind to."

Another bit of wisdom may be condensed into a pithy sentence: Avoid explanations. In some families nothing is taken for granted. Every action, every decision, every new departure, every acceptance or rejection of an invitation, must be endlessly talked and fussed over, explained and re-explained. In that way lie all sorts of stumbing-blocks. As a rule, beyond your parents or your husband, there is nobody who has the right to demand of you explanations at each step of your onward path. Don't give them. Establish a reputation of keeping your own counsel. It will serve you well in many a crisis, and be no end of comfort.—Exchange.

"If you want knowledge, you must toil for it. Toil is the law! Pleasure comes by toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love, his life is a happy one."—Ruskin.

If we like a man's dream we call him a reformer. If we don't like his dream we call him a crank.—W. D. Howells.

CURES OTHERS

A TERRIBLE CASE OF DROPSY CURED.

JOHN MALLON, ESQ.

JNO. MALLON, Esq., No. 21 McLean St., Mt. Adams, Cincinnati, O., writes: "I took sick with dropsy, lost my appetite, could not sleep, became feverish; always thirsty, lost all strength, stomach became painful, breath short and had to give up work. The best physicians in Cincinnati, failed to help me. My limbs and body were swollen to enormous size, and I was suffering terrible agony. The doctors all said I could not get well again, that I was liable to drop dead at any moment. My wife sent for the priest, to prepare me for death. While waiting for death, I remembered reading of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and thought I would try it as a last hope. When I had taken three bottles, I was almost well. The swelling entirely disappeared and I was soon able to resume work. My health is better now than it has been in twenty-five years."

"Almost as Palatable as Milk"

This is a fact with regard to Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. The difference between the oil, in its plain state, is very apparent. In you detect no fish-oil taste. As it is a help to digestion there is no after effect except good effect. Keep in mind that Scott's Emulsion is the best promoter of flesh and strength known to science.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Patterson ville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. N. J. Roberts, P. C., Greensburg, La., May 30: "We observed Children's Day at Greensburg, La., May 20, which resulted in an offering of $7.25. The pleasure of the occasion was made complete by a very instructive and able address by Col. I. D. Wall, of Clinton, La."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., Bayou Barbary, La.: "Our new church in Port Vincent is nearing completion. We have it yet to ceil and floor. The building will then be finished. Bro. D. C. Leftwich is painting the church now (May 31); will finish within two days more. We have held Children's Day on this work, and it was a decided success in every respect. Collected $3 75. We are making ready for our second Quarterly Conference, June 9 and 10. We are moving along nicely on our work."

Y. D. Butler (Lay Member), Meadville, Miss.: "The second Quarterly Conference for Meadville circuit has been held. Dr. J. M. Weems, our new presiding elder, is making a favorable impression upon his people. In 1886, during a series of revival services conducted at Meadville, every resident of the town, save four, united with the church. To-day there is not the same interest manifested in spiritual affairs as in years gone by; but the earnest and persistent efforts of our popular pastor, Rev. P. H. Howse, confidently assure us that there is to be another revival of religion here this year. Despite the financial stringency, collections for the pastor in charge are tolerably good. The prayer meeting at this church is well organized, as is also the Sabbath-school, and each has a fair attendance. Many readers of the ADVOCATE in this part of the Lord's moral vineyard have never heard its editor's living voice; so, Dr. Black, we cordially invite you to visit us."

Rev. F. B. Ormond, P. C., North Kemper circuit, Mississippi Conference: "The second Quarterly Conference of the North Kemper circuit convened at Spring Hill Church on May 19. The presiding elder, on account of sickness, was absent. The writer preached to an appreciative congregation at eleven o'clock, after which a bountiful repast was spread. At two o'clock Rev. R. A. Breland preached a forcible sermon to a large and appreciative congregation, choosing for his subject, 'The Christian Religion.' After the sermon the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered; then the pastor received an applicant for membership. The Conference was then called to order by the pastor, and the business was soon dispatched. On Sunday, at eleven o'clock, Rev. J. A. Moore, L. P., preached to a crowded house upon the subject, 'The profit of godliness.' (Tim. iv, 10.) The sermon was forcibly delivered and enjoyed by all who heard it."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., May 28: "Last Sunday was a very enjoyable day at Phœnix, Wesley Chapel. It was Children's Day. It is supposed that there were about five hundred persons on the ground. The superintendent, Dr. A. K. Barrier, with a corps of teachers and helpers, had the church beautifully decorated with a profusion of all kinds of flowers. The program was well prepared, as that everything passed off nicely. The children acted their part well. Prof. Neville, with his choir, deserves a great deal of credit for the excellent music rendered. The pastor delivered the address to the children, after which the collection was taken up, which footed up twenty dollars. Pretty good for a country church! There was a bountiful dinner for everybody of the very best the country affords, nicely prepared by the ladies, and you may be sure we enjoyed that part of the program. After dinner we had some nice pieces well prepared and delivered by young ladies, and interspersed with delightful music. The day's exercises were closed by a brief history of the Sabbath-school for the last forty years at Wesley Chapel, by Bro. T. R. Holloman, who was the first superintendent at that place."

Rev. B. H. Rawls, P. C., Steen's Creek, Miss.: "We are moving along with our work very nicely. The spiritual condition of the circuit is much better than it was two months ago. We have good congregations, and there seems to be a growing interest in the church. The finances of the church are coming up very well considering the hard times. The stewards, most of them, think that everything can be paid in full by Conference. We have a Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society here that is doing a good work. The society has raised this year about fifty dollars, which has been expended on the parsonage. Our Sunday-schools are doing a splendid work. Bro. McDonald, our presiding elder, held our second Quarterly Conference last Saturday and Sunday, and preached us two good sermons. The people in this country love him very much. We are well pleased with our new pastoral charge. We have an excellent people here, and we expect to accomplish great things under God. I have been working for the ADVOCATE, and have secured several new subscribers and a good many renewals. I am sure that the ADVOCATE is doing a great deal of good in this country. I will close by asking you to pray for us."

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and refew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Greenwood, Miss., is now illuminated at night by electric light.

Mr. Moody, the evangelist, has made $1,250,000 cash out of his "Gospel Hymns."

The Anti-Miscegenation bill passed the Louisiana House of Representatives by a big majority on June 8.

A squadron of Coxeyites were trying to sail down the Platte river, when a rise caught them near Denver, and some twenty of them are reported drowned.

Coxey and Carl Browne have got tired of posing as martyrs in Washington, especially as the country did not rise in arms to deliver them from prison, and have paid their fines.

The miners' strike, now under way throughout the coal districts, and which is one of the most unwise ever resorted to, promises to cost the country an immense sum at a time when it can ill afford any losses.

Ex-Gov. Shands was elected by the Board of Trustees of the University of Mississippi as dean of the law school, to succeed Judge A. H. Whitfield, whom Gov. Stone recently appointed to the supreme bench of the State.

It has been decided by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to report to the House a bill for the acquirement of the Nicaragua Canal by the government, and for carrying on the work to completion.

Some weeks ago it was predicted by the Democratic managers in the Senate that the tariff would be disposed of in that body by the middle of June, and that it would become law before July 1, so as to be put into practical operation with the commencement of the new fiscal year. This prediction will scarcely be realized, however, as the middle of June is now close at hand, and there is no prospect of a final vote in the Senate for some weeks yet.

There will be an organized opposition in the House to the sugar schedule of the Revenue bill, and predictions are being freely made that it can not be passed in its present shape. The attack will be directed chiefly against the protection afforded by the schedule to refined sugar. There is growing opposition to the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty on account of the general belief that the sugar trust controls all the sugar interests of those islands, and would benefit largely from the free importation of raw sugars.

The Grand Jury of this city has found two indictments for bribery against two members of the City Council: One against Councilman John T. Callahan, of the first municipal district, and the other against Numa Dandonneau, of the seventh representative district. In both cases the bribery is said to have been to secure certain privileges upon the wharves, Mr. Callahan, it is alleged, having received $500 for making a favorable report to the Council in one case, and Mr. Dandonneau having received $1,400 for putting through the Council a wharf privilege. The indictments were found upon evidence that is believed to be of the most positive character, and there seems to be no doubt that they are but the forerunners of other and much more serious indictments against members of the Council.

The City Council, acting upon the advice of City Attorney Sullivan, through Acting Mayor Jamison, has made an affadavit against Mr. Widoey for giving Councilman Callahan a bribe.

The Mexican Coffee, Cotton and Colonization Company, which has its headquarters in San Antonio, has on hand a scheme for a vast colony of negroes to northern Mexico. It is reported to have just closed a trade for 2,500 000 acres of land lying along the Rio Grande, in the States of Coahuila and Chihuahua, with ex-Gov. Gonzales, of Chihuahua, and it proposes on a part on this to colonize 10,000 negroes.

The Senate has agreed to the rates of duty on rice as they were fixed by the House. The paragraph, as it now stands, reads as follows: "Rice cleaned, one and one-half cents per pound; uncleaned rice, or rice free of the outer hull and still having the inner cuticle on, one cent per pound; rice flour and rice meal and rice broken, which will pass through a sieve known commercially as No. 12 wire sieve, one-fourth of one cent per pound; paddy or rice having the outer hull on, three-fourths of one cent per pound."

FOREIGN.

The Cabinet crisis in Hungary has ended. The Cabinet has been reformed and is satisfactory to the Emperor.

The great cabmen's strike in London has been submitted to arbitration. Home Secretary Asquith is the arbitrator.

The new Constitution of Hawaii has been promulgated and published, and proves very similar to that of the United States.

The Sultan of Morocco, Muley Hassan, has died under suspicious circumstances, and his son has been proclaimed sultan.

The revolutionary war continues in Brazil. The federal forces were defeated by the loyal troops near Pelotas last week, with a loss of their artillery.

A Good Appetite

Always accompanies good health, and an absence of appetite is an indication of something wrong. The universal testimony given by those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, as to its great merits in restoring and sharpening the appetite, in promoting healthy action of the digestive organs, and as a purifier of the blood, constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine.

All the cotton has now been planted and the crop is well under way. The New York Financial Chronicle estimates the acreage at 20 107,247 acres, against 19,701 885 last year, an increase of 2.06 per cent. The Chronicle finds an improvement in Oklahoma and the Indian Territory of 9.8 per cent. Texas continues to increase its cotton, and shows a larger acreage than last year by 8 per cent.

A Reward of $500

Will be given for any case of Rheumatism which can not be cured with Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. The proprietors do not hide this offer, but print it in bold type on all their circulars, wrappers, printed matter, and through the columns of newspapers everywhere. It will work wonders, one treatment curing any ordinary case. The two bottles will be sent to any address by express on receipt of $5. Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York. Agents Wanted.

Lord Rosebery, England's Premier, has privately announced his intention to withdraw from the racing field. A public statement of the fact will be made within a few days. The current belief that the victory of his colt was worth many thousand votes at the coming election has had general expression in the newspapers.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. I. Allen, P. C., Webb, Miss., May 31: "Our second quarterly meeting for Dublin and Brooklyn charge was held at the Brooklyn Church last Saturday and Sunday. We had a profitable time, notwithstanding the fact that our presiding elder did not come. The people turned out well on Saturday, bringing their dinner with them, which was abundant and of the best quality, and seemed to enjoy the service and to have fellowship one with another. We were disappointed in not having Bro. Thames to smile on us and approve our progress, as well as give encouragement for the future. We had love-feast, preaching and communion on Sunday. The Lord was with us."

Rev. W. M. Stevens, Rocky Springs: "The good people here have received us cordially. Many have been their tokens of appreciation since we came, and we are now happy, contented and hard at work. Our second Quarterly Conference was held at Cayuga, Saturday and Sunday, May 19 and 20. It was an enjoyable occasion. Attendance good, reports favorable, interest manifest. Two young men licensed to preach; one coming to us, a few months ago, from the Protestant Methodists. Everyone enjoyed the address to the children, Sunday morning, by Bro. Weems, on Mexico, Mexicans and Missions. It was fine. Some startling statements made. I wish everyone on my charge could have heard it. We are hopeful. We think the revival fire is kindling. Pray for us!"

Rev. J. P. Haney, Live Oak, La.: "We have just returned from a trip to Bishop Turner's work at Big Cane, La., where I spent a delightful week. The object of my visit was to assist Bro. Turner in a protracted meeting at that place. We commenced on Friday and preached until the next Thursday. Bros. J. B. Roy and Turner continued the meeting several days after I left. Results: fifteen accessions, the church greatly revived, and a number of infants baptized. I am told that this was the first revival at that place for fifteen years. Bro. Turner has some good people, and, judging from their actions, they like him very much. He looks like a well-fed preacher. This was my first visit within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference, and, notwithstanding I had fever nearly every day, I never enjoyed myself better. May the Great Head of the church continue to bless preacher and people."

Blanche Ferguson, Zeigerville, Miss.: "Sunday, May 20, was a day of rejoicing for the good people of Zeigerville and the surrounding community. At 10 o'clock A. M. the people began to gather from far and near to witness the dedicatory service of our elegant new church. Rev. I. W. Cooper (the man for the occasion) reached here at 11 o'clock P. M., Saturday, enjoying good health and in fine spirits, with encouraging words for Millsaps College. Two years ago the Methodists of this place put forth every effort to build a nice, neat church, but their means gave out before completing same; therefore, they decided to make out with what they had done until times got better. On the evening of Jan. 20 a fearful storm passed this way and destroyed the building. The pastor and people put their shoulder to the wheel, and, with strong faith in God, moved forward. The church which was dedicated to God last Sunday morning, free of debt, is worth twelve hundred dollars. The two sermons which Dr. Cooper preached were of high type and did us much good. Millsaps College was remembered by a donation of thirty-eight dollars. Everything is moving along nicely on Tranquil circuit and 'tranquility' reigns supreme. Pray for us, that much good may be accomplished to Jesus' name. Prosperity to the dear ADVOCATE."

C. A. P., Bethany Church, Kosciusko district, North Mississippi Conference: "At our church, last Sunday, May 13, we observed 'Children's Day.' At 10 o'clock A. M. every inch of space of our handsomely decorated little church was occupied, and our zealous superintendent, Bro. J. W. Morris, opened the Sabbath-school. The exercises began with prayer. We followed the excellent programme sent out by our Publishing House with some additions. A better rendered programme in every way it would be hard to find. I can see a marked advancement in the children in the past year. Our much-beloved pastor, Rev. A. W. Langley, gave to the children a very impressive talk appropriate to the occasion. The music rendered by the choir was simply grand. An earnest prayer was offered by Bro. J. L. Porter, after which the choir rendered, 'God be with you till we meet again.' Our hearts are deeply moved. We long to walk in close communion with God, so that we may be able to live for the uplifting of humanity and for the advancement of God's cause. We have a good Sabbath-school and a Woman's Christian Aid Society at our church, and we have many good men and women; but we need a glorious revival of religion. We trust that every true Christian who reads these lines may send an earnest petition to a throne of grace that we may have a glorious outpouring of God's Holy Spirit. God bless you, Mr. Editor, and the dear old ADVOCATE."

THE OLD MEETING-HOUSE.

BY RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

We love the venerable house
Our fathers built to God;
In heaven are kept their grateful vows,
Their dust endears the sod.

Here holy thoughts a light have shed
From many a radiant face,
And prayers of tender hope have spread
A perfume through the place.

And anxious hearts have pondered here
The mystery of life,
And prayed the eternal Spirit clear
Their doubts and end their strife.

From humble tenements around
Came up the pensive train,
And in the church a blessing found,
Which filled their homes again.

For faith and peace and mighty love
That from the Godhead flow,
Showed them the life of heaven above
Springs from the life below.

They live with God, their homes are dust;
But here their children pray,
And in this fleeting lifetime trust
To find the narrow way.

—Exchange.

To the North Mississippi Conference.

As your committeeman, I attended part of the exercises of the second annual commencement of Millsaps College, and found that institution closing a year of marked prosperity. It is a matter of personal regret to me that the other, and far more competent, member of your Visiting Committee was not present to take notes and write this report.

Everybody I met had words of praise for the sermon preached by Dr. H. C. Morrison on Sunday, and also for the sermon of Bro. J. S. Oakley, Sunday night.

The president, Dr. W. B. Murrah, and the entire faculty seem to have given the most perfect satisfaction in their several departments. Much regret was expressed that, owing to the providential dispensation and call of God, one member of the faculty had to retire and others to engage in other work.

The buildings were in splendid order, and the grounds in fine condition. In a few years the campus will be a sylvan grove, affording "classic shades," in the literal and metaphorical sense of that term.

As viewed from the rostrum, the student body seemed to be formed of the picked young men of Mississippi, and some from the regions beyond.

An honored layman, W. A. Gunning, of Natchez, Miss., had offered a gold medal to the young candidate for the ministry who would excel in reading a Scripture lesson, a hymn, and in announcing the services following for the week. There were four contestants, and all did well, but the medal was awarded to J. M. Alford. The fact that a medal was offered by a layman, and for this purpose, is very suggestive, and should provoke serious thought. It shows what intelligent laymen think, and how closely they observe things. It indicates a point where improvement is greatly needed. It marks the fact that the Scriptures are often profaned and the finest hymns marred, if not totally spoiled, by careless reading. There is no part of divine service better, or more devotional, than the Word of God impressively and expressively read in the hearing of the congregation. Tame and, sometimes, lame comments by novices and preachers not gifted in that line mar the glorious gospel of the Son of God. A few gifted and highly spiritually minded men possess the rare faculty of making running comment profitably. Young preachers should learn early in life that it is utterly impossible for any man to improve the inspired Word of God. "It is the sword of the Spirit."

Hymn reading—the reading of hymns that are spiritual songs—was never more important than at present. The singing of this age is more the expression of sound than of sense. The hearer, without a book, or holding the words in memory, rarely, or never, catches the sense and sentiment of the words we "mumble" to a glorious tune. A "jingle" of words, without either sense or sentiment—full of passion and devoid of piety—should be sung without reading. They suit much of the singing we have now, but are not worthy of being read in the house and service of God. The preacher who has "preliminary" and "subliminary"—long drawn out—in making announcements is a burden and a bore to the average congregation. If the cause and the occasion be worthy, say it and quit.

The debate between the chosen representatives of the Galloway and Lamar Literary Societies was a spicy, interesting, instructive and lively affair, and it came nigh building or striking the Nicaragua Canal. This performance was highly creditable to the young gentlemen engaged in this contest. The committee would have been glad to have decided in favor of both sides, but they could not straddle the canal, so they gave the honor of the debate to the Galloways, and the medal for the best debater to Mr. A. J. McCormick, of the Lamars. So close, however, was the contest that the Committee on Awards asked the privilege of awarding a medal to Mr. R. W. Harmon, of the Galloway Society.

The annual address by Hon. W. H. Sims, First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, a highly gifted and honored citizen of Mississippi, was a masterful presentation of the philosophy of education. This address, I fear, will come before the public eye in permanent form.

Your committeeman is deeply impressed with the fact that our people can not do better for their sons and for the church than to send them to Millsaps College. The future of this institution is full of promise, and it is destined to do great good for our young men, and to be a great blessing to our church.

Medals were awarded to the following young gentlemen: Scholarship, preparatory, C. G. Andrews; scholarship, collegiate, H. M. Stevens; declamation, W. T. Browning; oratory, G. B. Power; debate, A. J. McCormick; Scripture and hymn reading, J. M. Alford; special by committee, as voted above, R. W. Harmon. Yours,

GILDEROY.

Leaving Japan for Home.

BY BENRY G. HAWKINS.

MR. EDITOR: It would be my delight to write for your readers many of my experiences in Japan, especially some occurrences of the last busy days there; the departure from the great crowd of students and teachers, and the meetings with the little Methodist band at Matsuyama. I would like to carry your readers through the mingled joy and sorrow of it all. I had already been from home longer than intended when the first contract to teach in the government school was made, and "going home" was joyous, though "leaving Japan" was sad. It seemed that the islands and boys and mountains had never looked so beautiful as on the morning of my departure, nor the faces of my friends so lovable. But I must not begin to write of all this now. As to returning to Japan, I can say that I go home with the hope of laboring there some years, at least, but praying that God will make me always willing to do my part at any time and anywhere, though it be in benighted Africa, among the unfortunate sons of Ham.

I promised to send you an occasional letter during my tour, and I must do so, even though they be only parts of my diary.

Tuesday, April 10, 1894.—I am on the French ship Saigzie. It is now eleven o'clock of the morning. In another hour we will be on the China Sea, beyond the sight of Dai Nippon. The morning has been very interesting. At about eight o'clock the ship began to heave toward the land, as if to jut right against it, but a trusty pilot stood by the man at the wheel, and soon a passage between two bodies of land became visible. It was the strait of Shimonoseki, which separates the main island from Kinshin. Eight guns on the mountain to the right guard the entrance. On the left is a coaling port, with many vessels at anchor. Farther on the right is the city of Shimonoseki. It is proposed to span this narrow strait with a bridge about three years hence. The Saigzie stops a few minutes to allow the Yokohama Maru, coming from Shanghai, to pass on the port-side. She moves forward gently, finding her way through a thousand sail boats. I count six guns again guarding the outer entrance into the strait. The vessel turns to the right, and while we take ten o'clock breakfast, she stops a moment to put the pilot off at the lighthouse on the island at the left. The day is fine, and sails have been hoisted in order to allow wind to assist steam. Most of the crew—a hundred and sixty in number—and of the passengers are gesticulating Frenchmen. About a half dozen Chinese serve, and a score of Arabs and gaunt, black Lascars do such work as shoveling the coal. Of the Japanese passengers, one is a lieutenant-general, berthed in extra upper saloon, bound for Germany to take some further lessons in military tactics. Another goes to Newcastle, England, on ship building business. An American occupying the same cabin with me belongs to the United States man-of-war Monocacy. He came out on the Richmond, which carried Gen. Grant about China and Japan during his famous tour of the world. He also was one of the forty American marines who attended the funeral of the missionaries murdered in China last year.

Noon, April 11.—The ship's record, just posted, reads: "Latitude 31° 49' N.; longitude 122° 13' E. from Paris. Distance run during last 24 hours, 320 miles. Distance to Shanghai, 171 miles." The voyage has been very uninteresting since land was lost sight of yesterday. English reading-matter is scarce on this French ship. I have lent Marvin's "To the East by Way of the West" to a German on board who reads English. He sticks to it as if it were a novel. The author little thought that after eighteen years he would have readers on this far eastern sea, where he, doubtless, penned some of the lines.

Before leaving Matsuyama a student gave me a copy of "Tau Teh King," or, "The Classic of Tau and of Virtue," in Chinese, with the English translation. It begins: "The Tau (reason) which can be taued (reasoned) is not the eternal Tau (Reason). The name which can be named is not the eternal name." A large, friendly, silk-robed Chinese merchant of Kobe, on his way to Hong Kong to lay in a stock of groceries, seeing this product of his native philosophy lying by, borrowed it, and read, read, until he had finished it at one sitting. Being asked when the author lived, he replied: "Long time ago, I not know, but before Shinamsu wore tail, in cut-tail time," helping his words by seizing his five-foot queue and imitating the action of clipping it. "Do you like the tail?" "No, it is kitenai (dirty); all Shinaman not like tail; but it is shikata nai (impossible to be not)."

Sardis District Conference.

All the preachers save two, together with many of the laymen of the Sardis district, met in annual session in Courtland, Miss., Friday, June 1. The first meeting was a sunrise prayer meeting, on Friday morning about five o'clock, conducted by Dr. J. D. Cameron, of Senatobia; and from this till the last sermon was preached, it was evident that the Lord of hosts was with us. The reports of the preachers showed a decided improvement along many lines. Several Epworth Leagues were reported, and a special committee was appointed to look into this new, but very important work.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Jackson, Miss., was here in the interest of Millsaps College, and representing a work very near to his heart, viz.: the Christian education of the boys of Mississippi. And the girls were not forgotten, their cause being championed by Rev. J. W. Malone, president-elect of Grenada Collegiate Institute, who, in his own precise and gentlemanly way, reminded the Conference of its obligation to this, their own school, situated within the bounds and being the property of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, we must stand by the "new management" (Malone and McIntosh), and see to it that the daughters of our own people are sent to this school, and thus carry forward to greatest success the work of the Grenada Collegiate Institute.

Nearly $200 was raised in cash and good subscription during the Conference toward the erection of a cottage on the campus of Millsaps College, where the boys from this section may find board at a very low cost. It is to be called the "Joseph H. Brooks Memorial Cottage," in honor of that pure and noble man of God who, for so many years, served the church in these parts of the vineyard. The districts contignous have also agreed to aid in the erection of this cottage, and it is hoped that by the first day of next September it will be ready for the occupancy of our boys. We must build it, and let us all help. One young man from this charge will receive license to preach, and enter Millsaps College in September.

Friday evening the Conference received the sad intelligence that Sister Terry, the wife of Rev. C. N. Terry (a superannuated preacher living in this district), had peacefully and triumphantly passed over the river; and while we realized that with her all was well, yet we could but feel a touch of sorrow when we thought of the bereavement of our brother. With this exception, the Conference was a most delightful affair.

Rev. H. C. Morehead, the conferens, faithful and thoughtful presiding elder of the district, occupied the chair, and all the business was transacted au fait.

Revs. I. W. Cooper, D. D (Millsaps College); J. D. Cameron, D. D; W. M. Young, J. W. Malone, Eugene Johnson, C. W. Perkins, and R. A. Meek did the preaching, and their words of wisdom and warning linger with us to stimulate and inspire us to more and better work for Jesus.

Courtland is situated on the Mississippi and Tennessee railroad, between Memphis and Grenada, and is about the centre of the circuit bearing its name. Here is located the parsonage—comfortable and cosy—wherein dwells the itinerant and his family. Spacious grounds and commodious outbuildings, after counting the improvements which have recently been made, make it a very desirable place to live.

The God of Israel has led us, and his promises are still to us and to our children.

Rev. John W. Wilkinson: A Memory.

The recent death of Mrs. Mary M. Wilkinson, the eldest daughter of our Bishop Keener, recalls to my mind her companion, Rev. John W. Wilkinson, who died nearly twenty years ago, while pastor at Baton Rouge, La., my childhood home.

Over a tomb, about eighteen inches high, constructed with brick, in the Magnolia Cemetery, lies a pure white marble slab, bearing the following inscription:

In memory of Rev. John W. Wilkinson, who was born in Parsonstown, Kings county, Ireland, Aug. 17, 1834, and finished his course April 7, 1875, in Baton Rouge, La., where his unexampled labors will never be forgotten.

Almost every saved person has had some holy personality, some time in their former state, to influence them to a Christian life. Though it was unknown to him, John W. Wilkinson had an overpowering influence over my young and susceptible heart. There was something about his life that irresistibly charmed and impressed me, and I felt my heart longing to be like him. Had anyone asked me then to describe my ideal of a Christian, I would have naturally pointed to this man of God. He seemed to me to be different from any other preacher, or person, that I had ever seen. Something supernatural hovered about his life. While due allowance must be made for this exalted conception of a child, yet it was, no doubt, based on the fact of his superior piety and purity, and it was used by the Spirit of God to convict me and inspire me to become a Christian. What I owe to the inspiration of that Christly life can never be told in this world.

My mother made it obligatory on me to attend the preaching service every Sabbath morning, and there, in the corner of her pew, I listened to this man's preaching, and became impressed with divine truth. While I can not remember anything he said, nor could I understand his arguments and the language he always used, yet the sermon had its effect. There is more, after all, in the man behind the sermon than the sermon itself. The life and the earnestness of Bro. Wilkinson behind his eloquent sermons impressed me as nothing else did. I remember one Sabbath morning going home from church determined never to touch liquor in any form, and oppose it with all my power. All I recollect is this impression, and it still abides. He met the children, who felt disposed to attend, on a certain week-day afternoon, for a children's class meeting. There were only about eight of us, including his own two little boys, Johnnie and Willie; but he made it a profitable occasion, with questioning, counsel, and prayer.

Never can I forget the Sabbath morning when the account of his death bed scene, with its vision of celestial things and its triumph, was described to us in the Sunday-school, and also that sad day when, with the mourning of the whole city, he was laid away in Magnolia Cemetery to await the resurrection. This sudden, but victorious, termination to his less than two years' ministry in Baton Rouge served to make his life the more sacred and impressive to my tender heart.

Soon after he had died my parents moved to Texas, and there, among new surroundings and associates, meeting with temptations to forget God and all my past resolutions, a critical time had come in my life; but at every suggestion of neglecting spiritual things and going the way of the world, the presence of this holy man of God came before me, and that life held me, as it were, with a mighty and irresistible grip until I found the saving knowledge of the truth.

Bro. Wilkinson lived and died unconscious of influencing the life of a little boy, who watched him and eagerly listened to his ministry. It would be ingratitude in me now to fail in some way to publicly acknowledge the blessing and power of the touch of his short ministry in my early home, on my own life, which, I dare say, could be duplicated by many others.

I deduce a few things in conclusion. One is the mighty power of a holy character. I know nothing at all about the details of his spiritual history; but the power of his influence lay in what he was more than what he did, so far as I was concerned. Judging from the immediate trying times through which he passed in the yellow fever epidemic at Shreveport his own experience must have been wonderfully helped and deepened. At least it is natural to suppose it would have had that tendency. A child's instinct for purity in others is usually correct, and I am sure that he must have been a man with piety above the average, simply from the instinctive feelings of my childhood heart. There is always power in purity, and in the work of saving souls nothing else can be substituted. A mere perfunctory ministry—going through the rounds of duty—however polished, can never take the place of the heart filled with the divine power.

To me the influence of this man, as exerted so unconsciously to himself, has been a means of great comfort as a minister of the gospel. How much of our life's results, after all, are unconscious! There is much we do consciously, but how much of our very best work shall never be known until the day of future revelation! We can not calculate what we are doing. No one else can. There awaits all of us a great surprise when the hidden things are brought to light. How many persons we are continually touching, and especially the young in the formative years! The real power of that touch is not what we are trying to do so much as what we passively are. How many are longing to see more immediate results in their lives, which is a right aspiration; but we must not forget that much can and is accomplished secretly and unconsciously through a truly Christ-like life.

Among the first persons whom I desire to see and commune with in heaven is John W. Wilkinson, the man who unknowingly led me to fall in love with Christ and his religion. How often have I wished I could thank him here; but there is a day coming when he shall receive a public reward for that which was done in secret.

That Protest Which Was Spread on the Journal of the General Conference, but Was Omitted from the Daily and Weekly Advocates.

The undersigned respectfully ask leave to enter a protest against the summary rejection of the motion made by J. P. Strother, of the Pacific Conference, duly seconded, to re-commit Report No. 5 to the Committee on Episcopacy, at the night session, May 18, of this General Conference: because,

1. The report shows a refusal of said committee to decide the questions properly referred to said Committee on Episcopacy, and is an effort to transfer to the Committee on Appeals said questions of law not proper to be passed on by said last-named committee—a measure unheard of, so far as we are advised, in the proceedings of General Conferences, and not warranted by the book of Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

2. The failure of said Committee on Episcopacy to decide said questions does not acquit the Bishop complained of, but leaves his administration subject to constructive condemnation and other unfavorable inferences.

Signed by T. L. Mellen, Paul Whitehead, T. H. B. Anderson, J. H. Pritchett, John Anderson, E. K. Miller, Geo. J. Warren, P. S. Rader, J. T. Lloyd, J. C. C. Newton, W. C. Black, A. F. Watkins, H. Waller Featherston, W. A. Gunning, W. M. Thornton, S. N. Brickhouse, S. E. H. Davee, B. D. Bell, J. A. Parker, C. J. Nugent, Rumsey Smithson.

MR. EDITOR: The foregoing is almost literally correct, being taken from the rough draft of the original protest. There may be one name improperly appended to this copy, and there is certainly a difference in the order of signatures, for memory has had to be relied on. I think two names are omitted. Other names could have been had by solicitation. This I did not care to do. Had no other names besides mine been signed, I would still have gone to record protesting against the summary rejection of Judge Strother's motion by the presiding Bishop and the majority of the General Conference, as well as the shirking of solemn duty by the Committee on Episcopacy, even at the risk of the forfeiture of affection, favor, or preferment.

Rev. W. Murdock Deposed.

Rev. W. Murdock, who was at the last session of the North Georgia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, appointed to East Rome, a small church in the suburbs of Rome, recently assumed editorial management of the Evening News of that place. The paper is a secular daily paper, and takes a hand in the politics of the day.

Presiding Elder Pierce, brother of the deceased Bishop of that name, has removed Murdock from his church and suspended him from the ministry until the meeting of his Conference in December.

Presiding Elder Pierce appointed as Elder Murdock's successor a local preacher who is a farmer.

Murdock says that Gen. Evans, who is a member of the North Georgia Conference, is running for governor, and that any number are teaching school in addition to preaching. He holds that editing a paper is as respectable and honorable as running for governor, teaching school or farming, and that it is not incompatible with the highest duties of a minister. His church did not pay him to live, and he was advised by his stewards to supplement his salary by editorial work.

We clip the above from the Times-Democrat, June 14. We know nothing of the matter except what is here stated. There is, of course, some mistake in this dispatch. A presiding elder has the right to remove a preacher from his charge, but he has no power to suspend him from the ministry. Whether Bro. Murdock has been suspended by a committee, or whether he has only been removed from his charge, we do not know.

The Ceded Territory.

We stated in our columns during the session of the General Conference that the transfer of territory from the Mississippi to the Louisiana Conference would not take place until the close of this Conference year. That is still our opinion. We hold that all the preachers in the Woodville district will have to make their reports to the Mississippi Conference. Some hold a different opinion. Time will decide who is right. As some brethren are much interested in the matter, we suggest that the presiding elder of the Woodville district take steps at an early day to have the matter decided by the proper tribunal—the presiding Bishop.

A Father in Israel Gone.

Rev. J. B. Baldwin died in Meridian on the fifteenth. Bro. Baldwin was for many years a member of the Alabama Conference, but located soon after the war. During most of the time since his location he has been in the pastorate, serving various charges in the Meridian district as a supply. He was a most excellent man, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. Before the war he was in good circumstances, and his purse, as well as his tongue, was consecrated to the Master's service. Many an impecunious itinerant preacher has been the beneficiary of his beneficence. He has a number of children, most or all of whom are married.

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

BY REV. ROBERT E. FARRIER.

Holy Spirit, life divine,
Dwelling in this frame of mine,
Let me feel thee every hour,
Make me know thy wondrous power.

Long I've wandered in the way,
Conscious that I went astray.
Now, submitting all to thee,
Life is changed and I am free.

Oh, the raptures of the soul,
In whose life thou dost control
Every thought and act and will,
With thyself that life to fill!

From the Methodist Mission School, Saltillo, Mexico.

[This letter, though written to all the children who read the dear old ADVOCATE, is especially addressed to those in the Seashore district, Mississippi Conference.]

Dear Children: When you read this, please feel like it is written to each of you, individually. I have been real anxious to write to you, but my eyes have been so weak ever since my arrival here, that it has been impossible for me to do it. I love children, and enjoy trying to instruct or please them. Especially do I enjoy encouraging them to work for Christ, which should be our highest aim in life.

Saltillo has about thirty thousand inhabitants. Look on your maps, and you will see that it is surrounded by mountains. It is about six thousand feet above sea level, and yet it is in a valley. The city is not pretty at all, but the mountains look beautiful at a distance. We sometimes see a cloud resting on a mountain, which reminds one of a volcano, for it looks like smoke rising out of the earth. The city contains several beautiful plazas and two large alamedas. (The word plaza means park; an alameda is a large park.) The alamedas are near our school. One of them is covered with magnificent shade trees, and is tastefully laid off, with nice paved walks, and a broad drive on the border. It has many nice seats, well arranged. A great many people, of all sizes and classes, go there every evening to promenade. It looks very queer to see such crowds, and never see a gentleman escorting a lady, or talking to one. The gentlemen and ladies are as distinctly separate here when they go out as the white and colored people are in the South. The rules of society here forbid a young man visiting a young lady, or giving her any attention. I know the large boys and girls at home think they are very hard on the young people here, but there is such a low estimate put on character here that parents think this is the only way to take care of their girls.

It is said that ninety-five per cent. of the Mexicans have no education. We are trying to educate them, and lead them to Christ. As a rule, the Mexican children are real bright, intellectually, but they too often lack energy and ambition, though some of them do real well. They have not the encouragement here that you all have. I wish you could see their bright, happy faces in the Sunday-schools and day-schools. Nearly all of our boarding pupils are members of the church. Five of our little girls joined last Sunday.

We are having a protracted meeting. We have a nice, good-sized chapel by the college, and have, at least, one hundred hearers every night. The Presbyterian minister is assisting us. He and our pastor are both natives of Mexico.

If you could only see the condition of these people, you would thank God, with all your heart, that you are in a Christian land. You would love God more for doing so much for you, and would do more to save souls.

Until about thirty years ago the Catholic Church owned two-thirds of the wealth of Mexico, and controlled the government. The people were not allowed to see a Bible, or to worship God, except as the priests directed. Now the government is not controlled by any church, all religions are protected, and Bibles and other good literature can be distributed, though the priests do all they can to prevent the people reading them. These people do not know anything about God pardoning sin for Christ's sake. When they do what the priests tell them is wrong, they have to pay a severe penance; sometimes walk on their knees through the middle of a street, in the hot sunshine, over the rough stones, for a mile or so, to atone for their sins. They pray to the saints and virgins, and carry them offerings of money and flowers. They think that they are lost if they die without making a confession to the priest just before death. They think that anyone, even an infant, is lost if they die without baptism. A poor woman sent a little girl babe here yesterday, only eight days old, to be baptized. She did not want the priest to do it, and thought that Miss Lelia Roberts could administer baptism. She is the principal of this school, and has been a missionary here for eight years. We sent for our pastor to come and baptize the child.

I want to tell you children about the burro, a very small animal, a species of mule, but very much smaller than any mules we use at home. It is the beast of burden here, for you seldom see a cart or dray of any description. You see these burros in droves, carrying huge loads of wood, stone, and, in fact, nearly anything that is to be carried. I have only seen two with bridles and saddles, though I often see persons riding them. The rider guides them by slapping them on the side of the head, and makes them halt by slapping them in the face. I get sorry for them, for they are generally very thin. It is said that a burrow can travel from here to the City of Mexico without stopping to rest. Their food is put in a pouch, which is fastened over the mouth like a muzzle, and it eats as it travels. They are remarkably gentle.

Little boys here are called muchachos, and little girls muchachas. Little children and babes are called ninos.

Mexico is a land of fruits and flowers, and is full of wonderful things. God has done a great deal for the country, but man has done little. But the people are now waking up to their condition. They are turning away from the gross impositions of the priests, which are too numerous to mention, and if we do not teach them the great plan of salvation through Christ, they will accept of infidelity or atheism.

Let me beg you, dear children, to do all you can to send the gospel to these people and all others who are in darkness. Be sure to give your heart to God if you have not already done it, and then show your love for him by leading others to Christ. This will please God and insure you happiness. You can do a great work for God by being prompt and active in your missionary societies. Remember, God tells us that our works will follow us. If you can help to save one soul, you do not know how many that person may lead to Christ, and thus the work will continue.

May God help you all to love and serve him! Your friend,

MRS. E. LOU WHYTE.

Example to the Flock.

Peter says, "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof." "Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock."

The greatest honor that has been conferred upon man is a call of God to the work of the ministry. Fidelity to the conferred trust reflects the greatest honor upon the manhood of man. The carnal nature of man makes it possible to become a lord over God's heritage. To become and continue an ensample to the flock requires ample share of the grace of God, coupled with much wisdom and self-denial. Entire consecration to God is a state of life essential to the success of the ministry. Lawful and unlawful things are weighed in the balances of the sanctuary. "Unto him be all the glory," will decide many a knotty point in Christian ethics.

The minister's unconscious influence is a point worthy of consideration. Is there anything about the tone of voice, manner, words, acts, habits, liable to mar the eternal prospects of a soul?

Lately I have had some experience. Sitting by the fireside of a Methodist home, remonstrating with a mother about the injurious effects of dancing as a means to quench the spirit and sow seeds of worldly-mindedness, she defended her love of the dance as but a human weakness, affirming that perfection of character was an impossibility. "If I dance, I don't drink liquor, play games of chance, or use tobacco. I consider smoking of tobacco to my husband as doing the greater evil, as it is shortening his days. Not long ago two ministers, one of them my pastor, were smoking in my home before my boys, while lecturing me upon the practice of dancing. All my efforts to restrain my boys from the cigarette habit go for naught. They retort, 'You are too strict. There can't be any harm in it, else papa and the preachers would not use it.'"

Once a Christian friend wrote me: "Our pastor is an excellent preacher and good pastor; but his esteemed liberty to smoke cigars is making it hard for me to save my son from the smoke habit."

The first year of my ministry, before I was of age, a mother asked me: "What shall I do? My husband died of consumption hastened by tobacco poison; my three sons smoke cigarettes. I have just told them it was wrong—in fact, a sin. The eldest, with respect, replied: 'Mother, you are a good woman, mean well, but you are mistaken; it can not be harmful—no sin—or the preachers would not smoke.'" That mother's troubled heart and predicament turned the current of my life. A minor's vow to my mother not to smoke would, in a short while, be canceled; but I now thank God I renewed the vow for Christ's sake, and have kept it.

O brethren, for Christ's sake cease the tobacco habit, and help the mothers save the boys; we being ensamples to the flock, and not "lords over God's heritage." R. B. DOWNER.

The Missionary Question.

The great gospel commission is given in a very few words, "Go ye, therefore, into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." This Scripture states what Christianity is to do. But how is it to be done? By any legitimate means which further the gospel cause, and this embraces right giving as well as right living and preaching and teaching.

To be a happy Christian a man must give right and live right. Now, I hold that all who can not go to teach the heathen must give to send them the gospel. All, of course, can not go. The command is as imperative to those who stay at home as to those who go. It is not enough to say, "I do not believe in foreign missions; I believe in work at home." That idea would have kept the gospel in Judea at Jernsalem. It contradicts the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." We are responsible for our beliefs. We are told by the Word of God that it is possible to believe a lie and be damned. To set up a belief contrary to the Word of God is sin. But what is right giving? I ought to acknowledge that all I have is from God, and I ought to use it as his. "Give," says Paul, "as God has prospered you." I understand that to mean all that I am able to give, whether it is the tenth, the fifth, or half; certainly not less than the tenth. The tenth was the Old Testament standard, and it is not abrogated in the New. The man who does not believe in giving money to send the gospel to the heathen, certainly has not the mind of Christ, for the Apostle John says, "If a man see his brethren in need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" If, then, he has not the love of God in him, and believes contrary to the Bible, how will he get to heaven? There are men who claim to be ministers of the gospel who go about preaching against the missionary work. These men do the cause of missions more harm than is generally supposed. We preachers in the circuits have the prejudice which they engender to overcome. This, together with ignorance of the needs of the missionary work, and a great deal of inborn stinginess, makes it right hard for the preachers to get up their assessments. When the preachers come up to Conference with short collections, it is not always their fault. Preachers frequently do all that Bro. Chambers names in his article in the Missionary Review, and then come up short. It is very easy for preachers on stations and in good places to blow about methods of getting money, when, if they would stop to think, poor circuit preachers hard pressed for a living went that way before them and planted that which they now occupy. Others have sown and they are reaping. But what of this? Why, if Methodist circuit riders have accomplished this much, they can do more; and the time will come when all these waste places will become fertile. Others have labored, and ye are entered into their labors. We are now plowing up the soil and sowing the seed; others will reap and thank God. The time will come when men will give liberally and as a pleasure. Then will the sowers overtake the reapers, and all will rejoice together. May God hasten the time!

Commencement Exercises of Grenada Collegiate Institute.

It was my pleasure to attend the commencement exercises of Grenada Collegiate Institute, June 3-5; and as there was no member of the Conference Visiting Committee present, I presume to note some items of the occasion which will be of interest to the friends of the institution.

On Sunday, at 11 A. M., a large congregation assembled in the Methodist Church to hear the commencement sermon by Rev. Amos Kendall, of Aberdeen. His subject was, "Character-Building," especially in relation to womanhood, with Prov. xiv, 1, first clause, as the text. The discourse was eminently appropriate, and being fraught as it was with wise counsels and wholesome admonitions, it was "good to the use of edifying."

Rev. J. W. Malone preached at night a good sermon on "Spiritual Life and Growth," from Matt. xiii, 31, 32.

Monday, 8 P. M., was given to the reading of essays by several of the graduating class, interspersed with music.

At 10 A. M., Tuesday, there was a large assemblage in the college hall of the citizens of Grenada, patrons of the school, and visitors from various quarters, to witness the graduating exercises, which consisted of music, essays, an address, the awarding of diplomas, medals, etc.

The orator for the day was Rev. Julien C. Brown, of Friar's Point, and well did he acquit himself on the subject, "The Thinkers of To-Day, and Their Relation to Physical Science." The address was timely and practical, and was received by the vast audience with many expressions of delight. Diplomas were then presented by President Newell to seven young ladies, who had attained to the honorable degree of M. E. L., viz.: Misses Jennie Newell, Lizzie Nicholson, Mamie Meaders, Kate Mayhew, Mary Ray, Grenada; Minnie Gordon, Neshit; Bettie Grantham, Winona. The degree of Licentiate Instructress was conferred on Miss Mary Evans.

In conclusion, Rev. T. J. Newell, A. M., the retiring president, made some appropriate and affecting remarks concerning his connection with the school during the past twelve years. He then introduced Revs. W. M. McIntosh and J. W. Malone, presidents-elect, as his successors, both of whom made well-timed remarks upon assuming the responsible trust committed to their charge.

In retiring from the institution over which he has so long and faithfully presided, Bro. Newell carries with him the sincere affection and esteem of a host of friends, who will ever pray the richest divine blessings upon him and his family.

We bespeak for Grenada Collegiate Institute, under the new management, renewed interest and co-operation by the preachers and people of the North Mississippi Conference. It deserves, and should have, our most cordial support. In the possession of this property we have a great opportunity of doing a great work in the line of Christian education in our country. Let us be up and doing ere some one else takes our crown. Let the preachers commend our school to parents who have daughters to educate.

Send to Rev. J. W. Malone, Como, Miss., for a copy of the new catalogue for 1894-95, and read and be convinced of the advantages afforded.

Religion in Millsaps.

During the recent gracious revival in Millsaps College and Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., we were not surprised to see the strong Christian influence that surround the college boys. It affords me great pleasure to say to all who send their sons to our college at Jackson, that they will have all the advantages that could be desired by any one for the soul, mind and body. I never saw so many good young men together. Not a word of complaint could be heard from any source against any one of the college boys.

Dr. Murrah and his able faculty are men of God. They carry upon their hearts the souls of those committed to their care. The families with whom the young men board are all devout Christians. They manifest prayerful interest in the salvation of the boys.

I met in the college seventeen bright young preachers and candidates for the ministry. These consecrated young men are preparing for great usefulness. Jackson has two of the best pastors in the State. Dr. West and Bro. Watkins come in touch with all the interests of the college. The young men enjoy their visits and love to hear them preach. The presiding elder, Bro. Monnger, is doing his part of the work with efficiency and success. Rev. W. D. Dominick has good books always on hand for the boys to purchase and read. Bishop Galloway puts the influence of his great life into the work of saving and educating the young men of Mississippi. There are hundreds of as good men and women in Jackson as can be found anywhere. It is an inspiration to see the spirituality and growth of Methodism in our capital city. It appears to me that our church is about to capture that city. It will not be long until the whisky saloons will be voted out of Hinds county. Moral reform is the watchword in Jackson. Our college is in the very best hands, and the people of our great State will sustain it.

Whitworth College.

The writer had the pleasure of attending the closing exercises of Whitworth College, when twenty-seven young ladies were graduated, and numerous certificates and medals awarded. The retiring president, L. T. Fitzhugh, A. M., and his efficient corps of teachers had done a fine year's work, and the graduates were worthy of their diplomas. The address by the Hon. J. S. Sexton, on "What Next?" was thoughtful, suggestive, appropriate, helpful, and enjoyable.

The incoming president, the Rev. John W. Chambers, A. M., in a few well-chosen words outlined the plans of the new administration, and all who heard him felt assured that the old college was entering upon a career of wider influence and brighter prospects than ever. The cordial invitation to the alumnæ to co-operate with him, and the earnest appeal to the preachers, will bear fruit in the near future, and so will his well-timed words to the class of 1894.

Bro. Chambers announced that he had associated with him Prof. Geo. W. Burton, A. M., a graduate and post-graduate of the Southern University, of Greensboro, Ala., who brings with him the experience of eight years of teaching and the rare native ability with which God endowed him. Those who know him well (and this writer has so known him for four years) feel assured that Prof. Burton is a worthy successor to Prof. Ricketts, so long identified with the work and the prosperity of Whitworth. Everybody regrets the retirement of Bro. Ricketts, and earnest prayers and kindest wishes will follow him wherever he goes. Such men are a benediction to any community. Misses Roberts and Dosohe will probably remain in charge of the music department.

Whitworth College will be furnished anew throughout and put in the very tidiest and best sanitary condition. The old and the new pupils coming next session may be assured of a comfortable home, bounteous fare, kindliest treatment, and thorough instruction. Our brethren in the ministry need not to be assured of a cordial welcome from Bros. Chambers and Burton whenever they visit Brookhaven, as well as of all due courtesy and entertainment when in attendance upon commencement or other special occasions. Neither is it necessary to give assurances to parents and guardians that the very best and brightest and sweetest of religious influences will permeate the college life and pervade the very atmosphere. Irreligious teachers will not be employed and none need apply. T. L. MELLEN.

East Mississippi Female College.

We have just returned from the East Mississippi Female College commencement, and we must confess that it was the best that we ever attended before. We regret, however, that we did not fortune to hear the commencement sermon by Dr. W. C. Black at the Central Methodist Church on Sunday, at eleven o'clock; but, knowing him as we do, we feel confident that he did his work well. The graduating class consisted of Miss Lula Dillehay, Miss Mabel Guiley, Miss Carrie Jones and Miss Beda Torgerson. These young ladies prepared and delivered their essays well.

Prof. C. W. Anderson, A. M., of Shuqualak, was the orator of the occasion. His address was tastefully arranged, full of thought and length.

Bro. T. B. Holloman, the president, his wife and their corps of teachers have done good, conscientious work, and, therefore, we feel confident that the trustees can not do better than to secure their services again. We have never had a president of that college, neither can one be secured, we think, that will be as unselfish and as untiring in trying to build it up as Bro. T. B. Holloman.

Being anxious to know something of the state of the college buildings and the surroundings generally, we asked permission of Bro. Holloman to go through and around the buildings, which he not only granted, but accompanied us. We were delighted to find that the new buildings had accommodation for more than sixty boarders, and that they were in good repair except a front porch, which is not only so badly dilapidated as to be dangerous for use (and is not used), but is an unsightly thing. We found the old building quite out of repair and dangerous. The plastering is falling off, the flooring uneven in the hall, and the south-side wall is cracked from bottom to top between the buttresses and at the corners. The southwest corner is not only cracked from bottom to the top, but it is four or more inches out of plumb. This building should have immediate attention, and the best, in our judgment, is to take it down and rebuild it. We do not see what else can be done. The old plank walks from the college to some buildings in the rear are much dilapidated, and so are the roofs of these buildings. The fence enclosing the college is much out of repairs. The enclosure and the old plank walks and buildings mentioned are fruitful sources of sickness. The enclosure should be made anew at once, and the old plank walks and buildings in the rear of the college should be taken down and out, and the ground leveled and be set with shade trees. There is a debt of nearly $6,000 hanging over the college. This ought not to be, and until it is lifted the college can not be a decided success. Why is it that nothing is being done about these matters? Will not the trustees do something? And if they can not, will they and the pastors of our church in the city not turn them over to the women of the city and let them see what they can do in the name of the Lord? Much for Methodism in Meridian is dependent on this college, and, therefore, let it be freed from debt and made what it should be.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

Duty to One's Self.

In a certain household located in northern New England, a house set among rugged hills and dimpling valleys, there lives a woman whom the angels write upon the roll of their saints. Her life is one of unremitting toil, hard, unrequited and unrecognized. The people around her, relatives by marriage, are incapable of appreciating the rare heroism of her life, the sweet beauty of her constant, uncomplaining devotion to her daily duty.

I do not think she has an ideal. She is too simple and straightforward and much too busy to think about how her conduct impresses others. She spends day after day, year after year, in caring for childhood and tending querulous old age, and through a weary and monotonous life, filled with drudgery, she keeps the sunny sweetness which distinguished her as a girl. It never occurs to her, either, that she is to be pitied or admired, or that she is doing anything extraordinary.

But her very self-abnegation is making her young daughters thoughtless of their mother's rights and claims. They are surprised when she occasionally expresses a wish for a change of scene or a new gown, or hints at being included in some projected party of pleasure. Her husband accepts her unremitting service as his due, and seldom puts himself out to show how much he thinks of it and of her. Indeed, it has become to him like the blessed commonplaces of the sky and earth and air, and he takes it in the same way, as a matter of course, and will never acknowledge what it is to him till one of these days it is gone. Even then it will not be evident to him that his wife died of devotion to him and his, a martyr to too great disregard of self, too unstinted outpouring for her family.

Dear sisters, there are some of you who need this reminder. God asks of you an account of one soul of his fashioning entrusted by him to your care. For the talents he entrusted to you he will exact a full report at the end of the day. You have no excuse for squandering yourself, you precious wife, you beloved mother, you faithful daughter or sister. I know a woman growing thin and gray—a woman who toils strenuously in an exhausting profession, earning her salary in the liberal wearing out of her strength—and twice in the last five years she has bestowed every penny of her savings on a strong, but indolent relative, a man who has never had force enough to take care of himself, but who does not scruple to take advantage of her weak unselfishness. Is she praiseworthy? Is she not rather responsible to a large degree for his pettiness and his disgraceful lack of manly chivalry?

Depend upon it, that each of us owes a plain duty to herself. This duty includes a proper care for our physical well-being, a taking whatever belongs to us, in consideration from others, in time and in leisure, and a recollection that we are God's children, and as such entitled to our share of what God meant us to have. Too much of the altruistic spirit and attitude may be bound unfavorably, and harm rather than help the very persons it hoped to elevate and broaden.—Mrs. M. A. Sangster, in Congregationalist.

Self-Denial.

Self-denial is the tap-root of Christianity. It is the last as well as the first rule of discipleship. Self-denial is not confined to any special or sacred season. It belongs to all times, and makes all seasons sacred. It is not depressed by a week of self-denial, but covers every minute of the whole life. It is not the abstaining from this luxury or even that necessity for a given length of time. The act of abstaining may be the expression of self-denial. It may be but a vicious substitute for it.

A week of self-denial may be like instruction of this rich grace. But to mistake a week's abstinence from some favorite indulgence for the principle of self-denial is a fatal delusion. This is like fulfilling the self-denying ordinance of "plucking out the right eye" by paring the finger-nails. Self-denial can no more be confined to one week than the ocean can be confined to a pint. Abstinence for a few days from one or all indulgences is no nearer to self-denial than the cutting off of the limb or bough is the felling of the tree.

The great hindrance to religion is self. It carries off by a thousand pipes and appropriates to its own uses the streams which might water and bless with good a hundred fields. Self-denial is the stopping of a great leak. Self-denial is a safety bank which saves the income from waste. It hoards like a miser the great and small amounts for every good investment. Self-denial stops outlays and leaks with economy and frugality, and gives the savings to God.

Self-denial, though, is not simply an economic or financial principle of the gospel. It is the principle which creates heaven in the Christian. It is the losing of this life, and by this loss the gain of the life to come. It is the lack of this principle that runs the pulse of religion low. Spiritual famine marks its decay. Spiritual death always attends on the absence of self-denial.

Look at this picture! A woman in Lowell (Sarah Hosener—she deserves to be named) learned that fifty dollars would educate a young man in the Nestorian Seminary. This woman, more than sixty years of age, living in an attic, by working in a factory and taking in sewing, sent out six missionaries. This illustrates the marvelous results of self-denial in one phase of its expression. Self-denial will! This woman was an ingrained principle, a life-long, ever-flowing and powerful. What miracles would follow if this principle was active in every professed Christian.—Exchange.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John F. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the test many a vigorous, well-trained, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Don't miss this opportunity.

As the name indicates, Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is a renewer of the hair, including its growth, health, youthful color, and beauty. It will please you.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

BANANAS.—Cut them lengthwise in two pieces, dust them with powdered sugar, put over bits of butter, squeeze lemon juice over them, and bake them for twenty-five minutes, basting them with the butter; serve in the dish in which they are baked.

HAM BALLS.—Chop cold boiled ham fine; add as many eggs as there are persons to be at the table, and a few bread crumbs; form into balls and fry delicate brown in butter or nice ham fat. By this method the last crumbs and bits of ham may be appetizingly served.—Presbyterian Journal.

CAKE.—Two cups of flour, one and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup butter, one-half cup milk, four eggs, two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Cream the butter, add the sugar, beat the yolks and stir in, then the milk and flour, last of all the well-beaten whites. Flavor to taste. This can be used as a layer cake.

SWEET APPLE PICKLE.—Take four pounds of sweet apples; peel and quarter. Make syrup of three pounds sugar and a pint of vinegar; flavor with cinnamon, cloves, and nutmeg; drop the apples in and cook until tender; put in a jar, pour the boiling syrup over, and seal. Peas and quinces can be made into sweet pickles by this recipe.

POTATO SALAD.—Slice cold boiled potatoes thin, mix with them minced celery and onion, more or less, according to taste, and serve with the following dressing: Two eggs, one cup sweet cream, sour cream, or milk with butter added, one teaspoonful each of salt and mustard; cook until just done, add vinegar to taste, and pour over the potatoes. This dressing is good for salads and other dishes with which mayonnaise is served.

RASPBERRY OR STRAWBERRY SPONGE.—One quart of berries, one-half box of gelatine, one and one-half cups of water, one cup of sugar, juice of one lemon, and the beaten whites of four eggs. Soak the gelatine in one-half cup of the water; mash the berries, and add half the sugar to them; boil gently the remainder of the sugar and the cup of water twenty minutes; strain the berries through a hair sieve; add gelatine to the boiling syrup; then take from the fire, and stir in berry juice; place the bowl in a pan of ice water, and beat with an egg-beater five minutes. Add beaten whites, and beat until it begins to thicken. Pour into wet molds, and set on ice. Serve with cream.—G. W., in Methodist Herald.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Tomatoes.

There have been in the history of truck farming around Crystal Springs several crops largely planted. The acreage of strawberries was once very large; now there is not enough in the whole community to make a carload a day. Among the numerous crops planted none have reached the extent of tomatoes. This is the big crop of the community. The people seemed to have found a fascination for it, and now many men, women and children, white and black, are engaged in it. Once there was big money in it; now it seems to be almost a matter of chance whether any one succeeds in it. The business has been wonderfully exaggerated both as to the money made out of it and the quantity planted. There is one class who do make money out of it, and that is the railroads. The crop always sells for enough to pay the freight; hence the larger the crop, the more the railroads make out of it. The commission merchant has the next grab. If the truck pays only a little over carriage, the merchant takes his commission; hence, as a rule, when the railroads and commission men get through with the sales, there is little left for the grower.

We do not wish it to be understood, however, we are one of those who would make war upon either. The railroads have shown a disposition to improve our facilities of transportation in nearly every instance when asked. There has been a constant improvement nearly every year until our opportunities of distribution are about as perfect as they could be expected under the circumstances.

As we have said, our enterprise has been greatly exaggerated. Some one has said our shipments have reached a hundred carloads a day, when the facts are, we have never run any higher than twenty-eight in one day, which amount was reached in June, 1892. In 1893 there was not so much any day, owing to blight and other causes. We are now in the midst of shipping. How many carloads we may ship any one day the present year is a matter of conjecture. We do, however, predict we will not reach as high as we did during 1892. There was one difference in last year's against that of the present; the prices then ran much higher in the early season than they do now. No doubt the financial pressure of the times has something to do with it.

Tomato growing is one of those occupations which produces a strange infatuation over the minds of those engaged in it. The circumstances attending the starting and growing of the plants is, no doubt, largely the cause. Like a sickly child, they have to be watched night and day from the time they are up growing until the crop is finally gathered and shipped. While in hot bed and cold-frames they have to be watched lest the extremes of heat or cold affect them. Either is disastrous to their growth. When in the field they have, upon our new methods, to be cared for, lest they are too highly fertilized—or not enough. Then the sticking, tying, pruning—and this is not all—gathering in the right degree of ripeness, the assorting and shipping altogether has the effect of absorbing the mind almost exclusive of everything else; so much so that when one neighbor meets another engaged in it he usually does not ask after his family, but "How are your tomato plants?"

There has never been but one other parallel case under our observation. Before the war men raised cotton to buy slaves, and bought slaves to raise cotton. Cotton and slaves was the all-absorbing question. Men were measured by the amount or number they had of each. The young man inquiring after the qualifications of a young lady rarely asked as to her moral or intellectual worth, but "How many slaves does her father own, and how many bales of cotton does he raise." To show the extent to which cotton raising had reached in controlling the minds of men, we well remember this little story related by our father. He stated that two or three others and himself entered the home of a cotton grower on an occasion when he was in the act of seating himself for dinner. He asked them to take their seats at the table. He was accustomed to saying grace. He raised his hands solemnly, and said, "Lord bless us in what we are about to do. (What's the price of cotton?) Amen." Cotton was foremost in the mind. "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Now, tomato raising has a like absorbing effect. It is the theme of conversation among the growers whenever they meet, especially during growing and shipping season. With this there is one desirable effect it does produce; that of making the grower energetic. There is no success without it.

If you would find a great many faults, be on the lookout. If you would find them in still greater abundance, be on the look in.

HYGIENE.

Recreation.

Put some playtime into your lives, and so avoid letting that life run into nuts. There are men whose whole existence is devoted to the profession or calling which they have taken up. Could anything be better or make them surer to succeed than this? In a certain sense, and within certain limits, no. Pushed and jostled, as you are sure to be, in this busy world of ours, by the sharp competition of others, you will prosper in nothing that you do not enter into with your whole soul and mind and strength. Then what could be better than this entire devotion to business? For the hygiene of your brain, an hour or two for relaxation every day, with a little wholesome neglect of that same business, would be far better. There are many men who literally devote their whole lives to the one business of coining money, and some of them make a mint of it. Those of us who coin but little, think we could give them some points in spending; could even show to their lives a more excellent way of living. "He gave them their request, but sent leanness into their souls." Poor as I am, I have come to pity some of them—these men that are made of money. Called in consultation in my professional capacity, I find a poor, rich man who is breaking down under the nineteenth-century strain—a man who has made business his life and money his god, and in the process of devoting the one to the service of the other, he has reached the time when his business is killing him. I suggest a rest and vacation with pleasant journeys, only to find that no change is possible, for there is absolutely nothing to his life but business; for him nothing has any beauty, nothing any charm but money-making. He early put the machine in motion, and has devoted his whole life to watching it coin money. It has withered his heart and shrivelled his soul, and now it must stop; but the stopping will kill him, and yet without rest he must die. For you and me, without script and barely two coats apiece for the journey, this great wide world is full of vacation rambles and pleasant, restful places. For him there is no rest but the grave, whither he is going. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Dr. W. W. Godding.

Long Life and Temperance.

A paper devoted to the interest of life insurance (The Insurance Observer) has taken up the subject of drink as related to longevity, and says: Nothing is to the average man so precious as the sometimes questionable boon of life itself, and, if he can once be convicted that, as the inevitable result of habitual excess, his tenure of the existence which he prizes will be considerably curtailed, the argument will appeal to his selfishness with an effect which more generous consideration will probably fail to produce.

The employment of an argument of this nature belongs within the province of the insurance officials. The physician may warn and point to the probable effects of intemperance upon kidneys or brain, or heart, and his patient will listen, and think that the doctor may be right, yet he will keep on at his cups. Nothing, however, is more practical than figures; of all facts, they are the hardest to get around. If, therefore, the experience of several assurance companies show that the mortality amongst the moderate drinker is largely in excess of that amongst the abstainer, we are here provided with an argument which appeals to the selfish instincts of humanity. To those who have observed and studied the circumstances with an unbiased mind, this is no new revelation. The experience of the United Kingdom Temperance and General Institution has been in accord with it—not as an occasional or isolated occurrence, but as an unvarying law. Efforts have been made by some writers to minimize the conclusions to which these results point, on the ground that the "general" section of this class of life office is more or less vitiated by the infusion of a proportion of excessive drinkers; but this does not explain the enormous disproportion between the mortality amongst temperate and that amongst average lives.

In other words, insurance statistics prove positively that temperance and abstinence from alcohol promotes longevity, and that intemperance shortens life. These ought to be self-evident axioms.

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. Those have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

To the Methodists of Louisiana.

At the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College I was tendered the presidency of that institution. The call to the position was so unexpected and the surprise so great, that I felt compelled to ask for time to consider the matter. After mature deliberation and free consultation with intimate friends, I have concluded that it is my duty to accept the position. I trust I have enough appreciation of the responsibility involved to arouse every energy to do the work of such a high office. I shall do what I can. Being an alumnus of the college, I cherish the hope that I shall have the special help of every other alumnus. The college, belonging to the Methodist Church, and during the fifty years of its existence having given substantial pledges of its loyalty to Methodism and its good work in the cause of Christian education, I claim the right to expect the hearty support and the cordial co-operation of every Methodist in Louisiana. In a peaceful town, with healthful surroundings, with an able corps of trained teachers and with tuition and boarding down to the minimum, there is no reason that we should not have our class-rooms and dormitories full of busy boys, earnestly preparing for the activities and responsibilities of life. I invite correspondence with parents and guardians who are looking about for educational advantages for their boys. For the present my address is: 163 Delachaise street, New Orleans, La.

Progress.

The world still moves. Louisiana has joined Mississippi and Texas and most of the Northern States in giving to woman the same educational facilities with the sterner sex. At the recent commencement of Tulane University two young women received the degree of A. M. These two young women are Miss Addie Spencer and Miss Margaretta Powers. They both graduated some time since in Sophie Newcomb College, and then took a post-graduate course in Tulane.

E. M. F. College.

Contrary to his inclinations, Rev. T. B. Holloman has yielded to the pressure brought to bear upon him by the friends and patrons of East Mississippi Female College, and consented to remain at its head for another year. Sundry improvements on the buildings and grounds have been projected. We commend the institution to our readers as preeminently worthy of their patronage. The curriculum is good, and the faculty efficient.

Port Gibson and Millsaps.

It was our privilege to preach the commencement sermon at Port Gibson Female College on Sunday, June 10. Our home during out sojourn in the beautiful little city was with the genial and cultured president of the college, Rev. W. H. Huntley, to whom and to his family we are indebted for many courtesies. We found a number of acquaintances and friends in the faculty, whose companionship was much enjoyed. We also had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Huntley's mother, whose home is in La Grange, Ga., a town to which we made a pleasant commencement visit a year ago.

The commencement sermon was preached, according to custom, in the Methodist Church, which, spacious as it is, was crowded with an audience that gave undivided attention to the preaching of the Word. Some fine music, both vocal and instrumental, was rendered by the choir.

In the afternoon we attended the monthly meeting of the Addie Gordon Juvenile Missionary Society. Port Gibson having been the home of Miss Addie Gordon (now Mrs. Burke) prior to her entrance upon mission work in China, it is but natural to expect Port Gibson Methodists to be interested in mission work. And so it is. The Addie Gordon Missionary Society is one of the best-organized and most active societies of its class of which we have any knowledge. The exercises on Sunday afternoon consisted of readings and recitations, interspersed with song. The songs were partly by the choir, partly by the whole audience, and partly by select groups of the young folks, numbering perhaps a dozen or more. There was a good audience in attendance, and the exercises were quite interesting. A meeting of this sort is held every month. We know of no better plan of building for the future. The boys and girls who are trained up under this sort of regime will not be heard when they have reached maturity prating about being opposed to foreign missions. Those who have the benefits of such training will become intelligent, liberal, progressive, working Christians—what the church needs far worse than new machinery or additional legislation. We congratulate Port Gibson station and its pastor upon the work of this society.

It was also our privilege on Sunday afternoon to take a peep into the elegant new parsonage now occupied by Bro. B. F. Jones and family, with whom we spent a most delightful hour. This parsonage is one of the very best in the Conference—perhaps the best. It was built entirely by the ladies of the church. We do not mean that the rougher sex were denied the privilege of making contributions; but the entire work of raising the necessary funds was done by the women. Had it not been done by them it is very likely it would not have been done at all—a hint by which other churches we wot of might profit.

Late in the afternoon we attended a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. connected with Chamberlain-Hunt Academy, and made a brief talk. This institution, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church, is doing good work. The moral tone of the school is good, and most of the boarders participate in the work of the Y. M. C. A.

At night we had the pleasure of hearing a very unique and entertaining discourse by Bro. Huntley on Paul at the feet of Gamaliel.

We were very sorry to miss seeing our friend and brother, sub-Bishop Weems, of the diocese of Vicksburg. We had, however, a pleasant chat with Sister Weems, who, although denied the privilege of serving the Master in the foreign field, still has missions on her brain, heart and conscience. Although we missed seeing Bro. Weems, we heard from him extensively. Coming in contact with brethren from different parts of his widely-extended district, we heard most gratifying reports concerning his work. In the pulpit and out of it he is magnifying his office. Naturally deeply interested in mission work because of his former experience as a missionary, he is diffusing missionary information, stimulating missionary zeal and multiplying missionary activities; while at the same time he is making full proof of his ministry along other lines. Every good cause finds in him a friend and a helper.

Port Gibson Female College has a good faculty and is doing thorough work. It commands the respect and confidence of the community, regardless of creed or sect. The buildings and grounds are admirable. The discipline is firm, but gentle. Parents looking for a home-like school for their daughters should investigate the claims of Port Gibson Female College.

We would have been glad to remain at Port Gibson throughout the commencement exercises; but, being a member of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, duty called us to Jackson on Monday.

At Vicksburg we had the good fortune to meet Dr. C. G. Andrews ticketed for the Capital City. We reached Jackson in time for the meeting of the Board in the afternoon, the morning session having been intermitted for want of a quorum.

While in Jackson we enjoyed the hospitalities of Sister C. B. Galloway and her smaller half, the Bishop. We found the Bishop in good health, though he is aging rapidly, as he now answers to the name, "Grandpa." He left on Tuesday for Chicago, where he will make an address at the commencement of Northwestern University.

Of the commencement exercises at Millsaps it is needless that we should write, as extended reports will be given in our columns by our correspondents. The outlook for the college is decidedly hopeful. Those who understand the situation best confidently expect an attendance of two hundred at the opening next Fall. The report of the financial agent is also encouraging. The people are responding liberally to Major Millsaps' proposition. Notwithstanding the financial stringency, quite a handsome sum will be realized before the close of the year. Some changes were made in the faculty. The place of Prof. Patillo, who resigned on account of bad health, was filled by the election of Prof. J. A. Moore, who has occupied the chair of mathematics in the Southern University for ten years or more. Prof. Moore is not only thoroughly up with the times in his special line, but he is also a teacher of rare gifts, and a prodigious moral and religious force in any community in which he lives. The vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Prof. Black, who resigns to enter the pastorate, was left to be filled by the Executive Committee.

An Educator Weds.

Rev. F. M. Grace, D. D., president of Hiwassee College, was married, June 7, to Miss Ida F. Hoskins, of Chilhowee, Tenn. Miss Hoskins is said to be a very amiable and accomplished woman—a native of Kentucky. The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. H. Brunner in the beautiful new church at Chilhowee, which is described by a correspondent as "a rare gem set in a casket of mountains on the rolling Tennessee." The church was profusely and tastefully decorated for the occasion. May the young couple have a prosperous voyage across the sea of matrimonial life!

About Communications.

We deem it well to say something about communications. Brethren frequently send us a communication with a request to publish it in the next issue. In most cases it is utterly impracticable for us to do so. We usually have on hand from forty to sixty or seventy communications. Now, why should we pass by these numerous articles which have been on hand for weeks—some of them for months—and publish one just received simply because the writer requests it? It must be presumed that all these writers are equally anxious to see their productions in print. It must also be presumed that all have equal claims upon us so far as personality is concerned. In other words, we ought not to show any favoritism. This, we think, will be conceded by all. And yet it is a fact that we do publish continually articles just received, while others that have been in our drawer for a considerable time are left over. To some this may seem strange; and yet a very little reflection will show that there is a necessity for it. Some communications must be published at once or not at all. Anyone can see that many articles which appear in our columns would be of no interest after a lapse of a few weeks. Communications of this class always have the preference in all well-conducted papers. Then, too, other considerations come in to interrupt the chronological order. The length of an article has something to do with the time of its appearance. Very often we have space for a short article when we can not make room for a long one. Then, too, the character of the article is to be considered. Believing that variety is a desirable element in a bill-of-fare, we prefer not to have many articles of the same sort in the same issue; hence, articles are sometimes laid over simply because something else has been admitted on the same subject. Moreover, we do not think it best to fill our entire space with communications. We will now divulge one of the secrets of this office. Our readers, so far as we can judge by expressions that come to us voluntarily, both orally and in writing, very decidedly prefer that a considerable proportion of our space shall be occupied with clippings such as we make. Concerning no other feature of our editorial work have we received more hearty expressions of commendation than this.

There are other considerations too numerous to mention which determine the order in which communications shall appear. The fact that an article is not published immediately is no indication of a want of merit in the article or of a want of appreciation on the part of the editor. Indeed, this is oftentimes a proof of superior merit. The article which must be published at once touches some merely temporary interest. The article which will not spoil by keeping has to do with matters more enduring. We have on hand at this time articles of merit which have been in our drawer for months. Some of these have been turned over to the printer more than once, and yet have been crowded out by matter of temporary importance. No brother has a right to assume that his communication has been rejected because it does not appear at once; neither has he a right to assume that he has been unjustly treated.

A general reputation for dealing fairly and honorably with all men ought to protect an editor against evil surmisings on the part of those who place their mental progeny at his disposal. An editor must be allowed to exercise his own judgment concerning the make-up of his paper. This carries with it the right to reject communications. Except under peculiar circumstances no man has a right to demand a place in the columns of a paper. The rejection of an article does not necessarily imply that it lacks merit. Articles are sometimes rejected because they are too heavy for our columns. They would be in place in a review or high-class magazine, but are not adapted to a journal like ours. We have, very recently, refused to publish some excellent articles of this sort. Again, articles are sometimes sent to us which would be first-class matter for a high grade secular paper, but which are not in accord with our ideal of the make-up of a religious journal. Various other considerations enter into the determination of the question of the acceptance or rejection of a manuscript. From what has been said it follows that no man has a right to get into a rage because an editor rejects a production of his pen.

The statement has been made recently that the present editor of the Nashville Advocate has rejected communications from each of our ten Bishops. Yet not one of them has raised a howl or sought to disparage the editorial judgment of Dr. Hoss. We have written this in order that there may be a good understanding between ourselves and our correspondents. We are very glad to have our brethren send us communications; but let it be understood that we do not promise in advance to either to publish everything sent, or to publish anything just as written. The right to abridge and otherwise change is one of the inalienable prerogatives of the tripod.

About Advertising.

We have heard of a brother's criticising the ADVOCATE because so much space is taken up with advertising. Such criticisms are utterly unreasonable. Anyone who knows anything at all of the newspaper business knows that advertising is indispensable because it is the chief source of revenue. The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE could not have lived for years past without advertising. Moreover, the amount of advertising to be admitted into the columns of this paper is fixed by the Publishing Committee. The amount of space which we actually occupy with advertisements lacks from five to eight columns of the space given us for that purpose by our contract. The only reply we wish to make to criticisms of this sort is to say that we intend to fill the entire advertising space allotted us by our contract with advertisements if we possibly can. See the point?

Y. M. C. A. Jubilee Convention.

At the "World's Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association," held in London a few days since, twenty-six nationalities were represented by more than nineteen hundred delegates, two hundred of whom were Americans.

It is especially noteworthy that the convention received most hearty recognition from the Established Church. A mammoth meeting was held in Westminster Abbey. Another was held in St. Paul's Cathedral, His Lordship, the Bishop of Ripon, preaching the sermon. A grand reception was given to the members of the convention by the municipal authorities.

June 6 being the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Association, two mammoth meetings were held on that day—one in the morning, the other in the evening. At the evening meeting a bust of the founder of the association, Sir George Williams, was unveiled by Lord Kinniard. The conferring of the order of knighthood upon this princely man can, of course, add nothing to his fame. Still it was a gracious and praiseworthy act on the part of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. Sir George was, of course, the central figure of the great convention. Though an octogenarian, he is still active in business, and also in religious and philanthropic work.

John A Ellis Memorial.

To the Friends of the late Rev. John A. Ellis:

Bro. Peter James has given me $250 on the J. A. Ellis Memorial Home for Students, to be erected on Millsaps College campus this Summer. Now, let me receive a contribution to this cottage at once from all the friends of Rev. Jno. A. Ellis, whose life was a benediction, and whose name is as an ointment poured forth.

I. W. COOPER,
Fin. Agt., Millsaps College.

Jackson, Miss., June 18, 1894.

This is a move in the right direction. The name of John A. Ellis is revered throughout Mississippi. He had itinerated in all parts of the Conference, having labored in every district with possibly one exception; and his friends are legion in every region that was blessed with his labors. What more fitting memorial of this saintly man could be erected than a cottage bearing his name on the campus of Millsaps College—a cottage designed to furnish needed aid to aspiring young manhood? Who would not prefer such a memorial to a gorgeous mausoleum of marble, even though it should pierce the clouds and be more enduring than old Cheops?

The North Mississippi Conference has undertaken to build several memorial cottages. Shall the Mississippi Conference fall behind in this noble work? Let all who revere the memory of John A. Ellis make a contribution. Not only large contributions, but small ones will be thankfully received. We hope to see this memorial cottage materialize at an early day. In behalf of the Methodism of Mississippi, we thank Bro. James for initiating this movement. Let us keep the ball rolling.—EDITOR.

About Field Notes.

A brother sent us a report from his work a few days since, accompanied by a private note in which he expressed the hope that his report would not find its way into the waste-basket. This leads us to say that reports "from the work," properly so called, are never consigned to the waste-basket in this office. It is conceivable that a brother might write an article purporting to be a report from his charge which would be in reality something else. In such a case the so-called report would come under the same rule as other communications. Bona-fide pastoral reports we always publish, though we sometimes find it necessary to abridge them. It is our aim, too, to publish them in chronological order. When we fail to do this, it is because of an oversight. Postal card reports, however, take precedence.

A Wise Benefaction.

A brother who very modestly withholds his name from the public has given to Millsaps College, through Dr. Cooper, the sum of five hundred dollars for the purchase of apparatus for the scientific department. Knowing the brother, we take the liberty of saying that this is only in keeping with his record. May his tribe be multiplied in our Zion.

A Good Woman Gone Home.

We regret to chronicle the death of Sister Terry, wife of Bro. C. N. Terry, a superannuated preacher of the North Mississippi Conference. She died at Sardis, Miss., June 1. We extend to Bro. Terry our deep sympathy in his sore bereavement. Her end was more than peaceful; it was triumphant.

Rev. T. Carter, son of Dr. C. W. Carter, who has just completed a three years' theological course at Vanderbilt, won the R. A. Young medal for oratory during the commencement.

Our church is in arrears with its chief shepherds. The salaries of our Bishops for the past quadrennium fell short $800. One-half of the shortage belongs to the present year. This ought not to be.

The British Wesleyan Conference, at its next session, to be held at Birmingham, will have to deal with the woman question in a practical way. Miss Dawson has been elected to a seat. Is she eligible? is the question.

Centenary College, at its last commencement, conferred the degree of D. D upon Rev. E. H. Monnger, and that of A. M. upon Rev. B. F. Jones, both of the Mississippi Conference—honors worthily bestowed.

A canning factory was opened at West Point on the fifteenth. It will employ fifty hands and will run through the season day and night. This is a move in the right direction. Why should not our Southern people can the fruit they raise instead of shipping it to the North to be canned?

Our news column last week did an injustice to Mr. Widney, of this city. The statement that an affidavit had been made against him was true; but it should also have been stated that the courts ignored the affidavit, the recorder and the district attorney both refusing to make it the basis of judicial proceedings. In justice to Mr. Widney we gladly make the statement.

Be More Gentle.

A well-known member of the House of Commons, who died a few years ago, said towards the close of his life that if he were called again to go over former lines of thought, he would bear himself more gently and in a more modest, kindly, and charitable spirit than he once did. How often we hear of something similar to this being uttered by people as they draw near to the bound of life. Young men often think they must be very stern and strenuous, very hard and heroic, and must brand evils unflinchingly, no matter who is hurt in the process. They have much self-confidence, and are very sure that whatever does not commend itself to their judgment or taste is an evil that should be summarily put down. So they impinge with violence against a great many people, and create much unnecessary bad feeling. But when they are older grown and understand human nature better, they begin slowly to realize what blunders they have made. They see it would have been better not to have pushed with such fierceness or condemned with such severity. We rarely feel that we have been too gentle and modest, too charitable and kindly.—Zion's Herald.

Counting on Us.

A brother who has taken the trouble to count says that the editor appeared in the last issue of the ADVOCATE twenty-one times. Perhaps it would have been more modesty in the editor to have given a part of the space be occupied to other pens; but modesty of that sort is not a characteristic of the editorial fraternity. It may be well, however, to look at the other side. Counting notices, there are in the same issue of the paper fifty-four pieces from other pens than ours—not including clippings.

Dr. C. W. Carter and Centenary College.

The following resolution was offered by Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens, D. D., in the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting, and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Preachers' Meeting express ourselves as greatly gratified at the action of the trustees of Centenary College in electing Dr. C. W. Carter president of said college. That we pledge our enthusiastic support to the management of Centenary College.

A Great Nerve Tonic,

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. I. HARRIS HALL, State Lunatic Asylum, Milledgeville, Ga., says: "I have used it in cases of nervous prostration after acute mania. I also found it gave great relief in cases where there seemed to be a want of proper assimilation of food accompanying chronic insanity. It is undoubtedly a great nerve tonic."

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

The Hawaii Question Settled.

Grover Cleveland has been foiled once in his life. His attempt to restore the dethroned queen of Hawaii has come to naught. The United States Senate, the treaty-making power of our government, has decided that the people of those islands have the right to govern themselves according to their own ideals without any interference on the part of Uncle Sam.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials Address,

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

MISSIONARY LESSON.

(Isaiah xxxv, 1-10; Luke iv, 16-20.)

The Bible full of holy imagery. The hideousness of heathenism and the charms of Christianity are here picturesquely set forth.

1. Heathenism is aptly compared to a desert. A wilderness, a solitary place.

(1) A desert is devoid of brooks and rivers. Empty not refreshing showers. Think of Sahara.

(2) A place of danger. Lions and ravenous beasts are there. Robbers.

(3) Oases are few and far between. Can think of only two: Socrates and Cornelius.

2. Christianity is commissioned to reclaim the dreary waste places. Shall say to the heathen: "He will come and save you."

(1) Gives spiritual irrigation. "Springs of water." Living water. Christ the water of life.

(2) The soil onlitivated. Break up the fallow ground. (Jeremiah iv, 3.)

(3) Sow spiritual things. "In the morning we sow our seed."

(4) Some falls into good ground and brings forth fruit, some a hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold.

3. Our text-chapter employs other emblems with which to indicate the glorious success of our missionary operations.

(1) The eyes of the blind shall be opened. Blind, they worship an unknown God. Now they see the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.

(2) The ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Hear the things which belong to their peace. Will hear in sweetest strain: "Thy sins are forgiven thee."

(3) The lame shall leap as a hart. Are enabled to walk in the narrow way, the highway of holiness. Will go on to perfection.

(4) The tongue of the dumb shall sing. God giveth songs in the night. Hallelujahs abound.

(5) Joy and gladness supplant sorrow and sighing.

"Jesus! the name that charms our fears,
That bids our sorrows cease;
'Tis music in the sinner's ears,
'Tis life, and health, and peace."

Union Epworth League.

The Union Epworth League met in the Morean Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Thursday, June 14. The meeting proved a blessing to all who attended. The feature of the evening was an admirably prepared paper by Dr. R. L. Sobroder, setting forth the history of Morean Street Church.

The next meeting will be held at Craps Street Church.

Do Not Grow Sour.

Suppose you are advancing in years, and are never to be young again in this world; is it not well to make the best of things, and take life cheerfully and happily? Of course you have trials, you always did; there are troubles and disappointments; these are the common lot of men. You may suffer wrongfully: who has not suffered thus? The Son of God himself was hated without a cause, and crucified, and slain; and you may be called to suffer with him. But murmuring only makes things worse.

Sourness robs us of the sympathy that might otherwise alleviate our sorrows. Those who are sour and surly get little pity and sympathy; those who bear suffering and affliction with patience find many who sympathize with them in trials and afflictions. No doubt you meet many things at which you might justly complain, but will complaining cure them? Will it not rather aggravate the troubles you endure? Do not then make matters worse; turn your face to the sunshine, look up, not down, and think how much God has done for you, how much blessing has come to you, how many others there are whose lot in life is harder and more bitter than your own; and when you have really taken these things into account, see if you do not find more cause for gladness than for grief, more things for you to be thankful for than for you to be groaning over. If you will learn to look upon the bright side, you will find that there is a bright side, and if you walk among shadows, remember that the path of humanity is a shadowy path, that you are in a world which, though it was once pronounced "very good," is now described as "evil."

You are but a pilgrim here, you are to pass the time of your sojourning in fear; but do not let the passing pleasures of this present life hide from your thoughts and your hopes the glory of the life which is to come. You are but a sojourner here, a pilgrim and a stranger, and since you only tarry for a night, you can put up with many inconveniences, with many unpleasant things. If you will think of home as not far away, with all the joys and blessings which pertain to it, you can then "count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations," and rejoice in afflictions and sorrows, and trials, "receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls." If you are growing old, let your life be marked with ripe sweetness rather than with acidity and decay, and if you can win the approval of the heavenly Master at last, what matters it how dark and dreary this present life, if he shall call us at last to his eternal home, and say to us, "Well done"?

"O what are all my sufferings here
If, Lord, then count me meet,
With that enraptured host to appear
And worship at thy feet?

"Give joy or grief, give care or pain,
Take life and friends away,
But let me find them all again
In that eternal day."

—The Common People.

Attend to Reading.

Reading is a great means of education, and whether it be a blessing or a curse depends on what we read. By reading we may commune with the mightiest and the wisest minds, and if we will improve our moments, we may by reading equip ourselves for great usefulness in this world. Great men have usually been great readers. Abraham Lincoln and James A. Garfield used to read and study lying flat upon the floor before the fire; Hugh Miller stored his mind with knowledge in the same way, while his associates were spending their time in idle talk; Schielman, when a boy, standing in line at the postoffice and waiting for his letters, saved the fragments of time by studying Greek from a pocket grammar. Fifteen minutes saved four times a day gives us thirty hours in the month, the working time of about sixty days of six hours each in a year, or about five years' study in thirty years' time; and five years well used yield more fruit than a whole life-time squandered.

Persons of a studious mind, by giving attention to reading, gain many of the advantages of a "liberal education;" and besides, in learning just what they need to know, and omitting other things which may not be so directly to their purpose, they may often equip themselves more thoroughly for their work by such reading than they would by passing through an ordinary educational course.

Success in business depends not upon the large volume done, but upon the small margin of profit secured and retained; so success in life may depend upon our ability to save the moments, the precious "margin" that is left after we have done the things which are necessary in order to discharge our duties to earn our daily bread. The studious, thoughtful boy or girl, who gives attention to reading, and who reads something that means something, instead of filling the mind with the everlasting wish-wash of cheap novels and romances, will be found at last to be equipped with facts, knowledge and wisdom, and fitted for positions in life which none but a well-read person can ever hope acceptably to fill.—The Christian.

A Happy Sabbath.

That is profound philosophy which counsels parents to make Sunday the happiest day of the week. And the chief requisite to this is that they give themselves to their children—at church as well as at home. The Sunday-school must not be allowed to usurp the place of the church service. The child nestled in the family pew at his mother's side, holding his father's hand, enters naturally from the shelter of warm human love, and the house of God very early becomes to him the gate of heaven.

Music is the heritage of the family Sabbath.

Books belong to the family Sabbath. Not sickly or precocious story papers, nor sordid secular papers, nor scrappy religious ones, but real books and all the real books, poetry as well as books of devotion, essays and biographies, and every other kind of book that sets the heart throbbing with a wish to be something greater and better than we have ever been before. And often some will read aloud while the chairs draw together, the reader pausing all the way along for the children's questions, and the commentary of the parents, and for reminiscences and hopes ahead.

Then, as the family walk abroad, the father assumes his most ancient, most sacred office of high priest of his household. Then all become psalmists, all prophets. The harvest waves the promise of better things than leaves for the table. The solemn mountains, the deep skies, are more than backgrounds for landscapes, show places for rainbows; for underneath the voices of winds and waters they hear the earth spirit in her most secret utterance:

"'Tis thus at the roaring loom of time I ply,
And weave for God the garment thou seest him by."

They who walk the earth together shall not be separated in heavenly places.—Harper's Bazar.

Some Don'ts for Wives.

Don't look for perfection in your husband. He has not found perfection in you, has he?

Don't treasure up all your daily trials for your husband's ears when he comes home at night.

Don't talk so much about what "lovely times" you used to have when you were "free and single."

Don't ask him to be both master and mistress of the house. Don't expect him to oversee your servants or do things that you, as mistress of your own home, ought to do.—Reformed Church Messenger.

GRANDMA.

When grandma puts her glasses on
And looks at me just so—
If I have done a naughty thing
She's sure somehow to know.
How is it she can always tell
So very, very, very well?

She says to me: 'Yes, little one,
'Tis written in your eye!"
And if I look the other way,
And turn and seem to try
To hunt for something on the floor,
She's sure to know it all the more.

"If I should put the glasses on
And look in grandma's eyes,
Do you suppose that I should be
So very, very wise?
Now, what if I should find it true
That grandma had been naughty, too?

"But, ah! what am I thinking of?—
To dream that grandma could
Be anything in all her life
But sweet and kind and good!
I'd better try myself to be
So good that when she looks at me
With eyes so loving all the day
I'll never want to turn away."

—Our Little Ones.

For Inky Fingers.

A little girl I know has made a wonderful discovery, which she thinks all other little school-boys and girls should know too.

"It's so useful, mama," she says; "all boys and girls get ink on their fingers, you know."

"Surely they do, and on their clothes as well," said her mother.

"I can't get the spots out of my clothes, but I'm sorry when they get there," responded the little girl. "I try very hard not to. But I can get the ink spots off my fingers. See!"

She dipped her fingers into water, and while they were wet she took a match out of the match-safe, and rubbed the sulphur end well over every ink spot. One after another she rubbed, and one after another the spots disappear, leaving a row of white fingers where there had been a row of inky-black ones.

"There!" said the little girl, after she had finished. "Isn't that good? I read that in a housekeeping paper, and I never knew they were any good before. I clean my fingers that way every morning now. It's just splendid."

Some other school girls and boys might try Alice's cure for inky fingers.—Harper's Young People.

The Danger Line.

Hundreds of thousands of young men are rapidly rushing into drunkenness, because of the deceitfulness of their expectation that they can escape the liability of passing the danger line. In the name of truth and righteousness we appeal to all of them to study the record of experience, and they will thereby learn that they will have reached that danger line when they enter upon the drink habit. Some of them may not cross that line, but a majority of them will do so. We do not mean that all this majority will reel through the streets, but the moral, physical and mental manhood of most of them will be impaired, which is practical drunkenness, and very many of them will go down to visible degradation and death.—Sacred Heart Review.

Kind Words.

Let us look about us and see if we can not lift a stone from the heart of some one by a kindly word of appreciation. We will not have to go far to find a place and opportunity for such a ministration of love. Your own children may be accustomed to complaints; have they also received an occasional "well done"? The servants about your house, or the laborers on your farm, may be familiar with the fault-finding tone of your voice; have they ever heard a hearty and generous word of praise? The teacher in the day school, the clerk behind the counter, the workman in the shop, the officer on the railway, the minister in the pulpit, even the boot-black on the street—all these may be made happier and better by your words of generous appreciation and kindness. Such words cost us nothing, but they are of priceless value to their recipients. Nor are they without their reward; for if the giving of a cup of cold water is a matter for registry in heaven, surely the words that lift a burden from a troubled heart shall not be unnoticed by our heavenly Father.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Small Matters Count.

Lay up things in your brain. You may want them. A small matter, remember, may come just in place sometimes, and perhaps illustrate a subject better than a long argument, or get you out of a tight fix better than weapons or money.

Daniel Webster once told a good anecdote in a speech. When asked where he got it, he said, "I have had it laid up in my head for fourteen years, and never had a good chance to use it till to-day." My little friend wants to know what good it will do to learn the "rule of three," or to commit a verse of the Bible or the catechism. The answer is this: Some time you will need that very thing! Perhaps it may be twenty years before you can make it fit just in the right place. But it will be just in place some time, and then if you don't have it, you will be like the hunter who had no ball in his rifle when he was met by a deer.

"Twenty-five years ago my teacher made me study surveying," said a man who had lost his property, "and now I am glad of it. It is just in place. I can get a good situation and high salary."—George B. Griffith, in New York Observer.

The Value of Money.

Those only whose necessities have required them to earn money appreciate its value and know how to spend it economically. That which comes to us without our own labor we generally spend without compunction. The best possible training for the youth of both sexes is secured when they are placed for some years in a position where all their support must be the product of their own labor of hands and brains. Lessons thus taught are not forgotten; habits of economy once contracted are permanently retained; but where some one else, a husband or father, pays the bill, the cost to the purchaser is nothing, and nothing is too expensive to gratify a want which may be simply a luxury and not a necessity. Every want of this kind gratified is a fertile seed to produce a two-fold greater crop of other wants in rapid succession, the limit of entire satisfaction being unattainable.—H. H., in Church Union.

Fault-Finding.

Finding fault with everything is the poorest business any man ever went into, for the simple reason that sensible people soon tire, and then sicken, listening to the ill-natured snarls of a chronic fault-finder. There is no kind of a man who will not commit suicide in the fault-finding business, if he just keeps on at it. When he gets so far that people say, "Oh, he'll find fault anyway, what is the use in paying any attention to what he says," the unfortunate man is about done. Prolonged unfavorable criticism, even when it is right in the main, injures a man; when it is wrong, it kills him! One thing is clear—should the day ever come when sensible, reasonable people say instinctively, "Oh, he'll snarl, and find fault and oppose, no matter what you do," be sure your usefulness is about gone.—Exchange.

Mourning Christians.

Some Christians seem to have come into the kingdom when the sun was in an eclipse. At any rate, they have got into a mournful mood, and they unfortunately keep thus. They seem to enjoy that melancholic hymn which starts off with these distressful words: "Hark! from the tombs a doleful sound." Of course they daily see evidences that the pulpit is declining in power and that old-fashioned piety has almost entirely left the earth. They also lament the fact (?) that the present-day converts are not born into the kingdom as they themselves were. Indeed, these mourning Christians see but very little to make them at all happy. But what a sight they are for the world to behold!

The spirit which makes parents willing to endure much self-denial in order that they may the better be able to provide for the wants of their children, is one of the most beautiful things in this world. But it is not always wisely directed. The parents who invariably surrender their own comfort, and who refuse no demand that their children make, are smitten with moral blindness. Such a policy is an education in selfishness to young souls, and ought to be avoided. It puts a premium on filial discontent. The happiest household is one in which every member is expected to make some sacrifices for the sake of the rest. We pity the boy or girl that has never been required to serve, as well as to be served, to give as well as to receive.—Nashville Advocate.

and those soon to become mothers, should know that Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its tortures, terrors and dangers to both mother and child, by aiding nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

MRS. DORA A. GUTHRIE, of Oakley, Overton Co., Tenn., writes: "When I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription,' I was not able to stand on my feet without suffering almost death. Now I do all my housework, washing, cooking, sewing and everything for my family of eight. I am stouter now than I have been in six years. Your 'Favorite Prescription' is the best to take before confinement, or at least it proved so with me. I never suffered as little with any of my children as I did with my last, and she is the healthiest we've got. Have introduced several to try 'Favorite Prescription,' and it has proved good for them."

BIXLER—NETTIE CLOVIA BIXLER was born Jan. 4, 1882, and died May 16, 1894, after an illness of forty days. She was the daughter of Dr. J. B. Bixler.

We buried her at Ebenezer Church in hope of the resurrection. May God sustain the sorrowing father and children! The mother went on ahead of this daughter, having died five months before. B. T. CREWS.

HOWES.—Died at the residence of his father, JOHN AUGUSTUS HOWES, born July 18, 1870; died May 26, 1894.

John was a dutiful son and kind brother. He was taken sick Thursday afternoon at about three o'clock, and died the next evening at six o'clock. "Therefore, be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye thinketh not, the Son of man cometh." The father, sisters and brothers have our sympathy.

The Lord gave and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!

Resolutions passed at second quarterly meeting, Terry circuit, Mississippi Conference:

Whereas, God, in his all wise providence, has seen fit to remove from our midst Bros. W. G. BARNES and D. L. RAWLAS, members of this body, who have lived exemplary lives and have served the church as stewards for many years; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in their death this Quarterly Conference sustained a great loss of fatherly counsel and wisdom—the church, the lives that adorned the gospel of Christ; the community, true citizens.

Resolved, That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to their loved ones in their affliction, and pray that God may sustain them by his grace and guide them unto eternal life.

Resolved, That this be made part of our minutes, and a copy sent to their families, also to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication. R. L. DIXON, for Members.

RATLIFF—Mrs. LUCY E. RATLIFF, wife of R. L. Ratliff, was born Sept. 14, 1856, and died at her home in Poplarville, Miss., May 14, 1894.

She has been a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, since 1880. She seemed to feel from the beginning that this was her last sickness on earth, and that the summons had come for her to come up higher. The only regret that she expressed was that of leaving her husband and children. She bore her suffering patiently, and met death like a Christian hero entering upon the full reward. We know not how long she stood on the shores of that boundless sea that marks the division between this world and the life to come; but when the supreme moment of life came there was no fear in her bosom, no dread shook the peacefulness of her constant soul.

She left a husband and seven children, the eldest having scarcely reached the age of maturity, to mourn her loss.

On Tuesday, May 15, we laid her to rest in the cemetery, after having preached a funeral sermon to a large concourse of sorrowing friends. Peace to the slumbering dust, consolation and comfort to the sorrowing be multiplied!

C. F. EMERY.

MCLEROY—Mrs. DELILAH MCLEROY (nee Williams) was born in North Carolina, Jan. 8, 1824; was converted and joined the Methodist Church when quite a child; was married to Marlin McLeroy, Nov. 22, 1849. Her husband preceded her to the home in heaven several years.

She was on a visit to her step-daughter, the wife of Col. T. C. Standifer, in Ruston, where she was taken sick, and at whose house she died (after an illness of over two months) on May 10, 1894.

She was a devoted Christian. As long as she was able she attended all the services of God's house. On her death-bed she expressed her perfect confidence in Christ's cleansing blood. During her last sickness she often spoke of the comforting and sustaining grace of God. She rejoiced in the assurance of her inheritance in heaven. Her death was peaceful and triumphant. She has entered her eternal rest, and there were happy faces of loved ones to greet her at the celestial gates.

As a mother in Israel, she has left the savor of a good Christian influence, which will tell for good in the circle of her life. She was buried beside her husband at the Bonner Cemetery, to await the resurrection morn.

JOHN A. MILLER.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. C. Grace, Spring Creek circuit, May 24: "I reached my work the first day of January. The people have been very kind to me, indeed, since I have been here. This circuit has nine appointments, and you see at once if I discharge my duty, I am compelled to have a move on myself all the time. We have large congregations. Spiritually, there is an improvement. We have three splendid Sabbath-schools, and expect to organize more. There have been fourteen accessions to the church up to date. I ask the prayers of all the brethren, for there are hundreds of souls on this large circuit on the road to destruction, and my heart's desire is that they might be saved."

Rev. J. H. Evans, Raleigh, Miss.: "We are getting better satisfied. While times are hard and money is scarce, the circuit is feeding us very well, and I believe they will continue to take care of us if we do our duty. We are using all the energy we can to do our duty as preacher and pastor. Our congregations are increasing. Our church here is going up very fast. The steeple will be completed this week. The workmen will then commence the floor and the inside work. When it is finished we will have a magnificent church. Our second Quarterly Conference was held here May 1. Our presiding elder was present and preached two very stirring sermons. There was a good attendance of the officials. Every church was represented. Assessment for the preacher in charge liberal. Everything somewhat encouraging to preacher in charge. Sunday-schools and prayer meetings reviving all around the work. May God bless the people of this charge and prosper the old ADVOCATE."

Rev. A. P. Leech, P. C., Sparta circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "Thinking that it would be beneficial to the cause of Sunday-schools, I send you a report of our Children's Day. We have a Sunday-school at one of our churches (Friendship) that is evergreen, and from what I can learn of it, they have not failed to meet and have some kind of Sunday-school services in eighteen or twenty years if it was possible for the teachers and scholars to get there. Our superintendent, Bro. J. A. Lewis, is the right man in the right place. He has a lot of good teachers who have the salvation of the children at heart to help him. So we selected the fourth Sunday in May, it being the pastor's regular preaching day, as our Children's Day. You may be sure we had a grand time. We had some eighteen or nineteen recitations by the children that were good and well delivered. Following this was a splendid address to the children by Bro. J. H. Speed, one of our good local preachers, after which we took up the collection, which was small, only $2.50; but when you think of the poverty of the country, and of the hundreds of Sunday-schools that pay nothing, you will conclude that we did very well. After this we had a sermon from the pastor, and, best of all, we had God's approval of the day's work by his sending down his Holy Spirit into the hearts of many Christians and making them happy in his love. The result was a re-consecration and a re-dedication by many to the service of the Master. We have taken up the collections ordered by the Conference at four of our churches out of six, and have about seventy five per cent. of it promised, and hope to make fair collections on all the work. I would ask everyone who reads this to pray for us and our work. God bless you and the dear old ADVOCATE."

CHILDREN'S DAY AT REHOBOTH.

The third Sunday of May, 1894, was a royal day at Rehoboth Church, Bowerton circuit. The people came in crowds until there was more than our large church would hold. The ladies had decorated the church beautifully for the occasion. The address of welcome by Mrs. Emma Goza was beautiful, appropriate and interestedly delivered. The recitations were all splendid; not one failure—no faltering or hesitancy. The children spoke with beaming countenances, showing that their hearts were in the work. Our beloved brother, Prof. Ross, was on the program for an address, but sickness in his family prevented his attendance, which was a sad disappointment to all, as we had a right to expect a feast of good things from him. As to music Rehoboth is noted for good singing, and I believe the general verdict is that she sustained her reputation. Miss Florence Barlow, our organist, deserves great praise for her efficiency and for her diligence in training the choir.

The address by our pastor, Bro. Ira B. Robertson, was just what you would expect from him—good from start to finish. His subject was "Watch." He exhorted us in his own impressive way to watch our words, actions, thoughts, character and home life.

The collection amounted to $7.15, given principally by the children. But best of all, Mr. Editor, God was with us. Thank God for Children's Day!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Would you win success in life? Always do your very best; God and time will do the rest.—Laura J. Rittenhouse.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

If we could only see, as we ought to see, the littleness of the most of our aims in life, we should be utterly ashamed of ourselves.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp-meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

IF in grocery stores, in cooking schools, or by peddlers in your kitchen, other baking powders are recommended or urged upon you in place of the Royal, reject them. It is unsafe to substitute any baking powder in place of the old standby, the thoroughly tried Royal. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Hop Sing, a Chinaman, was immersed in the First Baptist Church, in this city, on June 17.

William W. Phelps, of New Jersey, ex-minister to Austria and later to Germany, died on June 17.

Judge Henry B. Kelly, a celebrated Confederate gunmaker and judge of the Court of Appeals, died in this city on June 16.

The miners' strike is about over. The funds are exhausted, and the destitution will compel the men to return to work.

The Creek Indians are said to be giving the ghost dance in their tepees. Public exhibitions have been forbidden. A sham battle is to be given, but it is expected that the government will interfere.

The lumber yards of the Baton Rouge Lumber Company, in Baton Rouge, La., caught fire on June 15 and before the fire could be got under control between two and three million feet of lumber were destroyed.

It is now more than likely that another week will bring the debate on the Tariff bill before the Committee of the Whole in the Senate to a close, and the bill will then be reported to the full Senate and pushed rapidly to final passage.

Ex-Treasurer W. L. Hemingway, of Mississippi, sentenced Dec. 1, 1890 by the Supreme Court to a term of five years in the penitentiary for failure to turn over to his successor in office $315 621.19, was pardoned on June 16 by Gov. Stone. Volumes of petitions, bearing the names of some 15 000 citizens, including senators and congressmen, had been presented in his behalf.

The fight on the sugar schedule will be resumed in the Senate when the Revenue bill comes up for final action. Another attack will be made on the provision extending the time for the sugar only to take effect to the first of January, and it is possible that it may be carried to put the duty in effect on the passage of the bill, at the same time giving the bounty on the crop of next season, as already agreed.

FOREIGN.

The inhabitants of Berlin during the past week have been suffering from continued cold and rain and frequent thunder storms.

The foundation stone of the new Protestant Cathedral in Berlin was laid on June 17 with imposing ceremonies by Emperor William.

A terrible disaster, involving great loss of life, is reported from Karwin, Austria. An explosion took place in the mines there and about one hundred and eighty miners were killed.

An attempt was made to assassinate Premier Crispi in Rome on June 16. The Italian premier narrowly escaped the bullet intended for him, and, grappling with his assailant, held him until taken into custody by the police.

Emperor William, on June 15, reviewed the troops who are going to southwest Africa. He exhorted them to treat the natives with moderation, and not to forget that, though black, they are capable of honorable feelings.

The most important event of the past week in Europe was the reconstruction of the Italian Cabinet. Signor Crispi has been persuaded to continue in office and at the head of the ministry, because it is universally admitted that he is the strongest man in his country at the present time.

Representative men of this country are going to invite the grand old man of England to visit America. It can not be said with certainty that Mr. Gladstone will accept the invitation, but some of the gentlemen who compose what they term "the American invitation committee" believe that the prospect is not a hopeless one.

In spite of the reassuring statements emanating from Friedrichsruhe, there is an uneasy feeling in regard to Prince Bismarck's illness, which is now believed to be of a serious nature. It is stated that Count and Countess Herbert Von Bismarck have cut short their sojourn in London on account of the condition of the ex-chancellor's health.

A number of workingmen attempted to hold an open-air meeting in Vienna, on June 17. The proceedings became disorderly, whereupon the police ordered the crowd to disperse. The order not being promptly obeyed, the police attempted to disperse the crowd by force, but the latter resisted and attacked the police, some of whom were injured.

President Benilla, of Honduras, has issued a decree declaring null and void all confiscations of property made by the authority of the government while Vasquez was president. The possessors of confiscated property are ordered to restore everything to the former owners. A large number of Vasquez's old officers have returned, and though they have not been pardoned, they will not be molested.

The crisis in the affairs of Europe caused by the death of Sultan Muley Hassan and the strong feeling aroused in certain quarters in regard to the succession to the sultanate of his son, Abdul Aziz, has served to focus the feeling of antagonism towards England, which has been especially noticeable, and which has grown in strength ever since the announcement of the conclusion of the Anglo-Congo treaty.

Unexplored Regions.

All that is highest and best in our nature, all that combines to form our happiness and value to mankind, all the worthy aims and high resolves and noble purposes of life demand that we look upon what is unseen. It is the yet unexplored regions of justice and mercy, of honor and patriotism, of integrity and righteousness, of love and gratitude that we must discover and conquer if we would lead worthy and noble lives. Whatever stage we have reached in the ladder of progress, we must still climb higher if we would not sink lower; we must dwell not on the seen, even though it be good, but in the unseen, which is better.—Exchange.

A Reward of $500

Will be given for any case of Rheumatism which can not be cured with Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. The proprietors do not hide this offer, but print it in bold type on all their circulars, wrappers, printed matter, and through the columns of newspapers everywhere. It will work wonders, one treatment curing any ordinary case. Two bottles will be sent to any address by express on receipt of $5. Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York. Agents Wanted.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

He who realizes that he is where God wants him to be, and that he has what God wants him to have, will be contented with his lot and his store, whatever they are; but he who fails to realize this truth would never be contented, though he were the most favored man in all the world.—Sunday-School Times.

When the two Atlantic cables, now being laid, are in position, this continent will be connected with Europe by twelve cables. This wonderful development of the means of quick communication with the Old World has been accomplished since 1866, the cable of 1858 having ceased to work after a few weeks. The increased number of cables has brought competition in charges, lowering the rates from $5 to 25 cents per word.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

POSTAL CARD REPORTS.

Rev. Geo. P. White, P. C., Tangipahoa, La.: "I have closed a meeting at this place. We had an excellent meeting. The church most graciously revived; four accessions. Bros. Sullivan and Boone did the preaching. It was plain, practical, pointed, and with power. The best of all is, that the Lord is with us throughout our work."

Rev. W. Winans Drake, Crowley, La., June 11: "We closed here last Tuesday night a seventeen days' meeting which resulted in much good. We are indebted to Bros. Porter and Sanders and Prof. J. T. Barnett, of Acadia College, for assistance. Several men of mature years were converted. Ten joined the church by profession of faith and three by letter. One or two experienced entire sanctification."

Rev. J. M. Beard, P. E., Sulphur City, La., June 11: "We had a great day here on yesterday. Three of the leading citizens, men in advanced life, of Calcasieu parish were converted, joined the church and partook of the sacrament. The church rejoiced greatly, many shouted along, and it was a scene long to be remembered. The pastor (Rev. J. W. Lee) and his little flock are 'happy and blest' and 'salvation's rolling on.'"

Rev. C. C. Grisham, Paris, Miss.: "Permit me to say through your excellent paper that we on the Paris circuit are moving along finely on all lines save finance. We have eight Sabbath-schools on the work in good working order. We have six prayer meetings; hold class meetings occasionally. We have ten appointments, part of which is supplied by local brethren. The main thing I wanted to say is, we are on rising ground. Our second Quarterly Conference was held yesterday. Our beloved presiding elder preached two grand sermons for us. God bless you."

Rev. G. W. Gordon, Nesbitt, Miss., June 13: "We have been engaged for four weeks in succession in 'Children's Day' services. We feel very much like we had just passed through a series of revival meetings. These services have been exceedingly profitable in several ways. The educative effect along missionary lines has been productive of good. The pastor who fails to look after this part of his work loses much. The collections for needy Sunday-schools foot up about twenty dollars. We shall begin our revival meetings the fourth Sunday in July, and are confidently expecting this entire charge to be swept by a glorious revival flame. Pray for us."

Rev. J. G. Cammeck, Fannin, Miss.: "We have a nice new parsonage here, bought and paid for last year; one of the best in the district. We had a pleasant reception by this people, and we have had a pleasant year so far, with the exception of mud. We have organized a W. P. and H. M. Society since we came here with 23 members, also a juvenile society with 35 members. Ladies have funds in hand to paint our parsonage. We held a two weeks' meeting in May that did much good. The Holy Spirit came in great power. Many souls were quickened to new and higher life. Bro. Griffin, of Terry, was with us. We have just finished up Children's Day with good results. Will begin a round of protracted meetings soon. Are looking for good times all the year."

A Happy Reunion.

April 28 was a day of great social and religious enjoyment at the Summit parsonage. Father Rev H. P. Lewis had his entire family, children and grandchildren, seventeen in number, together.

About ten o'clock the entire family met with a few invited guests. Around the piano we gathered and sang some of the sweet songs of Zion, after which the time was spent in delightful social intercourse, until the dinner bell rang, and then we seated ourselves around the festal board of our parents and grandparents. All was enjoyment. After the table was served we gathered ourselves again to enjoy the sweet songs of Zion.

Father and mother, with their nine children—six sons and three daughters—four grandchildren, one son-in-law and one daughter-in-law, all in good health, with clear minds, and, we trust, good hearts, were cheerful and happy.

About three o'clock we assembled to perform the solemn rite of baptism upon the youngest grandchild. The day closed after hours of true enjoyment with the benediction of the grandsire. May we be permitted to enjoy many such reunions and a glorious one hereafter! One of the nine,

A PRAYER.

BY THOMAS ELWOOD, A. D. 1639.

Oh, that my eyes might closed be
To what concerns me not to see;
That deafness might possess my ear
To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue might always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
That no vain thought might ever rest
Or be conceived within my breast;
That by each deed and word and thought
Glory may to my God be brought.
But what are wishes? Lord, mine eye
On thee is fixed; to thee I cry,
Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
And make it clean in every part;
And when 'tis clean, Lord, keep it too,
For that is more than I can do.

Letter from Memphis, Tenn.

BY REV. CHAS. F. EVANS, D. D.

MR. EDITOR: Our city churches, after the feverish excitement incident to the session of the General Conference in our midst, have settled to the routine of regular work, but not without occasional discussions of that venerable body, and frequent delightful recollections of the individual men whom they were privileged to hear and know. Dr. Jno. Mathews probably created more pulpit sensation than any one man, in that he was to so many a stranger, and his sermonizing a novelty. Bishop A. W. Wilson's sermon at Central Church, though not in his very best vein, was, nevertheless, remarkable for compactness and wealth of thought, incidity of statement, prophetical discernment of the Spirit's mind, a rich aroma of evangelical experience, and a royal dignity of manner. He sustains admirably the reputation of being the foremost of our preachers, and among the wisest of our leaders. Next to him, of those who preached at Central, was Rev. Gross Alexander, D. D., professor of Greek and systematic theology in Vanderbilt University, and nephew of Rev. B. F. Alexander, of the Louisiana Conference. The church has already heard from him in several solid and permanent contributions to her literature; and if his life is spared, will accumulate precious memories of his intellectual and gracious achievements.

Dr. C. B. Riddick is thundering away at First Church in this city, making many friends, edifying his people, herding sinners to Christ, and organizing and compacting his forces for every good work. Rev. G. T. Sullivan, the elegant gentleman and faithful pastor of Hernando Street Church, is making a fine impression for his Master everywhere he moves. I am digging away at Central Church, with about eighty accessions behind me, and I hope with twice as many before me, for the current year. I need the prayers of my Louisiana and Mississippi friends to sustain me in this large church, which now numbers between 700 and 800 members.

Memphis is rapidly taking its place among the great commercial centers of the continent. Already it has distanced her young competitors, if we may believe the reports of their several clearing-houses. Every week brings from these sources proofs that she is doing more business than Nashville, Chattanooga, Birmingham and Atlanta combined, and for the past week her volume of business has exceeded the aggregation of these four cities the neat sum of $355,112, and amounts to $2,-988,265.

I must not overlook the rapid growth of our Methodism in this great city. The lowest estimate of her progress I have heard is, that in the last four years she has doubled her membership. An explanatory of her resources for future work and a just commendation of the sanctified gifts of her ministry during this period, it is but justice to say that these accessions have included every grade of society, and that a large share of the "cream of society"—that is, its intelligence, virtue, vigor, and financial power—has been incorporated with our Methodism. It is a matter for grateful recognition also that our people are loyal, spiritual, and diligent. They do not addict themselves to "eating for relief of the poor," nor affect the recreation (!) of a dance as the reward of their piety, nor repair to the drama in order to glorify God.

The commencements are on us again. The papers, both secular and religious, and the very atmosphere are full of the music, the recitation, the oration and debate, the salutatories and valedictories of beautiful girls and brave boys as they step forward on to life's battle line. The towns and cities are beginning to ring with domestic glee over the return of students for their Summer vacation, and in a day or two my own home will be glad for the return of a Tulane sophomore. I am indebted to one of these occasions for the privilege of renewing my acquaintance with Arkansas, and greeting many of my brethren and quondam parishioners. It was pleasant to hear them say, "You ought not to have left us," and, "You ought to come back," and many a chord of my heart vibrated that has been still for years.

"Galloway" College is named in honor of the noble and brilliant episcopos whose tireless zeal and fervid eloquence awakened the sense of obligation and the liberality which made its existence possible. It is presided over by Rev. John H. Dye, D. D., your colleague in the General Conference, and, from all accounts, the most popular man in Arkansas. He is in the full vigor of manly prime, and the silver threads among the brown which gather upon his thoughtful brow, the benignant light from eyes that seek your own and hold them in challenged investigation, the voice mellowed affectionately by experiences of pain, the steady step of confidence and resolution, marks him as the very man to elicit the confidence and shape the life of young womanhood. Back of him are the confidences of three Annual Conferences, their pride of Statehood, their wealth and religion, and, as a consequence, I found as fine a corps of teachers and as magnificent an array of young women as can be found probably in Southern Methodism. There sat behind the preacher on that lovely commencement Sabbath over two hundred young women—bright, beautiful, and generally religious—assembled from Missouri, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas. The spacious chapel was literally packed from platform to vestibule. The number of matriculants the past year was 267, of whom 157 were boarders, and over 170 took lessons in music. That Galloway College should have increased its enrollment last year until its capacity was literally burdened, while all the other colleges suffered a decrease, is easily accounted for. The president is a magnetic man, widely known as a financier, a scholar and genuine Christian, and universally loved and confided in. The faculty has been selected with reference to their proficiency, skill, refinement, and piety. The several schools include a conservatory of music, complete in its appointments; a thoroughly organized commercial department; modern languages, elocution and physical culture; a primary department, and the usual literary, mathematical and ancient language classes found in first-class colleges. The lady matron belongs to one of the best families in Arkansas, and is a thoroughly conscientious mother. Mrs. Dr. Dye is a fine specimen of consecrated, intelligent womanhood, and presides at the meals. The fine buildings are large, well lighted and ventilated, warmed by steam pipes, and the grounds are well laid off, decorated with fountains, and shaded by primitive growths. A steam laundry ensures the last consideration of domestic hygiene. The location of the college at Searcy, Ark., the healthiest point in the State—indeed, a health resort, with a White Sulphur Spring equal to Virginia's best, and a Chalybeate Spring unsurpassed anywhere—makes the college all that any parent could desire. With the large number of pupils and others resident in the college during the last year, the bill for medicines was one dollar and fifty cents, and for medical attention not over ten dollars. I have no hesitation in recommending Galloway College to my friends.

I suppose your readers have seen an account of the latest Yankee fad, in the shape of an individual communion cup and tray, which a Rev. Mr. Stebbins, of Saratoga, N. Y., has, with the assistance of a certain Dr. Forbes, introduced into his church of 1 800 members. The ostensible object was to protect the communicants from the bacteria of "pulmonalis, syphilis and diphtheria," shed from the epithelium of such victims into the common communion cup. This sagacious quarantining against an infected communion table was first suggested very significantly at a banquet, and found a ready hearing from the humane pastor. That such contagious germs should be present in such a place suggests a derelict pastor and a stupid physician. I suppose it is barely possible for consumption to be distributed by such means; but, granted that it is frequently done, it is generally understood that the bacteria of this disease, introduced into the stomach, like thousands of others, is promptly digested. Generally pathological microbes are disseminated through the hair and beard and clothing, and a more effective quarantine might be secured in a sanitary bath, sanitary barber shop, and sanitary tailor. These having been established, let each Sunday morning worshiper be required to present at the church door a certificate from these bureaus of health, or be excluded from the congregation. It is enough for us to know that Dr. Forbes has already patented his inventions, and a corporation has been formed for the manufacture and sale of his sanitary cup and tray.

Millsaps College Commencement.

To report a commencement occasion at Millsaps College is a very pleasant task to one who, for years before there was such an institution, looked forward with hope to its coming; and to report the recent commencement would be a pleasant task to any lover of Methodism and Mississippi and the cause of Christian education.

On Sunday morning, June 10, the citizens of Jackson seemed glad to show their interest in the institution which wise counsel and their own liberality had located in their midst. The beautiful campus was dotted with carriages, and an eager crowd moved along the walks approaching the college building.

At eleven o'clock Dr. H. C. Morrison, our senior Missionary Secretary, was greeted by a magnificent congregation. The broad platform was filled with the members of the faculty, the Board of Trustees and distinguished visitors, and the walls of the handsome chapel were ornamented with portraits and pictures of scenes in Methodist history. The sermon was worthy of the occasion and the brilliant orator who delivered it. It was as simple as it was logical, and as practical as it was beautiful.

On Sunday afternoon the interesting exercises of the college Young Men's Christian Association were conducted by Dr. Inman W. Cooper, the efficient and popular agent of the college, speaking of whose work one of the most prominent members of the North Mississippi Conference said: "We have no man in our Conference for the agency of the college as long as you will give us Cooper."

The sermon, Sunday night, was preached in the First Methodist Church to an immense audience, and the preacher, Rev. J. S. Oakley, of Holly Springs, was at his best.

On Monday morning, at nine o'clock, the Board of Trustees met in the college library, and at ten o'clock adjourned to witness a spirited contest of chosen speakers for medals for declamation and original orations. The contestants for the "Declaimer's Medal" were W. A. Browning, of Lauderdale county; R. W. Harmon, of Marion, and Henry Selby, of Newton—all popular boys, fine students, and excellent declaimers. Mr. Browning was the successful contestant. The "Orator's Medal" was won by Mr. George B. Power, of Jackson, after a close contest with Mr. L. E. Alford, of Pike county, and Mr. Walter Scott, of Madison county.

The afternoon programme consisted of a contest for the "Gunning Prize Medal," given annually to the young preacher who most excellently read a selection from the Bible, and a hymn, and made an announcement. The medal was captured by Mr. J. M. Alford, of Pike county.

On Monday night the grand debate, participated in by two representatives chosen from each of the literary societies, was witnessed and enjoyed by a large audience. [An account of which having already been given by our correspondent, "Gilderoy," we omit the details.—EDITOR.]

Tuesday was "commencement day," and, though there were no graduates, the exercises were so interesting as to make the occasion memorable. Ex-Lieutenant-Governor Sims, the First Assistant Secretary of the Department of the Interior, an honored and popular Mississippian, and a life-long friend and army comrade of the munificent founder of Millsaps College, had been invited to deliver the first annual address, and had come from Washington for that purpose. The audience was crowded, but good-natured and enthusiastic; the orator was fluent, graceful, and eloquent; the oration was scholarly, beautiful and appropriate. The subject of the address was, "The History of Education," and the many readers of the ADVOCATE will be glad to know that Gov. Sims has consented to allow it to be published in pamphlet form.

A commencement reaches its climax in the announcement of the medalists and the distribution of the medals. To Rev. R. G. Porter, our "Gilderoy"—the inimitable—this pleasant task was assigned. It need not be said that it was well done. In addition to those mentioned above, the following young gentlemen were awarded medals: To Mr. H. S. Stevens, of Augusta, was presented the scholarship medal in the College Department, and to Mr. C. G. Andrews, of Vicksburg, the scholarship medal in the Sub-freshman Department.

The Board of Trustees held two sessions daily on Monday and Tuesday. The report of President Murrah contained the following interesting items: The total matriculations for the session were 100; the deportment and scholarship of the students has been, generally speaking, entitled to the highest praise; the health of the student body has been very excellent; there were no deaths, and not even a serious illness among them.

The treasurer of the Board presented a report showing the gratifying fact that the invested endowment, including scholarships, was $104,000.

The agent's report contained the record of faithful and successful work, and removed all doubt of the erection of several new buildings by September next.

Of these three officers less could not be said than that Dr. Murrah is showing every day the wisdom of his election to the presidency of the college; Major Millsaps is a model treasurer, and Dr. Cooper, as agent, has demonstrated his exceptional fitness for the difficult and delicate position to which he has been called.

There were several changes in the faculty. The chair of mathematics, made vacant by the resignation of Prof. Patillo, whose ill health necessitated the change, was filled by the election of Dr. J. A. Moore, for some years the professor of mathematics in the Southern University. Prof. Muckenfuss was granted a leave of absence for one year, that he might take his Ph.D. degree at Johns Hopkins University, and Prof. Butler, of the University of Virginia, was elected temporary professor of chemistry. Prof. M. M. Black, who, since the opening of the college, had been in charge of the preparatory department, resigned that he might give himself entirely to pastoral work, and the Executive Committee and President Murrah were authorized to select the principal of the preparatory department and his assistant. The latter is a new officer in the faculty, and will represent an addition to the corps of instruction.

It is impossible at this time to say who will be selected to fill these places; but rumor has it that a prominent and popular educator of South Mississippi will be called to the principalship, and that a young North Mississippian of fine attainments and several years' experience will be elected assistant.

One of the most gratifying features of the commencement was the enthusiastic interest manifested by the citizens of Jackson and the friends from other portions of the State. At almost every entertainment the house was crowded.

It was announced that one modest and liberal friend, who has become proverbial for his prompt response to every call that has been made from the inception of the enterprise, had contributed $500 for the equipment of the chair of chemistry, and a member of the Board of Trustees offered to pay the board and tuition of a young man to be selected by the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference.

The commencement was altogether delightful. A. F. WATKINS.

Our Church on the Pacific Coast.

We published in April an article from Dr. H. M. DuBose, editor of the Pacific Advocate, concerning the work of our church on the Pacific coast. This article presented a very hopeful view of our prospects in the far West. Rev. T. J. Dunnoan, formerly of the Tennessee Conference, who is now presiding elder of the Los Angeles district, takes a very different view of the situation. In the last issue of the Tennessee Methodist he has an article nearly four columns long, in which he gives the other side. We quote as follows:

"Bro. DuBose says: 'Four years ago the Los Angeles Conference reported a net increase of nearly 30 per cent,' which statement is true; but here is that other statement that is equally true, but which he has left to some other pen to relate: since that time the Conference has gained but one member. Santa Barbara has a $7 500 house that will seat 500, and has a $2,000 parsonage. Sunday, March 25, was a lovely Easter day, and our pastor preached to 14 people. The membership numbers 23, but they are very much scattered. The church, up to this time, has spent nearly $12 000 in taking care of them. The Methodist Episcopal Church has several hundred members there, many of them from the South. Ventura has a church worth $8 000, a parsonage worth $1,200. This house will seat 500; 30 is a good congregation there. From 5 to 8 attend prayer meeting. Carpenteria has a good house that will seat 250; 50 is a large congregation there. Trinity will hold 800; 500 is a ground-swell there. A meeting was protracted five weeks in the lecture-room, Sundays excepted, and it seats only 160, and was never filled to overflowing. This is Dr. DuBose's old charge. It paid him $3,000. It paid last year $800, and $400 house rent. Bellvue has a good house and a good preacher. It will seat 200; 60 is a large congregation there. West End will seat 250; 75 is a good average attendance. Santa Anna and Los Neatos are very well attended, the latter seating 300, and having an attendance of 150. San Diego was organized 12 years ago with 20 members. They now have 33, though 8 are out of reach of the church. The house is small, congregation also. The Methodist Episcopal Church in that city has four houses of worship and 800 members. They have 36 Southern Methodist families identified with their membership. Why is this? Escondido has a $3 000 house and $1 250 parsonage. They could not be sold for $2 500. One dozen, perhaps, attend service there, though the church would seat 300. San Bernardino has a house that will seat 500 people; 100 would be a large congregation for them. They have their old presiding elder for their pastor, and they love him very much. I need go no farther in this direction than to say that the unmentioned charges are not an improvement on those mentioned."

Law Unconstitutional.

The last Legislature of Georgia passed a law requiring railroad, telegraph and express companies to give to every discharged employee a reason for his discharge, and providing that he could recover damages in the sum of $5 000 from such companies if they failed to give him the reasons for his discharge. Isaac M. Wallace was discharged by the Georgia, Carolina and Northern Railroad Company. He sued the company, claiming that he had been discharged without cause, and that the reason for his discharge was refused him. The case came to trial before Judge Van Epps, who threw it out of court on a demurrer. It went to the Supreme Court, which has sustained the demurrer and ruled that the law was unconstitutional, and hence inoperative.

A Great Comet Coming.

Halley's comet is coming back. It is yet far away, but the eye of science sees it, already within the orbit of Neptune, rushing sunward and earthward with constantly increasing velocity.

This comet passed across the sky twelve years before the birth of Christ. It passed again when Nero was emperor; again when the first of the Antonines had just begun his pacific reign; again when the Goths were preparing to attack Rome, and yet again in the days of Diocletian. The advancing Huns beheld its transit in the year 373, and it was blazing in the sky when their great king, Attila, was defeated at Chalons in 451. Belisarius may have watched it as it swung across the heavens just after he had begun his victorious career in 530. It passed again while Mohammed was still worshiping the idols of his fathers in 608. The world saw the great index in the firmament again in 684, in 760, in 837, in 912, and in 989. It was on the noon mark for William the Conqueror in 1066. It returned in 1145; in 1223 it was thought to have predicted the death of Philip Augustus; in 1301 it was watched with astonishment from Iceland to China; in 1378 Chinese and Europeans once more recorded its transit in their annals. We have seen how Islam and Christendom were terrified by it in 1456. It was back again in 1531 and 1607, and when, in 1682, it shone once more in the sky, the man had come who was to read its riddle and solve its mystery.—Picayune.

A Just Rebuke.

Rev. Dr. G. D. Herron, of Iowa College, was justly rebuked at the University of Nebraska, last week, on account of an ill-timed commencement oration. He spoke in a pessimistic vein, denouncing courts, trade, legislation, and the chief phases of our civilization, as corrupt and vicious. He foretold the destruction of the present order of things and the rise of a new socialistic age. He had no sooner ended his gloomy diatribe than Gov. Crounse was upon his feet to protest against such doctrines, declaring that the sentiments of Dr. Herron were inept and misleading, and that he was not willing by his silence to allow them to pass by with tacit approval. He said, furthermore, that Dr. Herron, by his utterances, had classed himself with anarchists like Johann Most and Lucy Parsons, and warned the young people against accepting such utterances as truth. We are glad the governor took the ground he did. Times are bad, many phases of our modern life are demoralizing, and some of the things that are happening are perilous to the welfare of the people; but no good whatever is done by those who persist in seeing nothing but evil anywhere, "in earth, or sea, or sky."—Northwestern Advocate.

Cooper-Huddleston College.

The commencement exercises of this well-known and popular college proved very satisfactory to its friends and patrons. For two days and nights (June 5 and 6) the large and beautiful audience hall was filled to its utmost capacity with interested spectators, many of them from a distance. Dr. J. L. Cooper, the founder of the college, preached the commencement sermon to the delight and profit of his many friends and admirers. Hon. G. Q. Hall, of Meridian, Miss., delivered the annual address. It was plain, practical and sensible, and was properly appreciated by the large, intelligent audience. Hon. A. M. Byrd delivered the address to the Philomathean Society in his usual felicitous style. The essays by the graduating class were of the highest order, and all the exercises of the occasion were creditable alike to students and teachers.

The faculty are able, high-toned Christians who do thorough work in the school-room, and by precept and example exert a wholesome influence upon the student body.

The college has a small apparatus for illustrating the several branches contained in its curriculum. There is a library containing several hundred volumes to which the student has access. In short, I know of no institution that affords better facilities for the study of the branches in its curriculum. It is not a church school, but it is a Christian school—more than can be said of all church schools.

It is located at Daleville, Miss., eighteen miles north of Meridian and eight miles from Lockhart, the nearest point to the railroad. Daleville is a pretty and healthy village consisting of twenty-five or thirty families of high grade, wielding a healthy moral influence over the students.

THE USE OF FLOWERS.

BY MARY HOWITT.

God might have made the earth bring forth
Enough for great and small,
The oak tree and the cedar tree,
Without a flower at all.
We might have had enough, enough
For every want of ours,
For luxury, medicine and toil,
And yet have had no flowers.

Then wherefore, wherefore were they made,
All dyed with rainbow light,
All fashioned with supremest grace
Upspringing day and night;
Springing in valleys green and low,
And on the mountain high,
And in the silent wilderness
Where no man passes by?

Our outward life requires them not,
Then wherefore had they birth?
To minister delight to man,
To beautify the earth;
To comfort man, to whisper hope,
Whene'er his faith is dim,
For who so careth for the flowers
Will care much more for him!

The Obligations of the Pulpit.

BY REV. W. M. STEVENS.

[Published by order of the Preachers' Institute of the Vicksburg district, held at Port Gibson, April 17 and 18.]

"The obligation of the pulpit to warn our people against the sin of covetousness, and to urge upon them a liberal support of the institutions of the church."

The pulpit is the most important factor known for bringing to bear the precepts of our holy religion upon the hearts and consciences of men. While her teachings are cold, lifeless, and inefficient without the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, yet, if accompanied by the refining fire of the Holy Ghost, her truths are at once stamped with the sacred seal of divinity, asserted by an authority that can not be questioned, and enforced by a power that can not long be resisted. When the pulpit in general turns her beautiful and bright, but dissolving, rays of eloquence, her electric flashes of argument and her mighty thunders of disapprobation, against any particular sin, that sin must soon droop and die, or sink into utter oblivion. This has been the history of the preached Word in all past ages, and the pulpit is no more shorn of her locks, or stripped of her power now, than in the days of the patriarchs, prophets, and apostles of old. God has chosen the preaching of his Word as the medium through which the shackles of sin, which bind his children, are to be broken, and has thereby declared the pulpit to be the most potent power for the accomplishment of this glorious result.

What honor bestowed upon us, poor worms of the dust, that we should be used in this capacity—chosen of God to proclaim the unsearchable riches of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ! We, as prophets and ministers of his, are none other than they who are chosen to enter the Holy of Holies; to stand between God and man, and to whom saith the Lord, "Cry aloud and spare not." So great is the responsibility resting upon us that God declares, "If we warn not the sinner, and he die in his sin, his blood shall he require at our hand."

I. Thus we see God himself demands that we warn our people against the sin of covetousness. "Sin is a transgression of the law." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," saith the Lord. Our mission is to give life and hope to mankind, and as covetousness is a sin and damns the soul, therefore, it becomes our indispensable duty to warn our people against covetousness and its dreadful consequences. We are not to warn them against this, that, or the other sin only, but against all sin as an offense against God; yet some sins are of so subtle a character and so baneful in their effects as to require special condemnation. Such is the case with the pernicious sin of covetousness. By covetousness is meant an eager, insatiable desire and an inordinate love of riches. As "the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh;" as light is contrary to darkness, and as there is no concord between Christ and Belial, so covetousness is opposed to and warreth against the Christian life. This insatiable desire and inordinate love of riches banishes from the mind all holy thoughts, counteracts all sacred influences, destroys all noble aspirations, and drowns men in perdition. Covetousness is, indeed, a sin of the blackest hue, for embodied within it is the very germ of sin. It is none other than the sink and seed-pot of iniquity. Christ has declared, "The love of money is the root of all evil." We are warned repeatedly in Scripture against the sin of covetousness, and are told that "no covetous man hat any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." Covetousness is condemned not only by what we may call the common Scriptures, but there was handed down to Moses on the Mount, by God himself, the positive command, "Thou shalt not covet." Great sins seldom go single and alone, but commonly generate and beget one another. Thus self-love begets covetousness, covetousness pride, and pride blasphemy. Thus men fall from one sin to another, and proceed from one degree of iniquity to another. In Holy Writ no sin is more vehemently condemned, nor hath a more dreadful penalty attached thereto, than covetousness. It is classed among the sins of adultery, fornication, uncleanness, murder, theft, blasphemy, pride, and the such like. Covetousness is idolatry, and is, therefore, a sin of the most nefarious sort. A covetous man is called an idolater because riches are supreme in his affections. Complete happiness should be sought in God, and in him only. Man, who is weak and feeble, needs help and support from God, and when he depends upon or trusts in any other being or thing, he makes that being or thing his idol. A covetous man cares more for gain than godliness, and thereby "falls into temptations and a snare," and "into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." The path of the covetous leads as direct to hell, "where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched," as does the path of the adulterer, fornicator, or thief. The covetous soul is lacking in all true virtue, and can never inherit the kingdom of heaven.

We have now shown the pulpit to be the medium chosen of God through which to reveal himself, to show forth his infinite love, to set before his creatures heaven and its glories, and to warn them against sin and its effects. We have shown covetousness to be a sin of the most nefarious sort, the very essence of iniquity, the sum and substance of ungodliness; and we have shown that it is our duty to instruct our people in ways of righteousness, and to warn them against all manner of evil. "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore, hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me." "When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die, and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life, the wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood shall I require at thine hand." Thus the duty is laid obligatory upon us, brethren, and we must raise our voices against the sin of covetousness—"Cry aloud and spare not." We must give constant warning against this pernicious sin, else our people should be (if they are not already) seduced by its bewitching charms. Our responsibility to expose and condemn a sin is increased according to its nefariousness and general practice among men. Our obligation to condemn and warn against the sin of covetousness, therefore, is very great, indeed, for no sin is more subtle in its nature, nor baneful in its effects, and none is more common among men. The temporal and spiritual prosperity of the church both demand that we warn our people and fight against the sin of covetousness. It is a child of the devil, and aims its blows at the very vitals of the church of God; but it would never do to fight the devil with fire—i. e., with his own weapons of warfare; so we must purify ourselves as God is pure, take the sword of the Spirit, and go forth in the strength of the Master, crying aloud against this monster evil that creepeth among us as a great hissing serpent, that broods over us as an horrible nightmare, and, as a great blood-sucking vampire, secretly sucks the very life-blood from our blessed Zion. A failure to meet the extent of our obligations in this respect, brethren, is followed by the most fatal consequences to the church, temporal and spiritual; and it means unfaithfulness to both man and God, a betrayal of our sacred trust, a violation of the commands of God, and bespeaks a leanness of soul.

II. Next we shall consider our obligation to urge upon our people a liberal support of the institutions of the church.

1. The temporal prosperity of the church demands that we urge a liberal support of its institutions. In order that the church may meet its fullest success, that the Word of God may "run, have free course, and be glorified," that the gospel of the blessed Son of God may "subdue the nations," and that "God may claim the heathen for his inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for his possession," it becomes necessary for us to educate and support the ministry both at home and abroad, to erect charitable institutions for the comfort, instruction and salvation of the unfortunate and the indigent poor; it becomes necessary to build houses for the worship, praise and glory of God, asylums for the orphans and idiotic, and reformatory institutions for the down-trodden and forsaken of the earth. All these mighty agencies in God's hands for the conversion of the world, in order to their fullest success, require the liberal, free-will offerings of God's people. Without making merchandise of the church of God, there is no other way to support its institutions but by the direct contributions of its members, and it, therefore, becomes our indispensable duty to urge upon our people the liberal support of the institutions of the church of God on these grounds. Brethren, let us see to it that the church, external as well as internal, declines not under our care, for in consequence thereof souls may be lost and their blood required at our hands.

2. The spiritual prosperity of the church demands that we urge upon our people a liberal support of its institutions. When we have faithfully discharged our duty along the line of warning our people against the sin of covetousness, we have also largely met the extent of our obligation to urge upon them a liberal support of the institutions of the church. The two (the sin of covetousness and the grace of liberality) are directly opposed. To warn against the one serves to stimulate the other. Or, as the intensity of the one decreases, the tenacity of the other increases, and vice versa. But man is very peculiarly constituted. He is most fearfully and wonderfully made. Our nature is averse to that of God. We are steeped in iniquity, and must have continually impressed upon our minds and consciences that life and breath and all things are gifts of God. From him all blessings descend fresh, full, and free; and from his bountiful flow of blessings we are required to return to him a stipulated amount for the support of his cause upon earth. "Bring ye all the tithes into my storehouse." And a refusal or a failure to do this is nothing less than covetousness. "Will a man rob God?" "Yet ye have robbed me," saith the Lord of hosts. The sin of covetousness is so fascinating in its charms, so subtle in its workings, so careful in its effect, until it has charmed the imagination, shaped the judgment, seared the conscience, made callous the heart, warped the character, and corrupted the morals of our people, and is thereby daily thwarting the purposes of God. It becomes our duty to urge a liberal support of the institutions of the church of God, in order to counteract this evil effect, to bring joy of heart, peace of conscience and fatness of soul to each individual under our pastoral care. "The liberal soul shall be made fat." "It is more blessed to give than to receive." No one can "grow in favor with God," "be made strong in the power of his might," or become "deeply rooted and grounded in the love of God," who is not liberal with his means in supporting the institutions of the church. The devil never wastes any time on a man who tries to be a Christian without contributing liberally to the support of the church and its institutions. The contribution of money for the support and spread of the gospel is a duty laid obligatory upon us, and can not be shirked without the most fatal consequences. The baptism of a man's pocket-book with the Holy Ghost and with fire is a scene sufficient to make devils weep and angels laugh. The church can never prosper externally. Our people enjoy "pure religion and undefiled," and "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," until their purse-strings are loosened, and that which is the Lord's shall flow freely into his treasury. We should keep these facts prominently before our people, and constantly urge them to activity in the blessed grace of liberality.

The Religion of Etiquette.

An ill-bred person may be a Christian, but he is a Christian in the raw. His lack of breeding obscures very largely what light of Christianity may dwell in him. His observers are much more apt to think of his rudeness and indecent behavior than of his Christian qualities. The highest style of a Christian is the well-bred Christian gentleman. His Christianity does not consist in etiquette, but it shows itself through his etiquette. And Christian etiquette does not necessarily consist in an unfailing devotion to all modern forms of personal carriage and polish. It consists, rather, in a careful, tender conformity to the Golden Rule. It shows itself in a considerate attention to the rights of others. There is no rude thrusting of self into places designed for others. It does not pull down others to exalt self. Indeed, one's religion, or lack of it, may be more quickly discovered in his etiquette than in any other way. A true Christian is known by the quality of his etiquette.—C. H. Wetherbe, in The Interior.

Expect Little.

The less we expect from this world, the better for us. The less we expect from our fellow-men, the smaller will be our disappointment. He that leans on his own strength leans on a broken reed. We are always going to be something stronger, purer and holier. Somewhere in the future there always hangs in the air a golden ideal of a higher life which we are going to reach; but as we move on, the dream of better things moves on before us also. It is like the child running over the hill to catch the rainbow. When he gets on the hilltop, the rainbow is as far off as ever. Thus do our day-dreams of a higher Christian life keep floating away from us, and we are left to realize what frail, unreliable creatures we are when we rest our expectations of growth and victory over evil in ourselves. "My soul, wait thou only upon God. My expectation is only from him."—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

"Gilderoy" Abroad.

While in Memphis, at the General Conference, it fell to my lot to make a run to Paris, Tenn., to preach for Rev. T. J. Newell, A. M., who had just been appointed to supply that charge till Conference. Bro. J. C. Hooks, the pastor, had gotten into trouble and was suspended from the ministry, and the Bishop sent Bro. Newell to take his place.

I found that Bro. Newell had opened his ministry, and was in high favor with his people. Indeed, they were enthusiastic in praise of him and of his preaching. I was a little afraid that my friend and brother had rather overdone the thing at first; had set the mark too high to begin with. If the people of Paris tell the truth about his preaching, he will have to "hump" himself to keep in sight of his sample sermon. I had thought Newell had more sense than to do his very best at the first. He began at the top of the gamut and left no room for the rising inflection.

When I faced his congregation, at 11 A. M. and at 8 P. M., I didn't see how he could help it. It was a stimulating and an inspiring audience—large, flinty-looking, attentive, intelligent and devout. It sprung me, and the Holy Ghost helped. Bro. Newell has a splendid opening before him in Paris, and he will fill the bill to a fraction.

Twenty-six years and six months before I had attended Conference in Paris, Tenn. Most of North Mississippi was then in the Memphis Conference. The town has grown and improved greatly every way, except in the courthouse and churches. Our people need a new and better house of worship. The one they have is out of date and not in keeping with the wealth, intelligence, piety and taste of that people. The same is true of others of the churches in that fair city. If Bro. Newell will spell his name "Nehemiah" while there and build a better house for the Lord, it will be a great work.

Bishop H. N. McTyeire presided at the Conference in Paris twenty-six years ago. What a presiding officer he was! Dr. A. L. P. Green was there, and preached a great sermon on the characteristics of Job's faith. That sermon will live as long as memory holds her place. Dr. Thomas O. Summers was there, and spoke to the children of the town on Sunday afternoon. He was from the hub of Southern Methodism and editor of Sunday-school publications, was a great and learned man, and was supposed to understand children, and to know how to talk to them. I went to hear him. I loved children, and I wanted to learn how to speak and preach to them. I soon saw that Dr. Summers knew but little of these precious animals and knew nothing in the world about how to address them. If it had been a congregation of old and well-educated theologians—Latin and Greek scholars—his address would have been first class; but as it was, the Doctor shot a mile too high. He missed the game. The ridiculous aspect of the performance stirred me to laughter. I could not help it. The Doctor undertook to tell the children the relation that baptism brought them into to the church. He struggled for a word to express it, and such words they were—big, long, hard, compound, derivative and high-sounding. As he used this word and then that word, he would say: "Ah! children, I am afraid you do not understand that. Let me try this word. No, no, you do not get hold of that either." After trying half a dozen or more words he said: "Ah! hold, now I've got it. I've got it. I've got the very word—one that all of you understand. Listen now; here it is: Baptism is your ma-tric-u-lation!" With that I struck for the door and out into the yard where I could laugh without disturbing the congregation. That word, and the emphasis Dr. Summers put on every syllable of it, will linger in my memory to my last day.

Rev. A. C. Allen, D. D., of precious memory in all North Mississippi, was at this Conference, and presiding elder of the Aberdeen district. When it came time for him to report, in his easy flowing way, he went on to say that so many hundreds had been converted and added to the church, so many hundreds were in Sunday-school, and so many hundreds of dollars had been raised for this, that and the other—all being hundreds till that word had taken possession of his mind. He then said, "Mr. President, through the good providence of God, I have met all my appointments this year but two. I had not seen my parents, nor had my wife seen her parents, for sixteen hundred years, and we went to visit them in North Carolina."

"O, not my brother," said Bishop McTyeire; "you don't mean to say sixteen hundred years."

"Sixteen, sixteen, sixteen years," ejaculated Bro. Allen, thoroughly confused.

With that Dr. Summers asked, "How old were you when you left North Carolina?"

"Thirty-four years," answered Bro. Allen, rather doubtfully.

"Well," queried Dr. Summers, "were you baptized in infancy?"

"Yes, sir," replied Bro. Allen, hesitantly.

"Well," said Dr. Summers, "that is positive proof of infant baptism sixteen hundred and thirty-four years ago."

My trips to Paris called up these reminiscences of the past.

GILDEROY.

From Dr. Hunnicutt.

Only those who have had experience in such matters can know the sense of relief with which I transfer Centenary College to my successor, after six years of burdensome, yet pleasant labor as its president. During these years more than six hundred students were enrolled, thirty-five of whom were graduated, and all of whom received good impressions in heart and mind, unless they willfully rejected the counsels of truth. A number have gone out from us better equipped to preach the gospel of Christ. The college buildings have undergone valuable and lasting improvements, and the prospects of the institution are good. Its endowment has been increased from less than ten to more than eighty thousand dollars, of which about ten thousand has been invested in good securities at 8 per cent., the remainder being in six per cent. notes of individuals. Though some fail to pay the interest on their notes, yet the college realizes quite as much income from them as could be gotten from twice the amount invested in United States bonds. These notes are more easily gotten than money, may be increased without great difficulty, or replaced by others in case of the death of the donors. This form of endowment rests upon men's love for Christian education, and is as lasting as the lives and as secure as the fortunes of the people. If the amount were increased to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, Centenary could live comfortably on her income. No fruit of human effort can be made permanent without the renewal of the agents by which it is produced.

I go from Centenary with grateful joy, believing that my coming to it was directed by Providence and that my going is under his guiding hand.

The transfer of the Florida parishes from the Mississippi Conference to the Louisiana renders it proper that Louisiana should take a new hold on Centenary College, and that a Louisiana man should be at the head of it. The college and its friends should rejoice in securing the services of one so worthy and capable as Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., as its president. His scholarly abilities are too well known throughout the country to need statement or emphasis from me. With an able faculty and such a president, nothing but good can be predicted of the college.

Soul Food.

Some Christians die of starvation. They surfeit the inner man with secular stimulants of all sorts—with spiced books of fiction, with "light reading" that is mere syllabub. Many swallow little else than their daily newspaper. The moral faculties become debilitated on this flimsy diet. Now, all the athletic Christians—all those who can carry heavy loads, do thorough work, and stand a long pull—are hungry feeders on God's book. Nothing will impart sinew and muscle to your piety like the thorough study and digestion of your Bible. A good sermon must be digested, or it will be of little use to you; daily bread of the Bible must go through the same process in order that it may be assimilated and taken into your spiritual fiber. "Thy words were found, and I did eat them, and they were the joy of mine heart," said the old-time saint. One strong Bible text lodged in the memory, and turned over and well digested, will be breakfast for your soul, and in the strength of it you may go through the whole day. A soldier is never in so good a trim for battle as after a sound sleep and a square morning meal; it is not easy to fight or to march on an empty stomach. In like manner every servant of Jesus Christ must recruit his or her spiritual strength by reading Christ's words and thinking about them by meditation, by prayer, and soul converse with God. I have always observed that the light readers and light thinkers make light Christians, and those who neglect their Bibles and closets soon dwindle into dwarfs. Having no depth of root, their religion withers away.—Selected.

Note from Opelousas District.

This is by request of the pastor of our church at Abbeville, to notify the ADVOCATE and its readers of a gracious revival at that place. Bro. Kelly opened the meeting without assistance and conducted it successfully for two days, when the undersigned arrived and continued with him for ten days or more. The result was a thorough awakening in church and community, with something over thirty conversions and an equal number of accessions. For nearly two weeks the gracious work continued, and there was no cessation of interest until the close, the last service being in many respects one of the best. It was a revival for both those within the church and those without, and the popular pastor, to whom much credit is due, declares that its influence will be both permanent and far-reaching.

Let me add an item concerning the Opelousas Female Institute, whose commencement sermon it was my privilege and honor to preach two weeks ago. The institution is the only Methodist school of sufficiently high grade to confer diplomas in Southern Louisiana, and for its services, both present and past, deserves well of the public. Mrs. M. M. Hayes is the accomplished principal, with such helpers as Miss Leola White, accomplished daughter of Rev. H. O. White, in the collegiate department, and Miss Hasbrook, of Cincinnati, in the music and art department, gives assurance of thorough and successful training. The hard times and a newly organized and successful public school in the town of Opelousas have interfered with the patronage of the school during the present year, but surely neither the citizens of Opelousas, now one of the most beautiful and progressive of our parish towns, nor the Methodist people of Southern Louisiana, will suffer this noble Christian enterprise, which has done so much for both town and church, to perish for lack of a little cheap support in the way of patronage. Public schools are to be commended, no doubt; but it is a mistake to suppose that they are a substitute for the old methods in higher female training and education. Sister Hayes and her school and the town of Opelousas afford excellent advantages to those who have daughters to educate. Let all such persons practice economy by patronizing the Opelousas Female Institute.

A New Book.

It is our purpose to issue soon a booklet entitled, "Our Reasons; or, the Scriptural Basis of Our Faith and Practice," compiled by Lyman F. Jackson. It is a completely proof-texted edition of the Articles of Religion and General Rules of the Methodist Churches, with brief and pertinent original comments on the General Rules. Its design is to put in the hands of pastors a compend which will serve the purpose indicated by the title; to instruct members, and especially new ones and young people, in our doctrines and rules, and is the only completely proof-texted edition of the "Articles" and "Rules" issued at any price.

Among recommendations of it [illegible] the author with their orders for supplies, we quote:

I give it my most hearty approval. It supplies a want in our church literature, and gives the information needed by many pastors, in setting before the people the real scriptural grounds of our faith and doctrine.

S. J. DAVIES, P. E.,
Alexandria Dist., La. Conf.

It meets a want. I am glad you will publish it, and shall keep my members, and new members particularly, supplied with the pamphlet. Methodist pastors will find it to be valuable. WM. H. LAPRADE,
Pastor Carondelet St. M. E. C., S[illegible]

It also has the "approval" of Dr. W. P. Harrison, our veteran and discriminating Book Editor.

For two weeks from the date of this issue to advance subscribers, we offer it in lots of 100 only at 40 per cent. discount from the regular retail price which is $5 per hundred. It will contain about 64 pages and be neatly bound in paper.

Do you need such a work? If so, order at once.

Things to Forget.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the slander you have ever heard. Forget its temptations. Forget the faultfinding and give a little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out as far as possible all the disagreeables of life as they will come, but they will only grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts, meanness, or, worse still, malice, will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday, start out with a clean sheet for to-day, and write upon it for sweet memory's sake only those things which are lovely and lovable.—Lutheran Observer.

At the bottom of every man there is an abyss which hope, joy, ambition, hate, love, the sweetness of thinking, the pleasure of writing, the pride of conquest can not fill. The whole world would not satisfy it; but, O my God! a drop, one single drop of thy grace causes it to overflow.—Joseph Roux.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

It is suggested that a delicate bisque soup, served in cups, would be a nice change from the usual bouillon.

A PRETTY BREAKFAST DISH.—Salt the whites of eggs, while beating, to a stiff froth, then arrange on a plate. Place the yolks at regular distances apart, in cavities made in the beaten egg, and bake till brown.

STEAK ROAST.—Take a round of steak, pound, pepper and salt it well. Take dry bread crumbs, and make a dressing of them and spread over the top of the steak. Roll it up and tie it with a string, put it in a pan and roast forty minutes.

SAND TARTS.—Two cupfuls of sugar, one of butter, three of flour, and two eggs; roll very thin, cut in squares with a knife, spread with the white of an egg on top, sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar, press a raisin in the center of each, and bake.

A rice corn-bread is a favorite dish in the South. Make it by using two eggs beaten together, one tablespoon lard melted, one pint of sour milk or buttermilk, a pinch of salt, one teaspoon soda dissolved in boiling water, one-half pint cornmeal, one-half pint boiled rice. If the milk is not very sour, use a little cream of tartar.

EGG SAUCE FOR FISH.—Take one cupful of butter, rub into it one tablespoonful of flour, half a tablespoonful of salt, and a quarter of a teaspoonful of black pepper; then add a pint of cold water. Heat it, stirring all the time; when it begins to simmer, remove it from the fire, and add two hard-boiled eggs chopped fine.—Woman's World.

THE PERFECTION OF LEMONADE.—Good lemonade is one of the most perfect drinks ever devised. I can hardly understand why it is not in daily use in place of tea or coffee, and why it does not drive out every kind of alcoholic drink. Perfect lemonade is made as follows: For a quart, take the juice of three lemons, using the rind of one of them. Carefully peel the rind very thin, getting just the yellow outside; this cut into pieces and put with the juice and powdered sugar, of which use two ounces to the quart in a jug or jar with a cover. When the water is just at the boiling point, pour it over the lemon and sugar, cover at once, and let it get cold. Try this way once, and see if it is not delicious. While on the subject, let me say that I know a physician whose exclusive drink is lemonade. He uses about three thousand lemons a year. He weighs 185 pounds, and does not know what it is to be ill.—Journal of Hygiene.

HYGIENE.

The Modern Dietary.

Though the importance of submitting even those who are not so afflicted with disease as to be bed-ridden to a more or less restricted diet is still recognized, it must be admitted that the modern dietary does not much resemble the rigid rules formerly in vogue. It is doubtful if the medical men of to-day are willing to admit that there are many diseases in which the patient is benefited by a close restriction of diet.

It is now universally recognized that it is a practice fraught with extreme danger in any form of disease, to withdraw the bulk of the food without replacing it with its equivalent in nourishment.

Such a replacement has been made possible, as it never was before, by the great variety of prepared foods which, while calling for no effort upon the part of the system, are still readily absorbed and assimilated.

The old adage, "Stuff a cold and starve a fever," as indicative of the methods once employed in dealing with the question of the proper diet for the sick, has lost its force; and the more reasonable one, of sustaining the strength by suitable nourishment in every condition of disease, has taken its place.

In the most extreme cases it will be found necessary to obtain for the patient food from which the waste and unavailable matter has been entirely removed, so sensitive is the system at times, and so instinctively does it repel what is not of use to it. But the limitation formerly placed upon the diet of the sick by the lack of a variety to choose from is now happily done away with, and we should spare no pains to find some nourishment which shall prove sufficient for, and acceptable to, the most difficult case.

A harmless and often all-efficient stimulant is heat. Preparations which are taken hot are often better borne and do much more good than the same preparations taken cool.

It is not necessary to speak of the advantage of giving only a liquid diet in extreme cases.—Youth's Companion.

Alcohol.

Alcohol is, perhaps, the most deceitful drug in the whole materia medica.

All drugs have a primary and secondary effect, and are usually prescribed for the former; but where, as in the case of alcoholic beverages, large quantities are apt to be taken with great frequency, the secondary effects of the remedy become of great importance.

The first action of alcohol is to stimulate the circulation and brain; it borrows from the vital resources a sufficient amount of force to make a display of apparent strength, but at a great cost to the organism, and a too frequent repetition of the draft must eventuate in physical bankruptcy. But unfortunately, the very process which enables a man to make this display of seeming health and energy soon destroys his ability to correctly gauge his vital reserve, and the neurotic taint, sole inheritance of many, clamors more and more vehemently for the stimulant which shall make its unfortunate possessor the momentary peer of any man.

The inception of the drink habit is the first step in the process of mental, moral, and physical suicide; and the physician whose faulty judgment recommends alcohol in any form for indigestion, debility, etc., shoulders a weight of responsibility which no honest man should willingly assume.—Medical Brief.

"Refreshing Sleep."

An interested observer assures us that in order to enjoy the most refreshing sleep one should sleep in the dark. The sweetest and most undisturbed sleep is always enjoyed in a thoroughly darkened room. Light acts upon the brain, and those who sleep with their blinds up will find that in the Summer time, when so few hours are really dark, their sleep is restless and disturbed. This is often placed to the account of heat, but more often than not it is the light which causes wakefulness, when, as a natural consequence, the body becomes aware of the heat. Night lights should never become a matter of necessity. A match and candle by the bed-side should be quite sufficient. The wish for artificial light through the night is a depraved taste in the young and healthy, and should not be encouraged.

A Glass of Water.

A glass of cold water the first thing after rising, and last before retiring, is strengthening to the stomach, and good for inaction of the bowels, dyspepsia and all the troubles caused by a sedentary life.

Strength of character lies not in demanding special circumstances, but in mastering and using any that may be given.—H. S. Holland.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Mississippi Crops.

The prospect of corn and cotton in various parts of Mississippi up to the fifteenth instant have been anything but flattering. The very cold weather we have had in both May and June has been especially severe on cotton. As a general thing, it is very small and inferior. The late warm days of June have, however, revived it a little. The corn crops, likewise, as far as our acquaintance goes, except in our immediate locality, are rather small and inferior. The cause in many places is very dry weather. It is reported in some places they have had no rain in about two months. On the night of the fifteenth we were in Durant, where they had a fine rain. Since that we have had pretty good rains in the vicinity of Crystal Springs. We hope by this time they have become general.

While many farmers have been very much discouraged about their corn crops on account of its size, we will call their attention to an important fact; that is, these crops can be greatly redeemed if they should have rains by the application of about two hundred and fifty pounds of a fertilizer to the acre, made of cotton seed meal and acid phosphate in equal parts. We have had experience in this line, and know whereof we speak. One year our corn crop was very small. We tried the above plan, and although we never succeeded in getting large stalks, we did in ears. Made as heavy ears as were ever grown on our farm. It is not now too late to plant corn. Even as late as July we have seen good crops made after beans and tomatoes. The farmer who fails to raise enough corn is in a bad condition, especially if raising cotton at six and seven cents per pound. Plenty of corn makes him largely independent. With a few small hogs in the Fall, and corn to fatten, places the farmer in a condition to keep out of debt to a very great extent. But with his smoke-house and corn crib in the West, as Parson Lomax would say, "he is in a middle of a fix."

Farmers, we would emphasize, Raise as far as lieth in you your own home supplies, and you are safe.

Peas.

Peas we will have to mention again. A number of letters have been written us to know at what age do we cut peas to sow them as forage. At about the time a third of the peas are ripe. Some are very small, some half ripe, and some, or one-third, ready to gather. In this condition they seem to make the best feed, seem to have more nutrition in them. We answer further now upon our method of saving them. We are not particular whether we pack them in the building or not—in fact, we have never packed them; they seem to lie close enough without it. Some again have inquired how late in the season can they be planted to make a forage crop. Up to the middle and the end of July, especially if the seasons are good in the Fall. The kind we would plant at this time of the year would be the Whip-poor-will Pea.

How to Treat Bones.

Anyone may with a little trouble use all the bones accumulating about a homestead says bulletin of the California Experiment Station.

1. Bones put into a well kept (moistened) manure-pile will themselves gradually decay and disappear, enriching the manure to that extent.

2. Raw bones may be bodily buried in the soil around the trees; if placed at a sufficient depth, beyond the reach of the Summer's heat and drought, the rootlets will cluster around each piece and in the course of a few years consume it entirely. But it will not do to have these root-clusters broken up by cultivation every season.

3. Bones may be packed in moist wood ashes, best mixed with a little quicklime; the mass kept moist, but never dripping. In a few months the hardest bones will be reduced to a fine mush, which is as effectual as superphosphate. "Concentrated lye" and the coal may be used instead of ashes. In this process the nitrogen of the bones is lost, going off in the form of ammonia, the odor of which is very perceptible to the tank used.

For neither of these processes should the bones be burnt. The burning of bones is an unqualified detriment to their effectiveness, which can only be undone by the use of sulphuric acid.

A Veteran's Story

Jos. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 529 E. 146th St., N. Y. City, writes voluntarily. In 1852, at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a struggle of several years in hospitals, was discharged as incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends

I continued the use of the Sarsaparilla for a whole year, until the rheumatism entirely disappeared."—JAMES WAY, proprietor of livery stable, Roseville, Cal.

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No. 102, and see how it would suit you.

If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

Changes in the Southern University.

We quote the following from the Alabama Advocate. We regret that the limited space at our command does not allow a more extended quotation concerning Dr. Andrews.

"At the last annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Southern University, Dr. Allen S. Andrews resigned his position as president. That a combination of circumstances had conspired to impress him to take this step is greatly regretted by the friends of the institution, and by none more so than the board. At the same meeting of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Jno. O. Keener was elected president. A better selection, perhaps, could not have been made. As we see it, Dr. Keener is in every way fitted for the position. With a commanding person, scholarly attainments and superior pulpit abilities, he combines the graces of a genial nature and the charms of personal magnetism. Indeed, he enters upon the work with every available qualification, and we predict for him a brilliant career and unprecedented prosperity for the institution. Rev. Dr. J. A. Moore having resigned his position as professor of mathematics, to accept a like one in Millsaps College, Prof. L. P. Giddens, late vice-president of the Athens Female College, has been elected to fill the vacancy."

An Experiment in Rice Culture.

A novel experiment in rice culture is being made in Vermilion parish, La. Instead of flooding the rice fields, Mr. David Todd, proprietor of the Wester-Ogle Plantation, near Abbeville, has covered the ground on a part of his farm about two inches deep with hay. He holds that the hay, like the water, will keep down the grass without any injurious effect upon the rice. If the experiment proves a success, it will revolutionize the present method of culture, as the expense of covering the land with rice straw or prairie grass would be insignificant in comparison with the cost of irrigation.

A Centennial.

The first annual commencement of the Audubon Sugar School will take place on Saturday, June 30.

Addresses will be delivered by Hon. T. S. Wilkinson and Gov. M. J. Foster. The diplomas will be delivered by Hon. J. Dymond. The graduates are Martin Altolaguirre, Navarra, Spain; E. M. Bertaut, Lauderdale, La.; W. M. McQuaid, Baton Rouge, La.

These exercises also celebrate the centennial of sugar growing in Louisiana, the first crop of cane having been grown by Etiene De Bore in 1794.

The Repeal of the Sunday Law.

A bill exempting cities of over twenty-five thousand inhabitants from the operation of the Sunday law having been recently railroaded through the Louisiana House of Representatives, a citizens' meeting was called in this city, on Monday last, to devise means of defeating said bill in the Senate. The meeting was largely attended, and was composed of the very best element of our citizenship.

All religions creeds were represented, including Catholicism and Judaism. A more united, earnest gathering of representative citizens is rarely seen. A committee of fifteen, comprising persons of all religious faiths and representatives of different labor organizations, was appointed to proceed at once to Baton Rouge and present an indignant protest against the passage of this bill. The Senate will do well to heed this protest. The statement made by the friends of the bill in the House that New Orleans wants such a measure is simply false. The saloonists and their political tools want it; but our best citizenship does not want it. The workingmen do not want it. They want a day of rest. The only argument in favor of the bill that has even a show of plausibility is that the law is not enforced. Is there any validity in this? Ought any law to be repealed simply because it is not universally observed? If so, then why not repeal the laws against theft, burglary, arson, murder, etc.? Has any one of these laws been universally enforced? Do not violations of those laws take place every day? The Sunday law, in the very nature of things, is far easier of enforcement than the other laws referred to. Its non-enforcement is simply the result of neglect of duty on the part of officials. Does this constitute a valid reason for repealing a law? To take such a position is to put a premium upon lawlessness. The dictate of wisdom is to let the law stand whether it is enforced or not. The fact that this law is not enforced now in the city of New Orleans is no proof that it never will be enforced. A change of administration may bring a change of programme. The gentlemen composing the State Senate do not need to be told that there is in New Orleans at this time a strong and constantly growing sentiment in opposition to political corruption and in favor of the enforcement of law. We firmly believe that this sentiment, under the wise leadership of the secular press of the city, will soon become overwhelming. We believe that the very next municipal election will usher in a new regime, one of whose cardinal principles will be the enforcement of law. Surely the Senate comprises too large an element of statesmanship to be caught by such chaff. If the Sunday law is an unwise measure, let it be repealed; if it is wise, do not exempt New Orleans from its operation. Do not extend any special privileges to New Orleans saloon keepers.

Lepers—Not Ten, but a Hundred.

Dr. Isadore Dyer, a prominent physician of this city, published recently in the Picayune an article on leprosy in Louisiana, which contains some startling statements. He believes that there are not less than a hundred cases of this loathsome disease in New Orleans. It is stated, moreover, that these lepers, with the exception of a mere handful in the leper hospital, are attending to business and mixing with mankind in general on the streets and everywhere. And even those in the hospital are not confined there, but can go almost at pleasure withersoever they will. Legislation in behalf of these unfortunates is loudly called for in these parts.

Centenary Redivivus.

The friends of Centenary College will be glad to know that a new interest in it is awakening among the people. A new hope is springing up and a new enthusiasm is taking possession of hearts too long apathetic. The tide is turning, and the Methodists of Louisiana will take it "at the flood." The preachers are being warmed and they will fire the people. The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting will soon issue a stirring address to our people. The District Conferences will catch up the slogan and send its bugle blast to every part of the State. The inspiration born of a new hope has taken possession of trustees and faculty. The agent, Prof. Wier, is on the wing and reports hopefully, having already the promise of half-dozen boys from one town in Southern Louisiana. July and August is the time for busy work for the college. Every alumnus is a special agent and will do his best for the college, remembering the days of "auld lang syne." Every Methodist will throw his or her influence toward securing students. Every lover of Christian education will lend a willing, helping hand. All these, working earnestly and harmoniously together, will send such a troop of boys to Centenary by Sept. 5 as will be an astonishment to many and a joy and rejoicing to everybody. The president is preparing to move to Jackson, so as to be on hand when the session begins. The outlook is not only hopeful—it is inspiring. Let everybody join in this work, and success is assured.

C. W. CARTER, Pres.

The above has the right ring. It strikes the key-note of the situation. Let every alumnus of Centenary respond to the appeal of President Carter; and not the alumni alone, but all who have quaffed the waters of intellectual truth at Centenary's fountains and all others who have feelings of friendship for the grand old institution. What Centenary needs is first, pupils, and next money. The alumni, numerous and influential as they are, can render much service in both ways. Dr. Candler a few years ago raised quite a handsome sum of money for Emory from its alumni. Then, too, the preachers of the Louisiana Conference can accomplish wonders. We are glad to know that the preachers of New Orleans have resolved with entire unanimity to put forth their best efforts in behalf of Centenary. The ADVOCATE, of next week, will contain their appeal to the Methodists of Louisiana. Let the preachers of all parts of the Conference do likewise. In addition to her former claims, Centenary now has this leverage upon Louisiana. Her president is a native of the State, and a man whose friends are legion wherever he is known. We believe this is the first time Centenary has had a member of the Louisiana Conference at its head since the resignation of Dr. J. C. Miller more than thirty years ago; and Dr. Miller was not a native of Louisiana. Then, too, after the present year the Louisiana Conference will doubtless become the sole proprietor of Centenary. This ought to put the Louisiana preachers on their mettle. Let them feel that Centenary is their institution, and that its success is largely dependent upon their efforts. To contribute his quota to the thorough rehabilitation of this historic institution ought to be the ambition of every Louisiana preacher.

A New Telescope.

At a cost of $150 000 Andrew Carnegie and Henry Phipps, Jr., will fit up at Pittsburgh the largest telescope yet constructed. The lens will be fifty inches in diameter, and the tube 63 feet long. The Yerkes Telescope at Chicago will have an object glass 42 inches in diameter; the one now in use at the Lick Observatory in California is 36 inches.

Higher Education in the M. E. Church.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church has issued its annual report in book form. The report contains much valuable information, some of which we here present in a very condensed form. The number of institutions reported is 202, from each of which full statistics are given. The total valuation of college property, including endowments, is $26,583,000 00. The income for the last fiscal year was $1,810,171.00. The Board has aided during the year no less than 1,416 students in a hundred colleges throughout the world. Of this number more than nine hundred were studying for the ministry, and more than a hundred others preparing for missionary work, not directly ministerial. We invite attention to these figures on the part of those who are engaged in the ungenerous and disloyal work of trying to stir up sentiment against the action of the recent General Conference in creating a Board of Education. What true Methodist does not wish to know what his church is doing for the cause of education? And how can full information be given unless there be an educational system? Has the Southern Methodist Church at present any full and reliable educational statistics that are accessible by the masses? How it would stimulate our people if they only knew what our church is doing in this field! Methodists often allow their church to be discounted from sheer ignorance of what the church is doing. Some shallow-pated member of another communion will boast of the superior culture of his church, when in reality his little ecclesiastical concern is a mere bagatelle in comparison with Methodism, even as regards education, to say nothing of missions, church extension, etc. A knowledge of the various operations of the church is certainly a desideratum among us. And yet this is one of the very smallest of the benefits that are to accrue to Southern Methodism from the action of the late General Conference. The report under consideration contains some interesting facts concerning the heroic efforts made by the beneficiaries of the Board, some of whom are living on less than seventy-five cents per week.

Work of the Book Committee.

The Book Committee held a meeting at Nashville on the thirteenth. Dr. W. H. Morgan was elected chairman, and J. D. Hamilton, secretary. Rev. R. P. Wilson, D. D., the present business manager of the Pacific Advocate, was elected to its editorship. The Epworth League paper that is to be was christened "The Epworth Advocate." The salary of the assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate, who is to be selected by the editor-in-chief, was fixed at $2,400. An appropriation of $2,500 per annum was made for contributions to the Nashville Advocate. An appropriation of $5,000 was made for contributions to Sunday-school literature. An assistant Sunday-school editor is also to be employed. Thus the Book Committee shows an intelligent appreciation of the demands of the age. Our church ought not to be behind any church in Christendom in the character of its literature, especially its Sunday-school literature.

We Like It.

We mean the growing fraternity between sister churches. Dr. Broadus, of the Baptist Church, preached the baccalaureate sermon at the late commencement at Vanderbilt University; and Bishop Galloway delivered an address at the commencement of Mississippi College (Baptist) at Clinton, Miss. The only wonder to us is that Christian churches have not gotten this near together long ago.

New Orleans Gains.

We clip the following from the Woodville Republican:

Dr. McGehee goes to New Orleans, where a wider and more active professional life will be opened to him. As a very able physician our people will regret to lose him; but not this alone. As a friend and a public-spirited citizen who was always interested in efforts for the public good, his loss will be much felt.

Dr. McGehee is a son of Judge Edward McGehee, extensively known as one of the very first citizens of Mississippi in his day, the founder of Edward McGehee College, the benefactor of Centenary, and the friend of every good cause. Dr. McGehee, besides being a physician of first-class attainments and skill, is a highly-cultured, sunny-souled Christian gentleman, whose friends will be legion in any community in which he may reside. The Crescent City is to be congratulated upon such an acquisition to her social and professional life.

A New Book.

Rev. Joel T. Daves, of the North Georgia Conference, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, has published a book entitled, "Daily Talks and Walks with God, in His Own Word and Ways." We have not seen a copy of the work, but it is highly commended by such men as Bishops Fitzgerald and Hendrix, Drs. Candler and J. W. Lee, Gov. Northern, Hon. Hoke Smith and Hon. Charles Crisp. The plan of the work is given by the author in the following words:

There is a lesson filling an entire page, for each morning and evening in the year. The lesson begins with a subject, springing out of the text that follows. Following the subject and the text are scriptural illustrations of the subject, the text, and of each other, forming the divine comment on his own message. Each lesson closes with a treasury of good things from the very best of human thought of all ages, in prose and poetry, as illustrations of the word.

The author's address is Edgewood, Ga.

Looking Southward.

A corporation gotten up in Des Moines, Iowa, called the Fair Hope Industrial Association, has sent a committee of inspection to Southwest Louisiana with a view of purchasing five thousand acres of land on which to locate a colony, whose operations are to be conducted on the co-operative plan. They will also visit parts of Arkansas and Texas before making a purchase.

Louisiana Chautauqua.

The Louisiana Chautauqua will convene at Ruston, July 2. The assembly owns fifteen acres of ground on which are a number of mineral springs. The auditorium has a seating capacity of two thousand. A number of able lecturers have been secured. Competent instructors have been provided for all the departments of school work.

A Novel Trade.

Mrs. Nellie Sartoris, daughter of General Grant, it is said, is about to swap an income of $25,000 for a husband. She has an annual income of $25,000 from the Sartoris estate which will be forfeited by marriage; and yet she is engaged to be married. She may be making a good trade, but we have seen some husbands that would be dear at a tenth of that price.

Gone Home.

Rev. R. H. Rivers, D. D., died at Louisville, Ky., on the twenty-first. Dr. Rivers was at one time president of Centenary College. He was also an author of celebrity, and had served in the pastorate in many important stations. He was a man of marked ability and of admirable Christian character.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

"Any Port in a Storm."

That's a good maxim, but it will not work as a rule in the purchase of a remedy for Rheumatism. Any of the cheap nostrums will not effect a cure—in fact, none of them will. Get Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy, and a speedy cure is certain. One bottle is worth a hundred of anything else, and for that reason it is the cheapest when a cure is wanted. The two bottles sent to any address by express upon receipt of $5. Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York. Agents Wanted.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

GOD'S INVITATIONS.

(Isa. 1, 18; Matt. xi, 28; Luke xiv, 17; Rev. xxii, 17.)

1. Come, let us reason together.

(1) You have sinned, in affection, thought, word and deed.

(2) Sin is moral poison. The soul that sinneth, it shall die.

(3) Reformation is good; but it can not undo the sinful past.

(4) Divine forgiveness is necessary. Forgiveness is promised.

(5) Regeneration removes the evil heart of unbelief.

2 Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, etc.

(1) Labor to be good without the Holy Spirit's aid. Sisyphus rolling stone to mountain's summit.

(2) Heavy laden. Conscious of guilt. Conscience condemning. "A wounded spirit, who can bear?"

(3) Christ gives rest to the penitent. Peace that passeth understanding. The witness of the Spirit.

3. Come, for all things are now ready.

(1) Hell ready to receive the impenitent.

(2) The church ready to receive the "wayworn traveler."

(3) Christ ready to receive the contrite prodigal. On the cross he cried: "It is finished." Fountain filled with blood.

(4) The Holy Spirit ready to lead into all truth. To comfort.

(5) Heaven ready to receive all who are faithful unto death.

4. The Spirit and the bride say, Come, etc.

(1) The Holy Spirit—"the still small voice"—wooing the unregenerate.

(2) The bride—the church—says, Come. Church services designed to call sinners to Christ.

(3) He that heareth says, Come. Ourselves converted, we are anxiously solicitous to call sinners to repentance.

(4) Whosoever will may come and take the water of life freely! Whosoever—blessed word!

TRUST THE CHILDREN.

Trust the children. Never doubt them,
Build a wall of love about them;
After sowing seeds of duty,
Trust them for the flowers of beauty.

Trust the children. Don't suspect them,
Let your confidence direct them,
At the hearth or in the wildwood
Meet them on the plane of childhood.

Trust the little ones. Remember
May is not like chill December,
Let not words of rage or madness
Check their happy notes of gladness.

Trust the little ones, you guide them;
And, above all, ne'er deride them
Should they trip, or should they blunder,
Lest you map love's cords asunder.

Trust the children. Let them treasure,
Mother's faith in boundless measure,
Father's love in them confiding
Then no secrets they'll be hiding.

Habit in Reading.

My old friend, the physician on the next street, tells me that what we call perfect health is largely a matter of correct bodily habits. He says that we eat and sleep well because we have the habit of eating and sleeping at certain times; that we resist colds and fevers quite as often because we have a habit of body in the opposite direction as because we are vigorous.

I am inclined to think the doctor correct in the main, and I also think this is quite as true of our mental as of our bodily selves. We get a certain habit of thought that goes with us, and we are only forced into other channels momentarily, to return so soon as the outside pressure is removed. These habits are formed almost before we are aware of it; how important, then, is it that these should be right and correct habits!

As we can not be too careful of the company to which we introduce the young, neither can we be too careful of the books they read. The vile word heard on the street may be scarcely heard or forgotten in an instant; but the bad word on the printed page is a companion intruding, again and again, upon the quiet moment, demanding until it gains audience; nor is it necessary that the book be positively bad to be undesirable. We are careful to keep our young from too much contact with the giddy and thoughtless; why should we give them over to the entertainment of books just as trifling?

Let no one urge that these books are useful as a warning. We have all heard of the woman who left her children with the warning not to put beans up their noses, and returned a few hours afterward to find one of them suffering intensely, his nasal passage closed by a moistening and swelling bean. His excuse was that it was so funny that his mama thought a bean would go into his nose, he thought he would try one. This is generally the effect of premature warnings against evil from books or elders. Evil is in the world and meets us at the very threshold of intelligence, but it is as wise to encourage children to investigate it as it is to teach them to investigate a hornet's nest.

The world is full of knowledge, as the child's mind is full of inquiry. How many true and beautiful things are waiting to be learned! The circle of very necessary knowledge can not be half traversed without creating a habit of cleanness that will last a life-time. Nor are these coarse books, which are written and read far too freely in our day, any more true to real life than the purer writings they sometimes crowd out. Is Chris Evans more true than President Hopkins, of Williams College? Is Vaillant, the anarchist, a more real man than President Fairchild, of Oberlin?

Since we are created in the image of God, it seems to me that such men as Mark Hopkins and James Fairchild are almost the embodiment of realism, and no book can be really true to life that does not tend toward thoughts and lives like theirs.

Neither are these wild and improbable tales interesting until the mental palate has been trained to the taste. Children are full of imagination, but it is pure imagination. They like fairies and angels and ministering spirits; they are fond of knights and dragon-slayers; failing these, they learn to pass their days with outlaws and ruffians, so they be bold.

If they can not have a Galahad in armor, they learn to take a "Red Rover of the Forest," or some other dime novel hero. Sidney's white plume is a fairer sight than an Indian's scalplock. We come to like what has grown familiar; and a youth passed with Whittier and Longfellow, with Tennyson and Irving, with Wallace and Cable, will totally unfit one for Zola or Ouida.

I heard one ask a great preacher once what he thought about taking children to church if they were not interested. His answer was: "I shall take my boy to church every Sunday that it is possible to do so until he is twenty-one. By that time, if my prayers and labors have not resulted in his conversion, he will at least have such a habit of going to church that he will go, and will gauge his life in some measure, at least, by the standard of Christians."

So, I say, if I had children I would so fill their hands and their minds with good reading that by the time they were of age, if they did not love it because it is good, they would yet prefer it because it is true, artistic, real and interesting.—Selected.

Good and Bad Mothers.

The difference between good and bad mothers is so vast and so far-reaching that it is no exaggeration to say that the good mothers of this generation are building the homes of the next generation, and that the bad mothers are building the prisons. For out of families nations are made; and if the father be the head and the hands of a family, the mother is the heart. No office in the world is so honorable as hers, no priesthood so holy, no influence is so sweet and strong and lasting. Unselfish love in the mother! cheerful obedience in the children! in whatever home these forces are constantly operative, that home can not be a failure. And mother-love is not of the right kind, nor of the highest trend, unless it compels this obedience. The assertion that affectionate firmness and even wholesome chastisement is unnecessary with our advanced civilization is a specious and dangerous one. The children of to-day have as many rudimentary vices as they had in the days of the patriarchs; as a general thing they are self-willed and inclined to evil from their cradles; greedy without a blush, and ready to lie as soon as they discover the use of language. A good mother does not shut her eyes to these facts; she accepts her child as imperfect, and trains it with never-ceasing love and care for its highest duties. She does not call impudence "smartness," nor insubordination "high spirit," nor selfishness "knowing how to take care of itself," nor lying and dishonesty "sharpness."

She knows if the child is to be father to the man, what kind of a man such a child will make. How to manage young children; how to strengthen them physically; how best to awaken their intellects, engage their affection and win their confidence; how to make home the sweetest spot on earth, a place of love, order and repose, a temple of purity where innocence is respected, and where no one is permitted to talk of indecent subjects or to read indecent books; these are the duties of a good mother; and her position, if so filled, is one of dignity and grave importance. For it is on the hearth-stone she gives the fine healthy initial touch to her sons and daughters that is not effaced through life, and that makes them blessed in their generation.

There is another duty, a very sacred one, which some mothers, however good in all other respects, either thoughtlessly or with mistaken ideas, delegate to others—the religious training of their children. No Sunday-school and no church can do it for them. The child that learns "Our Father" at its mother's knee; that hears from mother's lips the heroic and tender stories of the Bible, has a well-spring of religious faith in his soul that no after life, however hard and fast and destructive, can dry up. It is inconceivable then how a mother can permit any other woman to deprive her of an influence over her children nothing can destroy; of a memory in their lives so sweet, that when every other memory is withered and approaching decay, it will still be fresh and green; yes, even to the grave's mouth.—Mrs. A. E. Barr, in North American Review.

GRANDPA'S WAY.

My grandpa is the strangest man!
Of course I love him dearly,
But really it seems to me
He looks at things so queerly.

He always thinks that every day
Is right, no matter whether
It rains or snows, or shines or blows,
Or what the kind of weather.

When out door fun is ruined by
A heavy shower provoking,
He pats my head, and says, "You see,
The dry earth needs a soaking."

And when I think the day too warm
For any kind of pleasure,
He says, "The corn has grown an inch—
I see without a measure."

And when I fret because the wind
Has set my things all whirring,
He looks at me, and says, "Tut! tut!
This close air needs a stirring?"

He says, when drifts are piling high,
And fenceposts scarcely peeping!
"How warm beneath their blanket white
The little flowers are keeping!"

Sometimes I think, when on his face
His sweet smile shines so clearly,
It would be nice if everyone
Could see things just so queerly!

—Youth's Companion.

Herbert's Fault.

Our little friend Herbert is in general a good boy, better in fact, than ordinary, yet Herbert does not always do right; he is not cross or bad tempered, but—shall we confess it?—he is at times deceitful. Truth is clear and beautiful, like the dew; deceit is dark and ugly, like the muddy pool.

One Summer evening, in the long twilight, Herbert asked, "Papa, may I go down to Willie Dugal's to play?"

"Yes," replied papa, "but be sure you are at home at half-past seven o'clock."

Herbert, with a promise to obey, started off, whistling as he went.

What would a boy do without his whistle? It is a companion when he otherwise would be lonely.

Half-past seven came and Herbert did not return, so his papa went to look for him. Finding him engaged in a lively game, apparently all unconscious of the hour, the father, in surprise, said: "My boy, didn't I bid you return at half-past seven?"

"Yes, papa," replied Herbert, "but my watch only points to seven," and he pulled out his little time-piece as he spoke.

By the lingering twilight the father could see that the boy spoke correctly, and would not further reprove him.

They returned home, and Herbert went to bed. But what ailed the boy, he could not rest?

He tossed and tumbled and tried to sleep, but his efforts were all in vain, and at length he rose, partially dressed, and went down to his papa's room. Finding his father, he said, "Oh, papa, I'm so glad you haven't gone to bed, for I want to tell you something."

"What is it, Herbert, my son?" cried the father, as he drew the child to his chair. "You are not sick, are you?" he continued as he noted the anxious little face.

"No, papa, I am not sick, but I could not sleep because I deceived you. I knew my watch was all wrong, and I made believe to you that I thought it was right. Please to forgive me;" and Herbert sobbed, now that the confession was made.

The father readily forgave the fault, but asked, "Have you sought forgiveness from the Lord?"

"Oh, yes," said Herbert, "and hereafter I will try to be true."—Anna D. Walker.

Children's Table Manners.

There is one thing that a child should be taught from the time it is old enough to sit up in the company of its elders, and that is a refined code of table manners that no future influence can change in any way. It is hard to overcome the habits of childhood, even though the associations of youth are entirely different from those that left their mark on the first years of existence. Therefore, to instill correct demeanor one must begin when the baby brain is unfolding and receptive.

No one can estimate how very much a person is judged by the sort of conduct which characterizes the prosaic eating and drinking that is part of the daily routine. The graceful handling of a fork, the dainty way of sipping one's soup, the knowledge of what this, that, and the other table ornament is for, stamps a man or woman at once as being used to good society, and is the greatest help to the awkward and the shy.

No matter how lovely a woman may be, if she eats with her knife the illusion is dispelled, and no matter how great or honorable the man, if he will persist in drinking out of his saucer his fame counts for naught.

It is the little things of life that either condemn or elevate us in the opinion of others, and table manners are as essential a part of the education of a gentleman or gentlewoman as the deeper lines of thought and learning.

A mother can not be too careful with her child in this particular. Teachers of deportment may come in later years, but the first rudiments of table etiquette should be engrafted while yet the baby sits in a high chair and does not know a fork from a spoon.—Philadelphia Times.

Young, Though Old.

To be always young in feelings, in interests and in sympathies is possible to any person whose resolution to maintain this happy condition is early fixed and steadily adhered to. Jane Clermont, that beautiful woman who was beloved by Byron and adored by Shelley, lately died not far from ninety years of age. Her eyes, her figure, her color and her teeth remained perfect, her abundant hair whitened by the years only made her the lovelier, and she was charming in her manner always.

Throughout her long life she invariably ate sparingly and only simple food, and she went out every day, but above all, she always maintained a keen interest in youthful persons and delighted in fresh and fine thoughts, whether they were expressed in books or conversation. Indeed, she was to the very last a most fascinating companion for both the young and the mature. It never occurred to those about her that she was not as young as they.

Her society was so eagerly sought that she was compelled to deny herself daily to an excess of visitors who were eager to enjoy her brilliant conversation, infectious laughter and graceful personality. She always reserved at least an hour in every day for solitude and absolute repose of mind and body. To the mind this is not always possible, but for the body a little rest and retirement is rarely beyond any one's attainment.—Ex.

Parents, Don't Criticise Your Pastor before Your Children.

He may not be perfect, may possibly be very defective in many elements of his pastoral work. But it will injure his influence with children to have parents speak of these faulty things in their presence or within their hearing. Children, like others, are often ready to make the defects of others an excuse for their own delinquencies, and it becomes parents, therefore, to be very circumspect in their words and conduct in the matter of pastoral criticism, lest injury may not only come to the pastor, but a great wrong be done thereby to the children. The youthful mind and heart take impressions either for good or evil easily and rapidly, and these impressions may be permanent; therefore thoughtless, depreciating remarks may result in unspeakable damage to those whom parents should be careful to guard from all evil influences, and whose interests, both for time and for eternity, they should most sedulously promote.—Ex.

The Children's Prayer.

"Pray God, bless my dear papa, mama, brothers and sisters, and auntie, and all my relatives and friends.

"Make me a good little girl. Let me never be naughty or tell a lie, which is a mean and shameful thing. Make me kind to my nurses and servants, and to all poor people.

"Let me never be cruel to any dumb creature; for if I am cruel to anything, even to a poor little fly, thou, who art so good, will never love me.

"Pray God to bless and preserve us this night and for evermore, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

This prayer Charles Dickens wrote for his children, and each one of them was taught to repeat it night and morning as soon as they could speak.—Ladies' Home Journal.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, Amory, North Mississippi Conference: "Our work has been growing steadily since Conference. A new and nice parsonage has been built and nearly furnished. A new church in the country has been built, and the one in town completed. The latter is now ready to be dedicated, which we hope to have done soon. The former will be dedicated in the Summer. Plans are on foot for repairing another, which we will do when the crops are laid by. About twenty have been received into the church. The five Sunday-schools on the work are in good order, and the attendance is fine. We have in Amory a Sunday-school teachers' meeting, just started, which is very interesting. Our church work is well organized. Sister Woollard has organized a P. and H. M. Society, which has already raised over $30. The ladies are doing faithful work. A Foreign Mission Society of the ladies was organized last Sunday with twenty members. There are about fifty connectional papers taken on the work, and near the same number of District Reporters. Finances are very well up."

Rev. W. M. Young, P. C., Pleasant Grove circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "This is a live circuit in some respects. We have four Woman's Missionary Societies, three Juveniles, and one Parsonage and Home Mission Society. We have five prayer meetings and one Epworth League, all doing moderately well. We have many family altars and many who pray in public, both men and women. Our Quarterly Conferences are well attended, and the second was a time of spiritual power. Bro. H. C. Morehead, our presiding elder, is a very spiritual man, and is doing much to bring our Quarterly Conference occasions back to the old standard of spiritual power. He draws good crowds on Saturday. All the interests of the church are fairly up for these hard times. I am just back from District Conference at Courtland, which was a fine Conference, and shows Sardis district to be well up in all the departments of church work. The Conference adopted the report of the Committee on Education, favoring a memorial cottage to be built on the campus of Millsaps College in honor of our sainted brother, the Rev. J. H. Brooks, for the occupancy of poor young men while in attendance at college, and a liberal subscription was taken. The next session of the District Conference is to be held at Pleasant Grove. All the preachers in the district seem to be doing well. Some conversions reported. I hope to report many converts from this work in the near future."

CHILDREN'S DAY.

We have just had a delightful Children's Day at Oak Ridge, on the Warren circuit. Bro. J. P. Drake, of Edwards station, was with us to deliver the lecture to the children in the morning, and then preached an excellent sermon to the parents in the evening. We were delighted with his visit, and desire him to come again. I think we had nearly four hundred persons present, and just such a dinner as the ladies of Oak Ridge can prepare, ample and delicious. Everybody ate to their heart's content. The superintendent, Bro. S. P. Grant, and choir, with Sister Alice Grant at the organ, deserves great credit for the entertainment of the day. The service of song and recitation was perfect. The day will not be soon forgotten. Last, but not least, the collection amounted to $19.45, making, added to $20 collected at Phœnix, Wesley Chapel, $38.45, and yet another day to hear from. My circuit will possibly be equal to any in the Conference.

LOUISIANA AVENUE MISSION SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

The afternoon of Sunday, June 3, was fixed upon for Children's Day services at this flourishing school. Being invited to address the school, we were on hand at four o'clock, and found teachers and children filling a little front room of a private cottage on Jersey street, between Constantinople and Marengo streets. The efficient officers of this school are Miss Hattie Hailey, superintendent, and James Van Carter and Harry Spear, secretaries. Miss Edith Thomson presides with grace and ability at the organ. The other workers, as far as we learned, are Mrs. Isabella Coffree, Miss Fannie Rayne, Miss Lena Hoover, Miss Carrie Kostmeyer, Mr. Andrew Wilson, Mr. Herbert Norman and Mr. L. E. Campbell. There are others, of course, who occasionally help. The singing was of a high order, the responses clear and full in the readings, and the recitations by the young folks very well rendered. The children made a liberal contribution for Children's Day fund.

We were glad to find such evidences of good work being done; but the fact that those devoted workers for Christ should be compelled to occupy for so many months such cramped and wholly inadequate quarters for their school set us thinking. If a lot in that neighborhood could be bought at once, and a building with capacity for a school of 100 to 150 scholars could be erected upon it, there can be no manner of doubt that a very large school could be speedily gathered and easily held. It would be a matter of only a few years before a large church membership would be secured at that point. Ah! we sadly need some Keller to purchase and deed a lot for the school. That in hand, a neat and capacious building could be quickly secured. By the way, the New Orleans Methodist City Church Extension Society could not begin operations better than by purchasing for the Louisiana Avenue Mission School an eligible lot. Their investment in that neighborhood would yield valuable material and spiritual results. "A hint to the wise," etc.

RALEY.—MRS. MAGGIE W. RALEY (nee McCoy) died at the home of her husband, April 6, 1894. She was born July 22, 1860, and united with the M. E. Church, South, at Clear Creek, East Feliciana circuit, under the ministry of Rev. Newton B. Young in 1877.

Consumption had early marked her for its own, and during her long weary months of sickness she bore her suffering with meekness and with the patience of one who has fully realized that beyond this life there is a better land, where there is no more pain, nor sorrow, nor weeping. When the messenger came he found her ready and waiting to put off the corruptible and put on the glorious robe of immortality. Beside leaving a fond husband, one other tie was felt binding her to this suffering life—it was the chord of maternal love for an only child. But she knew it must be severed, so resigned her trust as best she could.

Called away, as she has been, in the very prime of life, her death has left an aching void in many hearts, and we mourn for the presence which has gone out of our midst forever. Death is at all times an awful and solemn thing to contemplate. The bare abstract knowledge of the certainty that we must all, sooner or later, die is of itself sufficient to cause the heart to beat more slowly and more softly, to cause the mind to fall back upon itself with the inquiries: Whence came I? Whither am I traveling? Where must I go? But when death thrusts its dreaded presence upon us and asserts its power over the mortal part of our being by striking down one in our very midst, we are appalled. When we can see it wind its icy folds around a loved one, then more fully do we realize our own frailty. But the pathway by which she ascended to her heavenly home has been made so instrous by her dying prayers that none can doubt that she has passed "through glory's morning gate to the celestial city." May the God who took her from us so impress us by the Holy Spirit with her example that we all may live and die to the glory of our Redeemer!

Her body was laid to rest amid a number of relatives and friends, and while the wild flower and the evergreen grow thickly upon her grave, they remind us that she who lies beneath lives in an untroubled world. Funeral services were conducted by the writer.

WM. A. POWELL.

JONES—WILLIAM HUGH JONES, son of Wm. D. and Emma Adelaide Bertis Jones, was born Nov. 17, 1883, and went peacefully to sleep June 7, 1894, in McComb City, Miss.

Little Hugh will be missed not only by his father, mother, brothers and sisters, but by many who knew him as a nice, obedient little boy. He has been with the family for over ten years. The Lord has called him to that home above, where all is peace and joy and love.

May God bless each of the bereaved family, that through this affliction they may be drawn nearer the cross of Christ! M. L. BURTON.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Christianity is not an insurance operation, simply to take care of a man when he dies. It is to teach us how to live.—Rev. Dr. Meredith.

I, A. O. Hamlinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

Christ will knock at the door of your heart, but he will not come in without an invitation.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 34 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Anti-Options bill passed the House on June 22 by a vote of 150 to 86.

The House bill to incorporate the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias was passed by the Senate on the twenty-second.

Miss Frances Willard, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was given a grand reception, on June 23, at the Hotel Vendome, Boston.

Rev. A. J. Howard, Seventh Day Adventist, has been arrested at Annapolis, Md., on the charge of breaking the Sabbath by working in his garden on Sunday.

The Revenue bill ought to pass the Senate by Saturday next, according to the calculation of the managers, who have predicted it would reach the House before the fourth of July. It looks now as if Congress would be ready to adjourn by Aug. 15.

The coal miners have lost in wages now something like $2,000 000, and most of them have concluded to go to work again. The strike has accomplished just nothing at all, except to enrich the big operators, who had large stocks on hand, and got extravagant prices for them.

The tug James D. Nichol, with sixty-three excursionists and a crew numbering ten or twelve, sank at about 1 o'clock, on June 24, some three miles off the Highlands, near New York. Fifty four of those on board have been accounted for; the rest were probably drowned.

A vast and enthusiastic army of German singers took possession of New York City on June 22. The seventeenth annual meeting of the Saengerfest societies of the United States brought the members of the different organizations to the city. All day long they came from all points of the compass.

The first grand concert of the National Saengerfest, which is being held in New York City, was given on June 24 in the Madison Square Garden. The immense arena was provided with raised platforms for the accommodation of 1,200 singers, while the body of the hall was so arranged as to accommodate 15,000 persons.

When the Sunday law bill reaches the Senate Judiciary Committee of the Louisiana Legislature, Senator Avery has an amendment to propose, which is to remove the ban of the Sunday law in towns of over 25 000 inhabitants from places of amusement and where refreshments are served. As to other places of business or barter and trade it is proposed to have the full force of the existing law remain operative. It is thought that Senator Avery's amendment will prevail in the Senate and be concurred in by the House.

A special meeting of the Law and Order League in Pensacola, Fla., was held on June 24. The executive committee reported that they had called on all saloon keepers and requested them to close business on Sunday, as required by law. Two had voluntarily offered to close, and some had agreed to do so if all places of business were closed, and four or five had positively refused to close. The committee stated that they had done all that could be asked of them, and had proceeded slowly, but would now go earnestly to work to have the law enforced against all violators of the Sunday law, and if the officers failed to do their duty, the time had come for impeachment proceedings.

FOREIGN.

The new treaty between Mexico and China, by the terms of which that country throws down all barriers and encourages the immigration of Chinese, has been the subject of considerable comment in business circles of that country during the past several days, and the action of the government has been severely criticised by many.

An immense meeting of socialists was held in the Prater, Vienna, on June 24, it being estimated that fully 25,000 people were present. The object of the meeting was to declare in favor of universal suffrage, for which the Austrian workmen have been agitating for a long time. The speakers urged that the agitation be continued until the demand was conceded.

The Russian police have discovered a mine which it was intended to explode beneath the train conveying the Czar to the army maneuvers in Central Russia. The mine was on the line of the Orel-Witebsk railroad. The plot is said to be the work of nihilists. In consequence of this discovery the Czar, it is asserted, has decided to abandon his intention of attending the opening of the Memorial Church at Borkiv.

The London Post, commenting on the decrease of immigration to the United States, thinks the decrease is less due to the exclusion laws than to the fact that the west has had its day, and that the tide of emigration has turned toward Africa. The omnipotence of capital in the United States has grown into an almost intolerable tyranny, and has driven the farmer and the workman to the wall.

President Sadi-Carnot, of France, was assassinated at Lyons on June 24. The assassin leaped upon the carriage containing the President, and plunged a knife into his breast. The police arrested the assassin and took him to prison, where he told of his Italian nativity. The martyr President's remains were shipped to Paris, to lie in state in the Pantheon until Sunday next. Telegrams of sympathy were sent to the family and to the government. These messages of condolence came from all countries of the world, showing that France is not alone in her sorrow at the death of her President.

A Noted Minstrel.

M. T. Skiff, formerly business manager for W. J. Scanlan, the Irish Comedian, suffered with Rheumatism for years without relief until he bought a bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy. Two bottles made a well man of him. There are a thousand remedies for Rheumatism, but none have received the unsolicited testimonials from prominent people as shown by Drummond's Lightning Remedy. When a cure is wanted, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles of the remedy—enough for one month's treatment. Agents Wanted.

Notice.

The annual camp meeting at Rapides Camp Ground, seven miles from Boyce, La., in the pine hills of Rapides parish, will begin Aug 11, and continue to the twentieth. A number of the prominent ministers of the Louisiana Conference will be in attendance. A double daily conveyance will run from Boyce to camp ground for accommodation of visitors. The public is invited to attend.

SAM P. JONES AT NEW IBERIA.

On the night of May 29, in the Opera House in New Iberia, we heard the immortal, inimitable and irrepressible Sam Jones deliver one of his great lectures to a good house. I never saw a speaker more at ease nor an audience more delighted. But it was not the lecture that caught this hearer. That was good. Some folks like lectures better than they do sermons; others do not. We are one of the others. It was his sermon the next day, at 10 o'clock, in that grand temple of God that pleased us the most. What a handsome house the Methodists of New Iberia have built for the Lord! And all say of it, "It is a splendid monument to the worthy Rev. F. S. Parker, who had it builded for God." Those people do love "Jerrie," and they might. We are confident a greater sermon has never been delivered from that sacred desk than the one we heard by this truly great preacher on Wednesday last. We believe, had it been preceded by four or five others, by the same man, great and immediate results would have followed. As it was, under the blessings of God, only good, and much good, can follow such a sermon.

In the words of another we say: "Sam Jones tells more truth in fewer words than any man we ever heard speak." The visit of Mr. Jones was not a great success in a monetary way. But that was not his fault. He did his part nobly, not only preaching, but doing the Word, for in the collection which followed his sermon he paid twice or three times as much as any man or woman paid. If Sam Jones gets lots of money, he also gives lots. We feel quite sure in saying he goes a long way over the ten per cent. mark. How many laymen do as much?

The Rev. J. O. Bennett is the present pastor of this church. He is a clear, strong, practical preacher, and is in great favor with his people. Methododism can but prosper under such leadership. As we know, we may say the pastor is quite comfortable in a hired house, provided by the stewards of his church. So soon as the small balance on the pretty church is paid, the congregation purpose building a house for their preacher. God bless them and give them abundant success!

WEST END REVIVAL, MERIDIAN, MISS.

On Sabbath night, May 27, our three weeks' meeting closed at West End, Meridian, Miss., and it is the judgment of the people that this was the greatest revival ever known in this city. According to human judgment, we estimate the results as follows: Something like four hundred conversions and reclamations; one hundred and twenty-five accessions. Of this number West End Church will receive about one hundred, and fully thirty entered the experience of entire sanctification. These figures do not include the meeting held in Central Methodist Church.

For the first twelve days the meeting in West End was held under a tent, led by that successful and consecrated evangelist, Rev. W. M. McIntosh, who is a skillful leader of the hosts of Israel. He knows how to put the church to work and win sinners to Christ. He was ably assisted by Sisters Erwin and Mary McGee Snell, of Columbus, Miss. Much of the success of the meeting depended upon the army of faithful workers from the several Methodist Churches of the city.

The doctrines of repentance, regeneration, and entire sanctification were preached with clearness and power. Almost without exception those who labored so zealously for the salvation of souls were either in the experience of entire sanctification or were seekers of the blessing.

The last week of the meeting was conducted by Mrs. Mary McGee Snell. This great woman, so wonderfully gifted of God, early in the meeting swept gloriously into the experience of entire sanctification, and began to preach with a new power, by which she not only won all hearts, but led scores of souls to Christ. I never saw anyone wield greater power over the very hardest sinners. Some of the most abandoned men were melted by her magic influence and led by the Spirit to the feet of Jesus. Sister Snell is a Southern woman, and a member of the M. E. Church, South, and, of course, has no preacher's parchments, and does not assume the role of a preacher, but talks to the people, and in her own charming way leads them to Jesus. But the Holy Spirit has commissioned her to preach—"Your sons and daughters shall prophesy." (Acts ii, 17.)

Our pastors and people are in great harmony and love, and Methodism is fulfilling its divine mission to "spread scriptural holiness over these lands." Glory to God for what he hath done for us!

THE TENDERNESS OF GOD.

BY PRINCIPAL B. F. AUSTIN, M. A., B. D.

Of all the thoughts that come to us
On mount or plain or sea,
The thought of God's great tenderness
Brings most of joy to me.

He made the stars that shine on high,
His scepter rules o'er all,
And yet he hears the raven's cry
And marks the sparrow's fall.

Each morn his light o'er land and deep
Awakes the birds and flowers;
He giveth his beloved sleep
Thro' all the evening hours.

He paints with skill the desert flower
In most entrancing hue,
And gladdens with refreshing shower
Or with the gentle dew.

Our world speeds on at his command
Thro' boundless space afar,
And yet so gentle is his hand
The suff'rer feels no jar.

The birdlings sleep on downy nest,
Lulled by his zephyrs mild,
While earth rolls on at his behest,
Nor wakes the sleeping child.

My soul in life's drear wilderness
Would faint by cares oppress,
But for the gentle tenderness
Of him who giveth rest.

Of all the thoughts that come to us
On mount or plain or sea,
The thought of God's great tenderness
Brings most of hope to me.

To the Methodists of Louisiana.

The New Orleans Methodist Preachers' Meeting desires to bring to the attention of every Methodist in Louisiana the claims of Centenary College upon their consideration and support. Established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and ceded to the M. E. Church, South, in 1845, Centenary College has, during the nearly seventy years of its existence, made a history second to none for the character of work done in the thorough equipment and high attainments of the men sent forth. On the list of its alumni of over 300 there are found the names of men in the forefront in Church and State, leaders everywhere in the world of thought and of noble achievement, some having attained even national distinction. The roll of Centenary's presidents and professors has shown the names of men illustrious for learning, and honored as educators of commanding ability and widest influence. All the past of Centenary College is assured, and, as Methodists, we may well be proud of its record. We have now to do with the present as the foundation and prophecy of a glorious future. The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, lately in session at Memphis, Tenn., by a unanimous vote changed the conditions that had existed for years. Our Conference bounds are now limited only by the State line, so that Centenary College, always on Louisiana soil, is now for the first time within the territory of the Louisiana Conference. Louisiana Methodism has been practically made sole possessor of the college, and hence is alone responsible for its maintenance and development. Its future, therefore, is wholly in the keeping of Louisiana Methodism. Mississippi will be expected to care for Millsaps College as her own, while Louisiana has upon her a like burden for Centenary College. The logic of events leading up to the wise action of our General Conference has laid Centenary College upon the conscience and heart of Louisiana Methodism, and to them this appeal now comes.

The Board of Trustees of Centenary College, accepting with regret the resignation of President W. L. C. Hunnicutt, recognized it as altogether proper to elect as his successor a Louisiana man. Rev. Charles W. Carter, D. D., was unanimously chosen, and, having signified his acceptance, he is now president of our Centenary College. Dr. Carter needs neither introduction nor endorsement from us, for his reputation has been long established in Southern Methodism as a pulpit orator of first rank, a man of varied and accurate scholarship, and eminently fitted by natural talents and thorough training for the exalted position to which he has been called.

Prof. C. C. Wier, late president of Evergreen College, and now professor of English in Centenary College, has been made college agent. With our gifted president and live agent, and a faculty in every way competent, and led by that erudite layman, Prof. G. H. Wiley, nothing remains in order to achieve a successful and glorious future for Centenary except the prompt and hearty backing of the ministry and laity of our church in Louisiana. Surely, since providentially the situation has come to be as it is, there can be found none among us who will fail to pray, talk and do for the upbuilding of Centenary College. President Carter may rightfully expect your full sympathy and active support, and, we feel assured, he will have them. We believe that our preachers and people, acting together, can easily double or triple the attendance of boys at Centenary, and can greatly increase the present endowment. Then let it be done. God has opened before us the door of a golden opportunity. Shall we enter and, embracing our opportunity, reap the rich and glorious reward sure to come from a general, generous and unstinted support of our own and only male college? Give your prayers and give your money. Send your boys and your neighbor's boys. Take Centenary College on your heart, put consolence and life into your labors for it, and let one and all do their best to build it up. It is worth our while, and it is the duty of the hour to rally to Centenary College, and thus to the glory of God further the cause of the Christian education of the young men of our Church and State.

J. M. HENRY,
Sec. N. O. Methodist Preachers' Meeting.

W. F. M. S.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the W. F. M. S. of the M. E. Church, South, convened in Atlanta, Ga., June 8, and closed its sessions June 15. Atlanta fully sustained her reputation for generous hospitality. The good people who opened their hearts and homes to the godly women were pleased to say that they reaped in spiritual benediction more than they gave.

Mrs. Lovejoy, in behalf of the North Georgia Conference W. M. S., and Miss Wood, in behalf of Atlanta and Trinity Church, read beautiful words of welcome, to which Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, of Mississippi, responded in burning, clear tones of earnest love for her sisters of the Board.

The great auditorium of Trinity Church was filled often to overflowing with the good people of Atlanta, without denominational distinction. Many distinguished fraternal visitors were introduced, whose soul-stirring greetings added greatly to the interest of the meeting.

In this short report it is unjust to single out any; but it seems almost a duty to mention especially the helpful, enthusiastic talks of Dr. W. R. Lambuth. His display of maps and missionary literature, in conjunction with his lesson talks and explanations, enlisted the hearty approval and appreciation of his hearers. His suggestions for the dissemination of intelligent interest in missions will, doubtless, prove seed well sown in good ground, yielding a rich harvest by and by.

The missionaries present were Miss Laura Haygood and Miss Jennie Atkinson, from China; Miss Mary Brnce, from Brazil; Mrs. McClendon, from Mexico. These ladies presented the needs of their respective fields forcibly.

Mrs. Y. J. Allen was in attendance, and was ever ready to say a word for her beloved China.

An interesting visitor was Senorita Carmen Cervantes, a Mexican young lady, a convert from Durango, who has saved her small earnings for a long, long time to come east and see the wonderful women who sent her the good news. She was charmed and overpowered with the gentle, refined Christian spirit of the Board, and felt that "the half had not been told" in far, far-away Durango. When she heard the foreign secretary's report she said, with tearful voice and blazing eyes: "Do—you—hear? If you want—his kingdom to come,—you must—not only pray,—but work—work—work."

A suspicion of sadness hovered over the Board, caused by the absence of the beloved, venerable president, Mrs. Juliana Hayes. She was kept away by age and infirmity. The same reason prompted her resignation, which she said strained her heart-strings; but, with loving consideration for the mother in Israel who has for sixteen years guided the deliberations of the Board with wisdom and ability, Mrs. Hayes was unanimously elected honorary president for life.

In 1878 the General Conference allowed a few good women to organize for work in the church. It was a reluctant permission under prescribed restrictions.

On June 10, 1894, at 8 P. M., fourteen churches in Atlanta offered their altars to the W. B. M. for such ministrations as suited the women. Surely the kingdom hasteneth when "not the man, nor the woman, but the individual, is recognized as God's messenger."

It was pleasantly said during the meeting that the W. B. M. was born in Atlanta in 1878, and set adrift, the tenderest infant of the church. In 1894 the infant, well grown, a young lady sixteen years of age, returned to the place of her nativity for her debut. We would add: the W. B. M. is not seeking her debut into the hands of fashionable worldly recognition, but a woman, if you please, beyond her years in labors for her less favored sisters; gifted with many graces, and fully girded with the armor of Christian warfare; ready for her marching orders, whenever and wherever the Captain of her salvation shall say, "Go forward."

The officers elected for the next quadrennium are: Mrs. Wightman, president; Miss M. L. Gibson, vice-president; Mrs. McGavock, foreign secretary; Mrs. Trueheart, home secretary; Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, recording secretary; Mrs. McTyeire, treasurer.

Managers: Mrs. Hendrix (West); Mrs. Dowdell (South); Mrs. Higgenbottom (East). Mrs. John, Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Hamilton, Nashville.

The report of fiscal year to March 1, 1894: Auxiliaries, 3 318; Conference societies, 35; members, 72 598; amount contributed during the year, $66 008 83; missionaries supported by W. B. M., 37; boarding-schools, 12; day-schools, 40; women and children under instruction, 4 000; amount collected since organization, including money received for training-school, $889 261.99; missionaries and helpers in foreign field, 103.

Surely the W. F. M. S. has cause to thank God, take courage, and go on. The watchword for the next year is: A society, adult and juvenile, in every charge, and every woman and child in the church a member.

MRS. THOS. P. FULLILOVE,
Pres. La. W. F. M. S.

What is Equity?

The Review of Missions, for June, is before me, as is also the General Minutes for 1893.

On page 740 of the Review I see the Board of Missions assess the Florida Conference $4 300, and appropriated to it $2,403, leaving only $1 797 to be paid by the Florida Conference and sent abroad. The Louisiana Conference has assessed against it $9 000. Nine thousand dollars as against $1 797.

Now, by reference to the General Minutes, it will be seen that the Florida Conference has: Members, 20 817; traveling preachers, 164; local preachers, 162; total membership, 21 143. The Louisiana Conference has: Members, 21,114; traveling preachers, 121; local preachers, 86; total membership, 21,321.

The assessment was, doubtless, made on the basis of 5 000 additional members ceded by the Mississippi Conference to the Louisiana Conference, making a total of 26 321 members in the Louisiana Conference.

Now, let us get an item from the census. I quote from memory, and may not be accurate, but near enough to the correct figures for the purposes in hand. Louisiana has a population equal to 1 250,000. This gives over 10,000 inhabitants to each preacher. Florida has a population equal to 400,000; but the Alabama Conference has charge of about 50,000 of this number (five of the largest counties, including the city of Pensacola), leaving to the Florida Conference 350 000 population. This is but little over 2,000 inhabitants to the preacher.

Now, the question arises: If our brethren of the Florida Conference can not manage their 2,000 people without a donation of over half of the missionary assessment, how can the Louisiana Conference brethren get on with their 10,000 people without any help? Is this equity?

But again: As I understand the situation, there is very little unoccupied territory in Florida. Where we do not occupy—and in most places where we do occupy—other Protestant Christian Churches are planted, and the M. E. Church is our strongest antagonist down there.

In Louisiana there are whole parishes (counties) where a Protestant preacher is unknown. About one-sixth of the territory of Louisiana is as thoroughly destitute of religious influences as Mexico or Brazil. These unevangelized people are "foreign;" they do not know our language. We can not send our local preachers among them. In our itinerant ranks we have no one who can preach to them in their own tongue. In every sense this is a foreign population, and should be under the Foreign Board. If a few thousand Spanish-speaking people from Cuba, who are working in cigar factories in Key West, demands this patronage from the Board, why is there no demand among these tens of thousands of French-speaking people here in Louisiana?

Time and again this matter has been presented to the Board of Missions, and it is getting about time something was being done. It may be termed "treason;" but I am going to say it, and rest upon the truth for support.

This unbridled, unrebuked Roman Catholic influence is gradually driving us towards the hills. Where are the old Lafourche mission, Thibodeaux circuit, etc., which were on our Minutes years ago? Where are our churches and parsonage once occupied in this now stronghold of Romanism?

With no vicious influences—with a preacher to every 2 000 people—Florida is required to pay ten cents per member. With the most virulent opposition, and 10 000 to each preacher, Louisiana is required to pay twenty cents per member, or twice as much as Florida. Is this equity?

JAS A. PARKER.

The W. P. and H. M. S of the Mississippi Conference.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference held its first annual meeting in the Methodist Church at Ellisville, June 15 and 16. This year, as last, the members of this society were placed under the necessity of asking of some place the bare privilege of holding its session of a few hours; and this year, as last, they were compelled to repeat the request. Bro. Partridge, presiding elder of the Seashore district, and Bro. Trevillion, pastor at Ellisville, most courteously received us, and most hospitably entertained us during our brief session. The attendance was small, owing principally to the extreme youth of the organization in our Conference, and also to the very short time we had to note the place of meeting. Nevertheless, there were a few representatives beside the Conference officers, and several reports were received from societies from which no representative could be present. These, with the reports from the corresponding secretary and treasurer, show a marked growth of interest during 1893-94. We will not burden the columns of the ADVOCATE with statistics, as we will issue a brief minute in a few days. A number of new societies were organized during the year, and more money was raised than during any previous year. There were two applicants for aid for parsonages, both of which were granted on condition that some few discrepancies be satisfactorily explained. Thus, at the end of one year as a Conference organization, we have begun practically the work of parsonage building.

The society unanimously adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That hereafter no money will be donated to build parsonages unless there be: If in the country, commodious lots and convenient houses; and if in town, commodious lots and church extension plans.

The purpose is to secure houses and lots convenient and representative.

We most highly appreciated the invitation of Bro. Chambers to meet with him at Whitworth next year, and the matter was referred to the Executive Committee.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. I. N. Chatfield; first vice-president, Mrs. Janie Klein; second vice-president, Mrs. R. J. Turner; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Clara S. Cope; recording secretary, Mrs. B. F. Lewis; treasurer, Mrs. T. B. Holloman. District secretaries: Vicksburg, Mrs. J. M. Weems; Seashore, Mrs. R. L. Turner and Mrs. W. A. White; Brandon, Miss Lon Womack; Brookhaven, Mrs. E. P. Mellen; Meridian, Mrs. R. Kennedy; Jackson, Mrs. W. A. Gunning. No secretary was elected for the Woodville district because of the action of the General Conference.

After a most delightful session the society adjourned. May we ask and expect greater co-operation next year?

MRS. B. F. LEWIS, Sec.

Eloquence of Action.

BY JEAN PAUL.

So much deceit. Promising much, doing little. You say: "I'm a Christian. I believe in the triune God. My neighbor I love as myself." But professions must be seen as well as heard. That great heathen, Cicero, remarked: "I'd fare badly if my actions did not defend me more eloquently than my words." The mouth mute, and the hand full of speech, is better than the reverse. A negro, asseverating that he is a Caucasian, would awaken derision. You say, "God is my Father;" but I see not that you abound in filial love, reverence and obedience. Am I wrong if I doubt your profession? You continue, "Christ has saved me from sin and death." Does your life verify the statement? You live in sin and look upon death as the king of terror. You add, "I love my neighbor as myself." It is well, if true. But, lo! his bodily and spiritual suffering moves you not. He is sad, and you comfort him not. He has strayed from the narrow way, and you make no effort to bring him back to the fold. He sins, and you reprove him not. He is hungry, thirsty, in rags, and you come not to his relief. He is sick, and you visit him not.

My dear, let your life speak. Utterance and action emanate from the same fountain. When the latter is bitter, the former can not be really sweet. "Show me thy faith!" says the apostle. The tree is known by its fruit. Eyes and ears must be filled. "Go and show thyself to the priests," said Christ. (Luke xvii, 14.) That is significant. Show thyself in thy works. Chrysostomus says: "As God has honored us with the gift of speech as well as action, so should we honor him orally and actually." In deed and in truth. Profession and action must be in harmony with each other. Profession the text, life the sermon. Christ viewed it in that light. The disciples speak of him (Luke xxiv, 19) as "mighty in deed and word." Deed is mentioned before the word. Without corresponding action utterance is but "vox, et præterea nihil."

New Orleans, La.

Bishop Seymour's Charge.

Bishop Seymour has published an address to the clergy of his diocese, for which every lover of God's Word will be thankful. He is said to be a very "high church man;" but whether high or low, he utters no uncertain sound about the insults that are heaped upon the Holy Scriptures, and the dangers that threaten the existence of Christianity. It is some comfort, at least, to find such men coming to the front to hurl back, if possible, the audacious assaults of Higher Criticism, and to expose the foe that steals upon the flock like wolves in sheep's clothing.

"Philosophy, the higher criticism, science, falsely so-called, ambition, self-conceit, have turned men's heads and depraved their hearts until, in their blindness and folly, they invade the sanctity of the divine existence and attributes, and practically raise the question whether there is a God or not who sees us and holds us accountable to himself as our judge. . . .

"The conflict must go on. Every effort will be, nay, is now made to evade the real issue and to disguise from the multitude the foul purpose which is in reserve. We are told that the teaching of the church is indefinite; that men don't know what it is, and hence that contradictory statements are tolerated by permission; that there is no authority in the church to decide in matters of faith, and hence the inference is boldly made that every man, in the face of his vows and promises and oaths, may hold and teach what seems right in his own eyes. The Bible is openly held up to scorn and compared to the story books which amused our childhood; the articles of the creed are flatly denied in sermons by men who have just professed to God that they believe them; the offices are recited and the sacraments administered with reservations and interpretations, which reduce them to exhibitions of pretty sentimentalism or meaningless ceremonies; yea, God himself is assailed and blasphemed by charging him in the person of the eternal Son with being not only liable to go and do wrong, but with being actually full of mistakes; and the blessed Jesus is patronized with the expression which runs current from lip to lip, that 'he is divine, because he is so intensely human.' This is the frightful spectacle which confronts our eyes to-day. We have stripped off the thin disguise which craft and cunning have spread over it, that you, dear brethren, may see the enemies with which you have to deal. These are the last days, and the perilous times foretold by our Lord and his apostles are drawing near; are actually upon us. False Christs are here, and we are bidden go after them. Satan has arrayed himself in the garb of an angel of light, and comes with the softness of luxury, the splendor of wealth, the might of popularity, and the pride of worldly wisdom, and the display of science, falsely so-called, to seduce with his lying wonders, if it were possible, the very elect. 'Behold,' says our Lord, 'I have told you before.' This is his warning, as he describes what the last decade of the nineteenth century actually sees, as dread realities threatening the stability and integrity of the church and the salvation of mankind."

The Bishop is certainly right in his terrible arraignment of false teachers who abound everywhere. A clergyman of his own church recently called upon a lady, who asked him for the best book in defense of Higher Criticism, and he did not hesitate to commend Tom Paine's "Age of Reason," as containing the most conclusive and satisfactory results of Higher Criticism with which he claimed to be in hearty agreement. Such men deliberately and knowingly lie about the most sacred things, professing to believe what they despise.—The Truth.

[Methodism does not find it at all difficult to get rid of heretics of this description. Our sister church can find something worth thinking about in our methods.—EDITOR.]

Our Epworth Secretary.

The Epworth Herald, organ of the Epworth Leagues in the M. E. Church, has the following to say about our General League Secretary:

The Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has an editor-secretary. The name of the new official is Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D. That name is attached to a splendid man. He is a fine representative of the alert, progressive element in Southern Methodism. He belongs to the new era, and is one of the strongest men in the denomination. Dr. Steel was born at Grenada, Miss., and is now forty-four years of age. While yet an undergraduate of Emory and Henry College, Virginia, he was elected chaplain of the University of Virginia, where he was extremely popular with the students. He has served several of the leading churches of Southern Methodism, among which is Broad Street Church, Richmond, Va.; First Church, Memphis, Tenn.; Walnut Street, Louisville, Ky.; McKendree Church, Nashville. These fine churches have prospered greatly under the Doctor's administration. He is a clear, fluent, and forceful speaker, as those who heard his fraternal address at our General Conference in 1888 will testify. Dr. Steel is a special favorite "up North," and has been in demand for Chautauqua assemblies and other notable gatherings. He believes tremendously in Methodism and the Epworth League. Last week he lectured on Methodism in our Trinity Church, at Evansville, Ind., and several of his hearers told us that they felt about three inches taller when he got through. We predict that our friend will make a first-class editor. His style is epigrammatic and clear. His pencil has a keen point. No unnecessary rhetorical flourishes about him. We congratulate our friends upon the wisdom they have shown in picking out their first League editor, and we wish for Dr. Steel a career of splendid usefulness and success.

International Arbitration.

The resolution introduced in the Senate by Mr. Allison for a treaty between this country and Great Britain, providing that for the next twenty-five years all disputes that can not be settled diplomatically be referred to arbitration, has made a very favorable impression on the other side of the water. Three hundred members of the House of Commons have signed an address in favor of the treaty, and last week Sir John Lubbock and others cabled Messrs. Allison and Sherman to go ahead with it in the Senate. There ought to be no serious difficulties in the way of an agreement of this kind. Of scarcely less importance than the benefits that would be derived by the Governments immediately concerned, would be the moral effect that such a treaty would have upon the rest of the world.—N. W. Advocate.

THE HOUR OF PRAYER.

BY J.

The hour of prayer, best of the day,
When we may steal awhile away,
And leave behind our load of care,
And meet the blessed Christ in prayer!

Oh, sweet it is, thus with our Lord,
Securely trusting in his Word,
To hold communion, feel his love,
And every faithful promise prove.

I love to leave the world aside,
And in communion sweet abide;
Close drawn to Jesus, feel his power,
And prove his love each sacred hour.

The path of prayer our Savior trod,
And on the tree of sacred blood
Besought the Father to forgive,
And let the maddened rabble live.

Sweet hour of prayer my hour of joy,
Let me its privilege employ,
And draw from Christ, my living Head,
The hunger-satisfying bread.

Woman's Missionary Society of the Sardis District.

The seventh District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, met in annual session in the town of Courtland, Miss., on Thursday afternoon, May 31, 1894, at 2:30 o'clock. Nine o'clock in the morning had been the time set for opening, but, owing to change in schedule of the trains, the presiding officer could not reach the seat of Conference in time; so at eleven o'clock Rev. Eugene Johnson, of Batesville, Miss., preached to those present from Psalms viii, 4. At 2:30 o'clock P. M. the meeting was formally opened with devotional exercises, after which Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, of Sardis, Miss., gave an inspiring talk. Then followed a praise service, in which many, both young and old, testified to the blessedness of our holy religion, and resolved to be more zealous in the great missionary work. Mrs. T. B. Clifford was elected secretary. Following is a list of societies and reports: Auxiliaries: Sardis—Mrs. Duval; splendid report; banner society of the district. Como—Mrs. W. B. Taylor; a good report. Senatobia—No report. Pleasant Grove—Written report, showing that much work had been done. Harmony, See's Chapel, Longtown, Mastodon and Batesville—No reports. McGehee's Chapel—Miss Annie Brahan; active, energetic workers. Davis Chapel—Miss Mary Dorr; a few faithful ones, who meet regularly; they are much helped and encouraged by the male members of the church, who regularly pay dues. Pleasant Hill and Cold Water—No reports. Hernando—Mrs. Harness; each meeting is a season of spiritual refreshing; hope to continue in well-doing. Courtland—Miss Ila Hardy; regular meetings; dues paid, and also contingent fund, but not enough genuine missionary interest manifested. Juveniles: Sardis Buds of Promise—Adelaide Duval; a very interesting society, full of zeal for the work. Mary Wyatt Juveniles of Como—Agnes Taylor; will try to be faithful to the end. Harmony, See's Chapel, Cold Water, Mt. Tirzah, Senatobia—No reports. Little Builders of Pleasant Grove—Written report; not as live as formerly, but desire to arouse the indifferent ones and attain unto better things. Mastodon Gleaners—Gertie Bates; death of lady manager has materially interfered with the work. Batesville Reapers—Estelle Kinchloe; a sort of confession and promise to begin anew. Olive Branches of McGehee's Chapel—Bennie Belle Short; recently reorganized, prospects good. Lillian Malone Workers of Hernando—Written report; meet regularly, and have a full treasury. Statistics obtained from reports showed that there are 15 adult societies with 234 members, and 64 subscribers to the Woman's Missionary Advocate, and 12 juvenile societies with 301 members, and 40 subscribers to the Little Worker.

After hearing of reports a question-box was opened, and much information was obtained in the answering of these questions. Sister Hargrove urged all the societies to pay their contingent fees, and to subscribe in each case for the Woman's Missionary Advocate and Little Worker; and attention was also called to the Scarritt Bible and Training-school.

The night services began at eight o'clock, and were opened with religious exercises conducted by Rev. H. C. Morehead, presiding elder of the district. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Miss Ila Hardy, of Courtland, to the visiting adults, and by little Eva Cary to the visiting juveniles; and as those who had been selected to respond were detained at home on account of sickness, Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, in behalf of the Conference, responded in words fitting and expressive. The district secretary being absent, her annual address was read by Mrs. T. B. Clifford. It contained many facts worthy of our careful consideration, and was a strong appeal to all to greater activity in the work of Christian woman for her less fortunate sisters beyond the seas.

Many bright and attractive missionary hymns and other delightful music were rendered during the evening by the Courtland choir, and then came a soul-stirring talk from Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, teeming with rich thoughts and living illustrations, which we pray may be as good seed sown that shall spring up in many hearts, bringing forth fruit to the honor and glory of God.

After an earnest prayer by Dr. J. D. Cameron, of Senatobia, and the singing of a hymn, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. C. Morehead, and Conference adjourned sine die.

MRS. T. B. CLIFFORD, Sec.

Courtland, Miss.

Notes.

Rev. B. F. Haynes, of the Tennessee Methodist, is aggressive, if not vicious, in his attacks on Bishop Hargrove. That matter has been passed upon by the General Conference and settled for all time, and to the satisfaction of everybody except Bro. Haynes. He is pugnacious and persistent. It is to be feared that Bro. Haynes has mistaken a bad case of nervous dyspepsia for piety and for zeal for God's house. Let's let up on the Bishop and lay to on the devil and sin.

Dr. Paul Whitehead, of Virginia, has vetoed the veto of the Bishops, and has hindered somewhat in his statement of the facts, as he will find out before the critics are through with his paper. He will be enlightened on some points, if not convinced.

Rev. W. W. Wadsworth, who spent two years in Columbus, Miss., is to be the traveling companion of Bishop Galloway, on his missionary itinerary to Japan and China. No young man, perhaps, in the church is fuller of missionary zeal, or better posted in regard to the work, than Bro. Wadsworth. Bro. Masic goes with them to his native land.

Dr. Lafferty is still champing the bit over the transfer of territory to North Carolina. He foams at the mouth whenever he thinks of it. He dies harder, and kicks longer after he is dead, than any other man in Southern Methodism.

When any matter is settled by competent authority, it is silly, if not wicked, to keep on fighting over it. It is like butting out one's own brains. It is a show of courage, or of cur-rage, one hardly knows which. It is a lack of judgment.

There seems to be a prevalent disposition in both Church and State to speak evil of magistrates and ministers. This is a bad sign, and bodes no good to the cause of God and none to the government.

When any plan or method is adopted, it is the part of wisdom to make the most of it and to get the most out of it. It is then too late to criticise it and to find fault of it.

Chapters vii. and viii. of the new Discipline are the law of the church for four years to come, and they will have to be administered as they are. Whatever defects are in these chapters will be discovered best and soonest by a faithful administration of them. They are not absolutely perfect—rest assured of that. Stick to them as they are, and change them if need be when the time comes. GILDEROY.

Letter from Rev. R. S. Trippett.

[We give place to the following, although it was not written for publication. It will be of interest to many of our readers.—EDITOR.]

Rev. S. J. Davies—

My Dear Brother: Your note, of May 8, came safely to hand, and I was glad that you still bear me in mind, "although raging seas a'twain doth roar." I thank you and the "Woman's P. and H. M. S." for sending me their card as a momento to still keep up the connection of former years.

I send you a postoffice order by today's mail towards furnishing your district parsonage. I am glad our people are waking up on the subject of providing homes for their preachers. When I joined the Conference in 1845 there was not a single parsonage in the Louisiana Conference. We had to board round among the people; but what a noble set of people we had! Their hearts as big as all out of doors, and among Jew and Gentile, saint and sinner, we Methodist preachers received a hearty and cordial welcome. Good old times we had in those early days in Louisiana. In 1849 and 1850 I traveled Haw Creek circuit, which embraced all that territory north of Alexandria up to Drake's Mills in Claiborne parish, round by Little River, Holloway's Prairie, Bertrand's Prairie, Tanoook Prairie, Matthew Nugent's, Swafford's, Capt. Waters, Haw Creek, Price's Mills, Point Maigre, Marksville, cross Red river and take in Cotile, and up to Calhoun's and Mead's Settlement, and out to Hineston, and then back to Grey's Creek. This was my first circuit. I had been stationed in New Orleans before I ever went on a circuit. Bro. Harp was on the Alexandria station in 1849, and your own dear father in 1850. We had good times. I used to preach a good deal at Alexandria in those days, for then we could get a good congregation any day in the week as well as Sundays.

How I would like to make a round with you on your district, although there are not many living there now who were alive and active members in the church in those days.

I am not able to get about much. I suffer from sciatica and rheumatism so much so that I am almost helpless; but I am happy, blest with a continued consciousness of the goodness of God, and a lively sense of his divine presence. "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name."

I have just heard through the ADVOCATE of the death of Mrs. Wilkinson, Bishop Keener's daughter. May God abundantly sustain and comfort our dear Bishop and his wife in this, the hour of their bereavement, and sanctify this dispensation of his providence to our soul's good and to his glory!

I should like you to drop me a line occasionally. My heart is with you all in Louisiana. I suppose we shall have news here from the General Conference shortly. You do get the news so much quicker than we do here.

Kindest regards to my old friends. God bless you in your work of "faith and labor of love," and may you have good times, temporally and spiritually, is the prayer of your brother in Christ. God bless you and yours!

From China.

My former partner, Rev. H. L. Gray, has moved to Suchow, and is now assisting Dr. Parker in Buffington College. This leaves me alone—as to foreigners—a greater part of the time. With me are two native preachers. Both of them, as myself, are young men. I am glad to have with me those of the natives with as much energy, ability and religion as they have. The work progresses slowly. Some of the natives come until their faces become familiar, but they seem rather slow about coming into the "fold." At the Little East Gate Chapel we find the night services more satisfactory, and the congregation is larger. At night people often stay for some time after preaching, talking, asking questions and listening to explanations. But even at night there is a coming and going of the people. Naturally there are a number of questions asked about foreigners and foreign things; about which they are so ignorant. At my place within the city we have recently been having a service for outsiders on Sunday afternoon; but we begin this week on Thursday night also. This will give us seven services per week, leaving only two days, Tuesdays and Saturdays, without preaching. Since our Conference—October last—I have made several itinerating trips, one of the native preachers going with me. On going to these surrounding towns we go on the streets selling books, etc., and preaching to crowds who collect around us. Within a circle of a few miles here there are a number of towns and villages as yet unoccupied. To some of them, at least, an occasional visit is made by some one carrying books and the news of the gospel. How slow new missionaries seem to be in coming to help us—live men—that we may do a wider and better work, hastening the coming of the kingdom in the great land of China. Our Suchow District Conference convened at Nanzing, April 11. At this place Bro. Hendry is stationed. He has received probationers and members into the church, and the work has been encouraging. At the closing service, on Sunday night, Dr. Parker preached to a crowd of natives. I believe the largest crowd that we had while there.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

The Pastoral and Theological Society of Kosciusko district was in session at Sallis, June 19 and 20. Attendance good and exercises profitable. The Woman's Missionary Conference begins here June 23. Rev. Jno. Ritchey is to preach the annual sermon. We anticipate a profitable meeting.

We are receiving gratifying reports from the observance of Children's Day. Where properly attended to by pastors and superintendents, it is made a great success. Brethren, let us hear from you just as soon as you conclude the observance in your charges. Send whole amount collected to the Conference treasurer or agent, and we send the ten per cent. to the general treasurer.

Preachers are arranging for the Summer campaign of protracted meetings. Let there be withal much prayer and fasting, that we may have great revivals all through the Conference.

This scribe is doing what he can in the work assigned him. He is endeavoring to do that which is contemplated in the disciplinary colportage work. To this end he has, during this year, visited 39 churches in 33 pastoral charges; has attended 6 District Conferences, 2 Preachers' Meetings, and 1 Sunday-school Convention. He expects to be on hand at the remaining 3 District Conferences, prepared for any official or ministerial services that he can render. Let us know, brethren, where, when and how we may help you and the people you serve. We are fellow-laborers together in Christ.

G. W. BACHMAN.

Kosciusko, Miss., June 21, 1894.

Columbus District Conference.

The twenty-fourth session of Columbus District Conference convened at Crawford, Miss., on June 7, 1894; T. C. Wier, P. E., in the chair.

The first day was devoted to Sunday-school work. Several excellent papers were read, and many topics discussed which were instructive and beneficial to the Conference.

On the second day the regular order of business was taken up. All of the preachers of the district were present, and their reports showed that the financial and spiritual condition of the district was in good condition.

Visiting brethren, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Revs. S. M. Thames, J. A. Leech and G. W. Bachman, were with us. Dr. Cooper was representing the interest of Millsaps College, and in an impressive way put before us the work that it is doing. Rev. J. A. Leech was also looking after the interest of this noble institution. They took up a collection for the R. Paine Mitchell Cottage. Amount collected, $27.50. Bro. Thames had served the Crawford circuit eighteen years ago, and it was pleasant, indeed, to observe the warm welcome accorded him by this hospitable people. He said he was the agent of no school, but as Grenada Female Institute was within the bounds of his district, he told us of its healthy location and excellent educational advantages.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, as our colporteur, did excellent work in representing our Publishing House interests.

We were highly favored with good preaching by Bros. [illegible], Leech, Standifer, Thames, I. W. Cooper, Bowen, Murrah, Dorman, Bahh and Harrison. Spirituality and consistent Christian living were emphasized in every service. W. V. CONNELL, Secretary.

Mayhew, Miss.

Brookhaven District.

Since closing my second round of quarterly meetings, I thought, perhaps, it would be proper to say something of affairs in the Brookhaven district.

There are eighteen pastors in this district, and they are all faithfully and measurably successfully at work. I have been treated with universal kindness by preachers and laymen as I have gone about over the district. I find the people religious, and improving in spirituality. Some of the charges have already enjoyed revivals, and all are preparing and looking forward to "times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord."

Early in the year the district trustees appointed a Building Committee, and as a result of said action the presiding elder and family are living in a beautiful, convenient and very comfortable house. Whitworth College is located here, and is no unimportant part of the make-up of this district. I have had ample opportunity to familiarize myself with the internal workings of this noble institution. Under the presidency of Prof. L. T. Fitzhugh for the last eight years, it has done solid, honest, faithful work. Bro. Fitzhugh has of his own accord severed his relation with the institution over which he has so ably presided for so many years, and will continue his useful labors as an educator in Belhaven College for young ladies at Jackson, Miss. Rev. J. W. Chambers, a member of the Mississippi Conference, and a live, earnest, practical teacher, has been chosen to succeed Prof. Fitzhugh. Having chosen a competent faculty, the buildings, from kitchen to parlor, will be renovated, and everything will be adapted to the most successful work. Let all our Methodist friends who read this be assured that the college will sustain its good name, and properly care for and educate their girls. Send the girls to Whitworth College.

R. D. NORSWORTHY.

Fanny Crosby.

This fond name, which is so dear to thousands the wide world over, was given to a little child who was born in New York in 1823. Very tenderly the mother pressed the babe to her heart, for, although it was only six weeks old, the light was gone from its little eyes forever. By unskillful treatment the child had become blind, and the mother's tears fell fast over the sweet face as she pressed it to her bosom, and sweetly sang,

"Hush, my dear; lie still, and slumber."

Little did the mother think that some day the dear little blind child would write hymns that would be sung by millions, while her name would be as a household word in every land.

They named her "Fanny," that soft, clinging, winsome name.

Sheltered and brooded over by a mother's special love and care, when she was twelve years of age she was placed in the institution for the blind in New York City. She remained there as a student seven years, and then became a teacher in the institution. She occupied this position with great acceptancy for eleven years.

When thirty years of age, she made a public profession of her faith in Christ, and united with the Methodist Church. We hear the yearning of her soul for Jesus in her beautiful hymn,

"Pass me not, O gentle Savior,
Hear my humble cry;
While on others thou art calling,
Do not pass me by."

Her life has ever since manifested a beautiful trust and patience, while the secret of her deep spiritual vision, and the delicate breathing of her celestial thought, is found in her prayer-hymn,

"Jesus, keep me near the cross;
There a precious fountain,
Free to all—a healing stream—
Flows from Calvary's mountain."

In 1858 she was married to Mr. Alexander Van Alstyne, a former fellow-teacher in the institution for the blind. Although both are totally blind, and have never seen each other's faces, their married life is a peculiarly happy one. They are both musicians, Mr. Van Alstyne making the tunes, and his wife writing the words. She usually prepares a half-dozen or more hymns a week, and writes them out with her own hand. She possesses most wonderful keenness of touch, often recognizing her friends by the handclasp. Her hymns always speak to the heart. Thousands have found comfort in the hour of bereavement in the sweet words, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," while "Rescue the perishing" has been the inspiration of thousands of temperance gatherings.

While multitudes have shouted, with glad hearts, "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine," countless numbers on bended knees have prayed,

"Draw me nearer, nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To the cross where thou hast died;
Draw me nearer, nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To thy precious bleeding side."

It must be a great joy to have entered so helpfully into the lives of others, and it is no wonder that, as she draws near to the calm, sweet sunset of life, a glory fills her soul, and that the peace of God which is like a river is her richest reward.—Christian Standard.

Miserable Misunderstandings.

Oh, my dear friends! you who are letting miserable misunderstandings run on from year to year; you who are keeping wretched quarrels alive because you can not quite make up your mind that now is the day to sacrifice your pride and kill them; you who are passing men sullenly upon the street, not speaking to them out of some silly spite, and yet knowing that it would fill you with shame and remorse if you heard that one of those men were dead to-morrow morning; you who are letting your neighbor starve till you hear that he is dying of starvation, or letting your friend's heart ache for a word of appreciation or sympathy which you mean to give some day—if you could know and see and feel all of a sudden that "the time is short," how it would break the spell! How you would go instantly and do the thing which you might never have another chance to do!—Phillips Brooks.

Transfigured Common Duties.

You may do your daily work, whatever it be, with this for its motto, "The will of the Lord be done." And they who thus can look at their trade, or profession, and see the trivialities and monotonies of their daily occupations in the transfiguring light of that great thought, will never need to complain that life is small, ignoble, wearisome, insignificant. As with pebbles in some clear brook with the sunshine in it, the water in which they are sunk glorifies and magnifies them. If you lift them out, they are but bits of dull stone; lying beneath the sunlit ripples, they are jewels. Plunge the prose of your life, and all its trivialities, into that great stream, and it will magnify and glorify the smallest and the homeliest. Absolute submission to the divine will, and the ever-present, thrilling consciousness of doing it, were the secret of Christ's life, and ought to be the secret of ours.—Dr. Maclaren.

The Visit of the Pastor.

Every faithful pastor makes his calls as frequent as his other duties will permit, and as the best interests of each parishioner, in his judgment, requires, and it is very disheartening to be greeted on entering any door with the words: "What a stranger! We were beginning to think we should not see you again." How much better to say: "We are glad to see you, for we were longing for the time when you would have the opportunity of calling." Such a welcome opens the heart's door for any gospel message the pastor may see fit to utter.—Pulpit Treasury.

"Inconsistent men in the church?" No doubt there are; but what of it? You belong to society, which includes these same men of one faith and another practice. You find them in the same political party with your consistent self. They are citizens of the United States, as you are proud to be. They are residents with you of the town or city of whose advantages you are wont to boast. Their presence does not drive you from any of these relationships; why should it keep you from the church, where you ought to be, in duty to your God and to yourself?—United Presbyterian.

A Common Mistake.

Many people suppose that pastors have a very idle and easy time of it. The New York Observer thus comments on this misapprehension: "A story is told by one of our contemporaries of a member of a large church who said to the wife of her pastor, 'Really, what does your husband find to do? I should think it would be nice to be a minister with a good salary and only two or three hours' work on Sunday.' It so happened that her pastor had that very week attended five funerals, made forty-six calls, given four public addresses in the city, attended to a large correspondence, and had hardly had time to eat his meals because of the duties that had been crowded upon him, and was obliged to prepare his second sermon after ten o'clock on Saturday night. Perhaps only those who are associated very intimately with our busy pastors know just what they have to do."—Recorder.

Sweetness of Pleasant Speech.

It was said of Edward the Confessor that he could deny a request so sweetly that his "No" was pleasanter than the "Yes" of other people. "The love and admiration," says Canon Kingsley, "which that truly brave and loving man, Sir Philip Sidney, won from everyone, both rich and poor, with whom he came in contact, seems to have arisen from the fact that, without, perhaps, having any such conscious intention, he treated rich and poor, his own servants, and the noble men, his guests, alike, and alike courteously, considerately, cheerfully, affectionately—so leaving a blessing wherever he went." "Sir Walter (Scott) speaks to every man as if he were their blood relation," said a Scotch peasant seventy years ago of the great story-teller.—The Quiver.

Open Doors.

We stand continually before open doors which we do not enter. Often we shrink with timid feeling from the sweet ministry, holding back the sympathetic word or restraining ourselves from the doing of the gentle kindness thinking our proffer of love might be unwelcome. Or we do not perceive the opportunity to give a blessing. This is true very often, especially in the closer and more tender intimacies of life. We do not recognize the heart-hunger of our loved ones, and we walk with them day by day, failing to help them in the thousand ways in which we might help them, until they are gone from us and the door is shut. Then we can do is to bear the pain of regret having only the hope that in some way in the life beyond we may be able to pay—though so late—love's debt.—Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D.

Laugh!

There is nothing that will help you bear the ills of life so well as a good laugh. Laugh all you can. If the clothes line breaks, if the cat tips over the milk and the dog elopes with the roast, if the children fall into the mud simultaneously with the advent of clean aprons, if the new girl quits in the middle of house-cleaning, and though you search the earth with candles you find none other to take her place, if the neighbor in whom you have trusted goes back on you and keeps chickens, if the chariot wheels of the minister guest draw near when you are out of provender, and the gaping of an empty purse is like the unfilled mouth of the young robin, take courage if you have enough sunshine in your heart to have a laugh on your lips.—Chicago Post.

Work.

Seek your life's nourishment in your life's work. Do not think that all you have bought or sold or studied or taught, you will go into your closet and open your Bible and repair the damage of the loss which your day of life has left you. Do those things, certainly, but also insist that your buying or selling or studying or teaching shall itself make you brave, patient, pure and holy. Do not let your occupations pass you by, and only leave you the basest and poorest of its benefits, the money with which it fills your purse. This is the life that, indeed, "costs" the quality of the life of God." And still it is a life possible to everyone of us.—Phillips Brooks.

Several Truths.

We are postponing to another state being much of joy and peace and love—much of heaven, in a word—which is our right to enjoy here. We know more of the spirit of bondage than the spirit of adoption. God is more dreaded than loved. Christ is looked for on the throne of the universe, rather than on the throne of our hearts. The Holy Spirit lives more in theories than in our experiences. We are waiting to be kings when we get to heaven, instead of reigning as kings and conquering the world now.—Errett.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CREAM PUFFS.—Stir together in a saucepan one cupful of butter with two cupfuls flour; when well mixed add half a pint of boiling water, stir smooth, and when it boils set aside to cool; when cool add five eggs, and beat for two or three minutes; cover the bottom of a baking pan with buttered paper, and drop the mixture on it in small spoonfuls, or it can be put in muffin rings. Bake for twenty-five or thirty minutes in a brisk oven.

DELICIOUS CUCUMBERS.—A correspondent of the American Cultivator thinks cucumbers are particularly delicious prepared in the following manner: Pare and cut the cucumbers lengthwise in slices about one-quarter of an inch thick. Cut off the tough white part on the outside pieces, and soak in cold water slightly salted for one hour. Wipe dry, sprinkle each slice with a little salt and pepper, dust with flour, and roll in sifted bread crumbs, or dip in beaten eggs and then in crumbs. Fry in hot butter.

One of the most delicious of breakfast hot breads consists of hot muffins. Make them in this way: Into the beaten yolks of two eggs stir one-half cup thick cream, one-half cup milk, one tablespoon melted butter, a little salt, one-half pint flour in which has been sifted one heaping teaspoon baking powder, one-half pint boiled rice and the lightly beaten whites of the two eggs. Bake in a very hot oven. If desired, a little less flour and a little more milk may be used. Rice boiled in either milk or water is satisfactory.—Exchange.

MAYONNAISE OF SALMON.—A mayonnaise of salmon is a good luncheon dish for Summer, and is less fatal to good digestion than lobsters. To one can of salmon allow two good-sized heads of lettuce. Make upon a platter a bed of the crisp heart leaves, and cover the other leaves into small pieces with a silver fork. Drain the oil from the can of salmon, and separate the fish into flakes, taking care to reject the bones; to a cupful of boiling milk, add a teaspoonful of butter and two of flour, and stir over the fire until quite smooth. Add to this a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, and the salmon, potato and crumbs. Season with pepper and salt, and set the mixture away in a buttered dish until it is quite cold. Mold it into balls, dip them in beaten egg and then in cracker crumbs, and fry until brown. Serve on a bed of parsley, or pour a Hollandaise sauce over them.—Picayune.

HYGIENE.

Care of the Body in Summer.

Every twenty-four hours the human body loses no small amount of heat by radiation from the surface during perspiration. But contrary to what might seem probable at first thought, this loss is often more advantageous than otherwise.

In this way an escape-pipe, so to speak, is provided for the human mechanism; and just as the escape-pipe of a steam-engine is self-regulating, so, fortunately, the radiation of heat from the surface of the body is under control of the nervous system.

When the fact is made apparent to the nerve centres that the temperature of the body is getting too high, notice is immediately sent along the nerves to open wider the blood vessels at the surface of the body; with the result that the blood flows nearer the surface, the sweat-glands are stimulated to increased action, more water is excreted by them, and with the water goes off the heat.

Since it is by this means largely that the superfluous heat of the body in health as well as in disease is got rid of, it is clearly very important, especially at this time of the year, that the pores of the skin should never be allowed to become clogged.

With the increased amount of dust in the atmosphere, and its natural propensity for adhering to the perspiring body, the daily bath becomes more of a necessity during the Summer months than at any other time of the year. One should take great care, however, that the bodily temperature is reduced as nearly as possible to normal before the bath is taken. If the temperature is somewhat high, and the body perspiring freely, the danger of taking cold will be increased, by reason of the sudden congestion of the blood in the dilated vessels at the surface of the body.

Much of the advantage to be derived from sea-bathing will be lost, unless the crusts of salt which form in the pores of the skin on the evaporation of the water are removed by subsequent brisk towelling or fresh-water sponging.

Not only is the perspiration an efficient means of removing superfluous heat, but by this same channel go out many of the waste products of the body. These waste products are always relatively increased in the Summer months, and so it is doubly important that during this trying season we should keep the skin in a healthy and cleanly condition.—Youth's Companion.

Give Up Work and Rest.

Are you irritable, nervous, sleepless? Do you feel often as if you must scream? Do you find yourself clutching your hands at times in an effort to keep from giving away to an attack of hysterics? Look out, you are going the pace that kills, the pace of high pressure which is so common with the modern American woman.

Now, why do work, worry, hurry, break down people? It is not physical labor alone, or professional men and women would be exempt; it is not mental, or farmers' wives would be exempt; while the combination of physical and intellectual labor can not be the cause, else society women, who live almost entirely for pleasure, would be exempt. In all these classes victims of nervous prostration and worse ills are found.

It is lack of nerve force that causes the every-day physical and mental collapse. Nerve force nowadays is extravagantly used and insufficiently replenished. When you find yourself overwrought, your nerves tense and quivering, it is high time to stop and relax.

Tension causes a woeful waste of nerve force. What are some of its signs? Holding the arms close to the body when seated, locking the fingers tightly together, tapping the feet, jerking the head, grating the teeth, working the lips, contracting and elevating the eyebrows, holding every muscle in iron-like rigidity. This unnatural and wasteful tension is antagonistic to nature's attempts to replenish the nerve forces. It is most important that you should rid yourself of this menace to your health—perhaps to your reason.

Relax, then. Relaxation is of more value than distraction, pleasure or holidays. Relaxation means the freedom of organs and tissues from this hateful tension. How often do we hear a hurrying woman say: "I haven't time to rest. I've so much to do." Hurry and worry are physical sins. When you feel most hurried or worried, then is the time to relax.

What is relaxation? Simply doing nothing. Give up; let go; surrender the nerve forces.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Dr. A. Jacobi states in the Archives of Pediatrics that common salt should invariably be added to cow's milk when infants are fed upon it, and to woman's milk if it forms solid coagula in the bowels and is indigestible in consequence. Salt "prevents the coagulation of milk by either rennet or gastric juice."

Tomatoes.

Of course we mention tomatoes again; could hardly help it, engaged in working with them from morning till night, nearly every day preparing for market. Now, let me say once for all, there is going to be little profit in them the present year to the grower—prices have been and are still running very low.

We have predicted the crop would run much lower than in a former year. We were correct. The highest quantity we have shipped any day has been about sixteen carloads; yet with this, as we have mentioned, we are getting very little for them. The cause is not altogether satisfactory. It is in our opinion a combination of causes: the stringency of money one, and a good deal of rascality among commission men, another. In fact, some cases of the latter have been developed too plain to deny. We suppose there never has been an age in which there has been a greater disposition developed for one man to take the advantage of another than the present. We speak of this matter in a general sense. The more stringent money matters are the stronger the disposition becomes. It runs through all classes, and the trucker especially is so situated that the parties through whom he has to deal has every advantage, and there is no question—in many instances they take it. Many are writing to us especially as to the money in tomatoes. We will say, and frankly and honestly as we ever said anything, the business is getting to the point that there is no money in it. It is a costly crop if properly grown, and there has to be a good deal made out of it in order if anything is cleared. It is only a matter of time when much less of it will be grown at our point than now is. When anyone will estimate the cost of hot-beds, cold frames, the time and attention it takes to start and grow the plants in each, the fertilizer to the acre for the crop, the putting the plants in the field, the risk connected with it, the sticking, tying, pruning the vines, the gathering, assorting, packing, the cost of crates—when all of this is estimated, the time, trouble, risk and anxiety connected with it—we must say there is no money to our growers in it.

Now, some one is ready to say we are interested; we want to discourage the business. All we ask is for any honest, reflecting man to try it and report back, and he will say we have told the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. With all this, the grower has done all we have said, then sends to some market a fine lot of tomatoes as ever were grown; the merchant to whom sent sells or says he could not sell them, they were worthless, etc.: the whole matter becomes disgusting. Just such cases have and do occur every year. Again, there is no question but in some instances our shipping agents combine with the commission men. The result is the grower is completely "cleaned up"—nothing left.

There is one fault of growers in our community. They will not unite. If they would, they could to some extent remedy some of these evils. But as long as the grower leaves the matter to others to do his shipping, who ship to commission sharks, he may expect to have his nose held to the grindstone. Our best effort shall in the future be made to revolutionize our present methods as growers.

How to Treat Bones.

Bones steamed for three or four hours in a boiler under a pressure of 35 to 50 pounds, can, after drying, be readily crushed in an ordinary barley-crushing mill, and thus be rendered more convenient for use. Practically very little of the nitrogen (glue) of the bones need be thus lost.

Very good bone-meal is found in the market at reasonable rates.

Find your niche, and fill it. If it be ever so little, if it is only to be a hewer of wood or drawer of water, do something in this great battle for God and truth.—Selected.

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

The Alumni of Centenary College.

The gentlemen who compose this body occupy honorable positions in every department of life-work. Their record is not surpassed by that of the graduates of any institution. Their alma mater is proud of them. Now she needs their help to bring her up to her former position of extended usefulness. She expects much of them now, and in the future. They will not disappoint that expectation. Already they have begun to act. The president of the college is putting himself in correspondence with every alumnus whose post-office is known. The first letter, addressed to a member of the class of 1856, brought these encouraging words: "I predict greater usefulness for Centenary than ever before. I can not put you off, and have no desire to do so. No matter how great a sacrifice I have to make, I send you my note, payable on my birthday, Oct. 13, for one hundred dollars, to be applied to whatever your judgment dictates, and I hope each alumnus will do something." This gentleman resides in a distant State, and has set an example which every alumnus of Mississippi and Louisiana will cheerfully follow as each is able.

This is report No. 1 from the alumni. C. W. CARTER, President.

Strikes.

Strikes are the order of the day. Notwithstanding the disastrous results of the great coal strike upon the country at large, as well as upon the strikers themselves, another strike has been made, which seems likely to produce as direful results upon the business of the country as the coal strike itself, viz., the strike of the American Railway Union. Already business is completely paralyzed in many sections. On account of the strike the Illinois Central Railroad can not ship fruit and vegetables. This entails a loss of many thousands of dollars to some of the best communities in Mississippi. We cite this as an instance near at hand. The same condition obtains in perhaps a score of States. With the country already in a condition of financial distress, it seems to us that such strikes are silly almost to criminality. The hard times of the past year are as nothing to the hard times of the future if this state of things is to continue. But we are making progress. As a burnt child dreads the fire, so men gradually learn wisdom by their own mistakes.

The Louisiana Legislature is wrestling with the suffrage problem. So far, however, but little progress has been made towards a satisfactory solution.

On the Wing.

Having been invited by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Moore, to dedicate, on June 24, the new church which he has built at Eucutta, we left home on the evening of the twenty-second. Midnight found us at Shubuta, where the Meridian District Conference was in session. We were met at the train by Bro. S. H. Floyd, to whose home we had been assigned. Early next morning we proceeded to the Methodist Church, where the Conference opened at an early hour. The presiding elder, Rev. D. A. Little, occupied the chair; and a fine presiding officer he is—firm, dignified and order-loving, but courteous and gentle. We will not attempt an account of the proceedings of the Conference, as that will be furnished by another pen. This was our first view of the new church at Shubuta. It is a very neat structure, well located, and of ample dimensions to meet the wants of the community. The pastor, Rev. D. P. Bradford, is continuing his former record—i. e., he is in favor with his flock, and his church is prospering. Rev. I. W. Cooper, agent of Millsaps College, was on hand. He had done his work, however, before our arrival. We heard his work at the Conference highly spoken of. Rev. J. W. Chambers was also present, participating in the proceedings, and working with his usual energy in behalf of his new charge, Whitworth College. Rev. W. D Dominick, Conference colporter, was on hand with a good supply of religious literature. Rev. W. W. Cammack, our missionary to the Choctaws, was present and gave an interesting account of his work in this difficult field. We had the privilege of hearing a most excellent sermon, at eleven o'clock, by Rev. R. S. Woodward. The Conference, by unanimous vote, requested the presiding elder to take a rest during his third round on account of his health. Bro. Little has improved since we saw him a few weeks since at Meridian, but is still in a debilitated condition. The Conference did well to give him a rest. It is bad policy for a man to work when he is not well. Bro. Little is an exceedingly faithful and efficient presiding elder, and is much beloved by the preachers in his district. We would have been very glad to remain at Shubuta over Sunday, but our engagement at Eucutta called us away Saturday evening. The pleasure of our stay in Shubuta was heightened by the generous hospitalities of Bro. and Sister Floyd. Model hosts they are.

Leaving Shubuta in company with Bro. W. W. Moore late in the afternoon, we drove to Eucutta, ten miles distant, before night. We were domiciled under the hospitable roof of Bro. Leggett. The congregation on Sunday surpassed the capacity of the building; quite a number failing to get seats. After the sermon a collection was taken to liquidate a small balance due on the building. The requisite amount was raised in a few moments, and the house was formally set apart for the worship of Almighty God. This was also commencement Sunday for Eucutta Institute, a flourishing school under the efficient presidency of Prof. J. M. McNeil. The choir furnished excellent music for the occasion.

Eucutta is a new field for Southern Methodism. The Congregational Methodists have occupied the field for years, but have accomplished very little. Two years ago that incarnation of enterprise and push, Rev. T. L. Mellen, projected a new charge, with Eucutta as a center of operations, and appointed as its pastor Rev. E. T. Breland, who did efficient work, laying a good foundation for his successor, Bro. Moore, under whose skillful leadership the work is developing beautifully. The Eucutta Church is a good substantial frame building. It is completed except painting and the erection of an altar. It is in the midst of a very prosperous community. We predict a bright future for our church at this point.

Our College Outlook.

It will be gratifying to the friends of Millsaps College and the cause of Christian education in Mississippi to learn of the very successful term just completed and the encouraging prospects for the future. We had an increased attendance over the previous session, and the work accomplished was far more satisfactory. Having a somewhat extensive acquaintance with collegiate institutions, it gives me special pleasure to say that, considering its short history, Millsaps College, in thorough organization, wise administration, efficient instruction after the best modern methods, excellent discipline, and high moral tone, ranks deservedly with the foremost. We have a well selected faculty, young, ambitious, progressive, religious, good, professionally trained. During the term not a serious case of sickness occurred in the student body, evidencing the healthfulness of our location; and there was no occasion for severe discipline. It will be difficult to find a more moral and studious body of young men. From that number I expect to see some take high position in life and exert wide influences for good. What can be more interesting, if not inspiring, than to watch the splendid development of gifted young men! Than to see the unfolding of infinite possibilities—the gradual fulfillment of divine prophecies written on brow and brain and heart! I am profoundly grateful for such associations and observations. To be in constant contact with such young life and radiant promise strengthens faith in the future of God's church, and makes one's spirit retain its yonthful fervor and fire.

It was cause of great regret that Prof. Patillo, on account of failing health, was compelled to sever his connection with the college. An accomplished gentleman, a thorough instructor, an accurate scholar, a beautiful character, a consecrated Christian is Nathan A. Patillo. We all wish for him restored health and length of days and large usefulness.

Prof. Black, who, for two years, has been in charge of the sub-freshman department, resigned in order to enter pastoral work, to which he has consecrated his life. Conscientious, faithful, laborious, cultured, he carries with him into another field the highest respect and heartiest well wishes of his associates in the faculty and Board of Trustees.

The places thus made vacant have been filled by men of reputation and fine scholarship. Dr. Moore, for eleven years the professor of mathematics in Southern University, succeeds Prof. Patillo. For the preparatory department we have elected two men—Prof. R. S. Ricketts and Prof. L. E. Bailey. I need not speak a commendatory word of Prof. Ricketts in Mississippi and Louisiana. His work at Port Gibson and Whitworth Colleges for twenty and more years attest the character, attainments and aptness as an instructor of a man as accomplished as he is modest. I have long thought that my honored friend's proper place was a chair in a male college. We are fortunate in securing him as head-master of the preparatory department. Prof. Bailey will be his associate. For two years he has taught successfully in the graded school at Jackson, and had been unanimously elected for another term. The trustees kindly released him, however, in favor of Millsaps College. Thus organized, we offer improved facilities for next year. Prof. Ricketts and family will have charge of "Asbury Hall," our largest boarding-house, and under his immediate care a number of the students will find a pleasant Christian home.

Additional arrangements will be made for cheap board. Those desiring to live in "clubs," and thereby reduce expense, will be able to do so. In this way several young men passed through the last term at almost a trifling monthly cost. It is our purpose to give opportunity to such laudable ambition and manly self-denial to be well equipped for the work of life.

The college grows in public favor and confidence. One honored friend, whose open hand has already generously blessed us, has given $500 to further equip the science department, another has given $250 for one of the cottages, while multitudes are giving smaller sums, all of which are to be duplicated by the beneficence of Major Millsaps. Dr. Cooper, the active agent, reports cheeringly from every point in the State. He thinks there will not be less than two hundred students in attendance next year. We have reason to think it by no means an extravagant estimate.

Two of our professors are spending the Summer at the Chicago University, prosecuting their professional studies. Another will return for awhile to Johns Hopkins University to complete certain work, and take his Doctor's degree. Thus it will be seen we have a progressive faculty, abreast of the times, and consecrating their choicest gifts and highest attainments to the upbuilding of our college. Young men entering these halls will have assurance of thorough instruction and the best Christian care and culture. For the really remarkable history of this young institution and the prospect for a brilliant future, I give grateful praise to a generous Providence.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.
Jackson, Miss., June 23, 1894.

Vested Rights.

District Conference organized. Presiding elder asks how business shall be conducted. A motion is made to conduct by committees; but Conference decides not to have committees. Business proceeds to close of session without them. At the beginning of the next session presiding elder announces committees, and gave as his reason that the power to appoint them was a vested right. Now, the question to which an answer is desired is, Has the presiding elder such right after the Conference determined otherwise, as above stated?

Please answer in ADVOCATE.

The above comes to us from an esteemed brother in one of the patronizing Conferences. Usage is not uniform in regard to the appointment of committees in District Conferences. Sometimes committees are appointed, and sometimes they are not. Sometimes committees are appointed on motion of a member of the Conference, and sometimes the chair appoints the committees without a motion. We do not know that the question of authority in the matter has ever before been raised in precisely the shape which it here assumes. There is no law on the subject, and, as usage has not been uniform, we are unable to give a categorical answer. We shall have to delve among the authorities on Methodist ecclesiastical law before we can give our correspondent any light on the subject. We incline, however, to the opinion that the right to decide whether committees shall be appointed, or whether the work shall proceed without committees, inheres in the District Conference rather than the chairman.—EDITOR.

Leper Legislation.

The Louisiana House of Representatives has passed a bill appropriating $5,000 for the erection of a leper hospital and $10,000 per annum for its maintenance. The management of the institution is vested in a Board of Control, four members of which are appointed by the governor and the other three by the mayor of New Orleans. The manner in which they shall exercise their authority is prescribed in the bill. The institution is to be let by contract. We like the bill with the exception of the last-mentioned item. We are decidedly opposed to the leasing system of caring for unfortunates. We see no reason why lepers any more than other classes of diseased humanity should be turned over to a contractor. Still, the system provided for in this bill will be a vast improvement on the present system.

BOOK NOTICES.

OUR CHILDREN. By Atticus G. Haygood, Sr. 16 mo. 212 pages. (New edition.) 1894. 80 cents. Nashville, Tenn.: Southern Methodist Publishing House.

We are glad to see this new edition of Bishop Haygood's "Our Children," which was first published in 1876, and which, on its appearance, elicited widespread commendation. It has had a large circulation heretofore, and ought to have a still larger circulation now that Sunday-school work has attained such importance among us. Bishop Haygood's words of wisdom concerning child-life, and the influence affecting it, ought to be in the hands of every parent and teacher in the land. Parents of every creed—in fact, all those who have charge of children—would be greatly profited by reading this eminently practical book. Pity it is that so many parents think they have discharged their duty to their offspring when they have fed and clothed them and put them in school. No one who reads what the author has to say about the significance of childhood would be apt to think lightly of the work of training the young. As the reader proceeds a stronger sympathy for the joys and sorrows of childhood is awakened, and he feels that he must study childhood nature in order rightly to understand it. The new edition contains only "Part First" of the original.

THE STORY OF METHODISM. By A. B. Hyde, S. T. D. 8 vo, 927 pages. (Revised and enlarged edition.) 1894. Springfield, Mass.: Willey & Co.

We take pleasure in commending the above-mentioned work to the public because of its many points of merit. It is what the name dictates, a story of Methodism, not a comprehensive history for study. Hence tedious details are omitted, only the more important facts being dwelt upon. Methodist history is full of facts of the most interesting character. These the author, who has had exceptional advantages in the way of reading and observation, has woven into a most readable and instructive narrative. It contains just such information as all Methodists should know, and much that all Christians might profitably know. The various branches of Methodism have each received due notice. The author has, we think, given a fair and impartial account of our own Southern Methodist Church, although we should have liked it better had more been said about our branch of Methodism. The sketches and portraits of our Bishops and of other prominent Southern Methodists add no little to the attractiveness of the volume for Southern readers. To the young people of the Methodist world the volume is especially valuable. There is appended an interesting account of the use and progress of the Epworth League, which is now no small part of American Methodism. The book contains over 600 illustrations, all of which are gotten up in the perfection of the engraver's art. The style is so clear and entertaining that most of those who begin the Story will be sure to read it through. The type is large and clear. Being well printed and well bound, the volume presents an attractive appearance. The book is sold only by subscription. The seventieth thousand is now on the market.

Anti-Miscegenation.

Louisiana has at last placed herself abreast the rest of the Southern States by passing an Anti-Miscegenation law. Good! While we favor giving the colored man all rights consistent with the public good, we are unalterably opposed to a mixture of races. All history teaches that miscegenation tends to deterioration.

NOTES.

We abridge our Home Circle Department this week to make room for field notes.

***

Rev. Geo. D. Parker preached an excellent sermon Sunday night at Louisiana Avenue Church.

***

Rev. G. G. Smith, of Macon, Ga., will publish soon a book entitled, "How to Make a Sermon."

***

What is the matter with the Pacific Advocate? We have not seen a copy of it in several weeks? Has it cut our acquaintance?

***

The Epworth Board denied the right of the Book Committee to name the Epworth paper, and changed the name to the Epworth Era.

***

The degree of D. D. has been conferred on Rev. James Campbell, editor of the Texas Advocate, by Granberry College—an honor worthily bestowed.

***

At the recent commencement of Hiwassee College the degree of D. D. was conferred upon our worthy friend and brother, Rev. J. A. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference.

***

Rev. J. W. Malone, the new president of Grenada Female College, has removed to Grenada. Let correspondents take note. The prospects for the Fall session are decidedly flattering.

***

The Supreme Court of Louisiana has heretofore held its sessions at different places in the State. The Legislature has just passed a law requiring that its sessions shall hereafter be held in New Orleans.

***

Rev. J. W. Boswell, D. D., has been elected assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate. A better selection it would have been very difficult to make. We congratulate Dr. Boswell and the church.

***

Mrs. Juliana Hays has resigned the presidency of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and her place has been filled by the election of Mrs. M. D. Wightman, widow of Bishop Wightman.

***

Bishop Hendrix passed through the city Saturday, en route to Baton Rouge, where he was to preach the commencement sermon for the A. and M. College. We regret to have missed seeing him.

***

We worshiped last Sunday morning at Parker's Chapel, where we had the pleasure of listening for the first time to Bro. R. H. Wynn. The congregation have reason to be proud of their promising young pastor.

***

We note that a revised and greatly enlarged edition of Rev. J. A. Parker's recent book, "The Church: What It Is, and Whence It Is," will be out Sept. 10. The first edition has been exhausted. We are gratified to learn of the success of this meritorious volume.

***

We learn that the congregation at Parker's Chapel, on last Sunday evening, heard a very edifying discourse by the Rev. Hubert Knickerbocker, of the West Texas Conference. Bro. Knickerbocker is on a visit to his parents in this city, and is accompanied by his excellent wife.

***

A prominent member of one of the patronizing Conferences writes: "The ADVOCATE ought to please everybody." An esteemed sister who is active in every good cause says: "I could not do without the ADVOCATE. It is a feast to my soul." Similar commendations are coming to us continually.

***

The pulpit at Carondelet Street Church was filled last Sunday night by Rev. T. C. Carter, son of Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D. The sermon was a clear and forceful presentation of the gospel, and was withal impressively delivered. We think our young friend will be an eminent success in the pulpit.

***

Rev. P. A. Johnston, presiding elder of the Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, has been sojourning in the Crescent City recently. He has been taking a vacation for a few weeks, his District Conference having requested him to do so on account of his health. His vacation, however, does not take his mind off his work. While resting from the usual routine of a presiding elder's work he is thinking and planning for his district. He is especially desirous that his district shall do something handsome for Centenary. So mote it be.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2 25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to June, '95.

Gone Home.

At the request of Miss Maggie Gramlin I herewith publish the death of her father, A. D. Gramlin, of Eustice, Fla., and formerly of Meyersville, Miss. He died, June 16, 1894, of rheumatism of the heart. He was a prominent member of the Methodist Church, and always ready to respond liberally to the calls of his church. He expressed himself as ready and willing to die. While we deeply sympathize with the bereaved family, we rejoice in his triumphant death. F. M. WILLIAMS.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Should Women be Rich?

That question is about as sensible as to ask, Should woman breathe? Of course, they should be rich and especially in health. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC will make them rich, too, in curing them of Uterine Troubles and complications, such as weakness, irregularity, suppression, nervousness, anæmia, chlorosis, prolapsus, etc. It is a health builder!

As we must render an account of every idle word, so must we likewise of our idle silence.—Cranmer.

For Headache and Indigestion
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

A prominent physician of Buffalo, N. Y., says of it: "I have severe headaches, and it relieves them. I am fond of the pleasures of the table, and as a consequence of my indulgence there, I have to pay the penalty. It divides penalty with me. Indeed, it is an indispensable article to me."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE SEVEN CRIES OF JESUS ON THE CROSS.

(Luke xxiii, 34-46; John xix, 26-30; Matt. xxvii, 46)

1. "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

(1) Sinners know not what they do when they reject Christ.

(2) Evil-doers know not what they do when they persecute the followers of Christ.

(3) The wrongs we suffer from our fellow-men are the outcome of their ignorance. Pity them. Forgive.

2. "To-day thou shalt be with me in paradise."

(1) Death-bed repentance possible. May be genuine. Yet "when the devil was sick," etc.

(2) "To-day." This establishes the doctrine of conscious life in an intermediate state.

3. "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

(1) Christ was forsaken, in order that we might be found.

(2) The Master forsakes not his followers. "Lo! I'm with you alway."

4. "Woman, behold thy son," etc. Christ, providing a substitute for himself, teaches indirectly that children owe their parents not only respect and obedience, but also, when necessary, material support.

5. "I thirst."

(1) We thirst for a deeper work of grace. "As the hart panteth after the water brooks," etc.

(2) Thirst for souls. Said Bishop Heber: "Give me India or give me death."

6. "It is finished."

(1) The Master's self-denying mission.

(2) The plan of salvation.

7. "Father, into thy hands," etc.

(1) God's hands the safest depository. Consign to them life, possessions, reputation—your all.

(2) Our spirits must return to God who gave them.

(3) That is a happy death when God is at the bedside. Dying, while praying.

"N. B."

The next Union Epworth League meeting will be held at Felicity Street M. E. Church, South, July 12, instead of Craps Street, as previously reported.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. M. Beard, P. E., West Lake, La., June 27: "With the pastor, Rev. F. G. Hocutt, I have been holding a successful meeting here for the past three days. The crowds have been large, and there have been a number of conversions and accessions to date. The work prospers in all its departments, owing to a faithful pastoral administration."

Rev. J. M. Cowan, Sharon, Miss., June 27, 1894: "Yesterday eve, about 4 o'clock, we buried the youngest daughter of Sister D. M. Wiggins. The funeral services took place in the Methodist Church at this place. Rev. L. S. Jones, of Canton, was present and made beautiful and very touching remarks upon the life of the deceased. The Mississippi Conference (I know) will sympathize very much with Sister Wiggins in the loss of one so dear."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., June 27: "Our last Children's Day service for Warren circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, was held at Bradley's Chapel last Sunday. We had a delightful day indeed. A large crowd, program well prepared and carried out nicely. An address by pastor, a good collection ($9.30), and an abundant dinner of the very best the country affords. Bro. McBroom, Sister Dunn, Miss Annie Bell, and others deserve great credit for the entertainment of the day. The little children sang delightfully. Mr. Editor, we have raised $47 75 on Children's Day. Who can beat that? Let them speak out."

Rev. J. B. King, Madisonville, La.: "'Surely our lines have fallen unto us in pleasant places.' We have closed a meeting of four days in our neighborhood, and the good Lord was with us in all his saving power. Twelve children and one adult were baptized. Four united with the church. Bros. D. C. Rawls and Leslie Alford were with us and did some fine preaching, such as sent conviction to the hearts of hard-hearted sinners. Miss Maria Parker gave us some fine music on the organ, which added greatly to the interest of the congregation. I think, Mr. Editor, that we will soon have a fine church organized at this place. Pray for us. God bless the editor and all the readers of the dear old ADVOCATE."

Rev. W. S. Shipman, P. C., Greenwood, Miss., June 27: "The long drought has been broken by refreshing showers. Yet some parts of this country have not had rain for about 10 weeks. Our church is doing fairly well. Financially, we have no trouble at Greenwood. We paid our foreign mission assessment, $200, more than three months ago. Presiding elder paid in full to date. The parsonage folks are never forgotten. The people of Greenwood are very thoughtful, and we would have them know that we appreciate all their kindness. We hope the laymen as well as the preachers of the Winona district will attend our Preachers' Meeting here on July 10. Mr. Editor, can't you come. We expect a good time and a large attendance."

"Any Port in a Storm."

That's a good maxim, but it will not work as a rule in the purchase of a remedy for Rheumatism. Any of the cheap nostrums will not effect a cure—in fact, none of them will. Get Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy, and a speedy cure is certain. One bottle is worth a hundred of anything else, and for that reason it is the cheapest when a cure is wanted. HOME CIRCLE.

Keep Close to Your Children.

BY ALICE HAMILTON RICH.

Blessed is that man or woman who never ceases to be a child! There is no better cure all for physical ills; no cosmetic like it for wrinkles. For the young old man or woman there are still what I call trinkles—love wrinkles which laughter and good-fellowship gather into corners of eyes and mouth.

Who often see the child and the grandsire companions, but there is no reason why there should be a gap between—a long waiting for extremes to meet. Side by side mother and daughter, or father and son, or vice versa, may journey through life. The smooth pebble the child picked up from the bed of the brook is as worthy the attention of the father as the gold which in sweat of brow and strain of nerve he mines from the busy mart; and that childish hand holding the pebble may slacken the tension of nerve and wipe the sweat from the brow, while together they marvel over the bit of stone which the water, like a cunning workman, has made into a polished stone, no less a jewel that man has not put upon it a market value. The true value of things is not always gauged by the man or woman. The child long ago found the philosopher's stone which turns the baser metals into gold. Alas, that man reverses the process, and the true gold becomes the baser metal, and the wine of life the poison of death! The further we get from childhood the greater distance between ourselves and God. It is quite common for us to speak of Jesus as a lover of children, but do we not forget that God had the father and mother heart? May I be permitted to say that childhood was in the heart of God from all eternity.

Suppose we were to enter a house, knowing nothing of the inmates, and should find in every room something dear to the hearts of children; in the parlor pictures of children, flower fancies, heads of animals, and in a corner a child's toy; in the library children's books, as "Grimm's Fairy Tales," "Alice in Wonderland," or "Timothy's Quest;" in the dining room, on the sideboard, a silver cup, marked "D. A. R., from papa," and a baby's bib folded in a napkin ring. Climbing the stairs we enter a nursery to see in one corner a swinging basket cradle, and a double crib, with its two downy pillows, and perhaps tumbled spread; would we need to be told there were children in the house? Would we not be certain that a father or mother heart, probably both, had prepared all things, beautiful and needful, for the children? God's world is a heaven for children. Men and women may pick flaws and quarrel with the creation, forgetting or ignoring the blasphemy of which they are guilty; but the child finds perfection, satisfaction, in cloud-land, earth-land, the water-ways, with their creature inhabitants, and almost infinity of productions, mineral and vegetable. Could the mind of God have planned all these without the thought of the child, who most perfectly enters into the kingdom of God? No wonder Jesus, who knew the heart of his Father, said: "Of such is the kingdom of God." He did not say "of my kingdom," but "God's kingdom;" yet we may remember also his words: "I and my Father are one."

Are we teaching our children, are we remembering ourselves, the tenderness, the lovingness of God? Have I wandered from my subject, "Keep close to the hearts of your children?" I think not.

Man of business, living in office or store until home is scarcely more than a memory; woman in society, with children turned to the arms of a nurse for love as well as care; student of theology, seeking evidence of a divine revelation, as if the Creator needed human hands to certify of the existence of a God; woman of affairs, which term covers a multitude of good things as well as needless anxieties and worries—come home to the hearts of your children. It may be, ere you are aware, that you may find an answer to the question of Job, "Canst thou by searching find out God?"

When mother and daughter, father and son, are ready to sit down together, learning of each other the things each one is best fitted to teach, reverently drawing nigh unto God, "the peace of God which passeth all understanding" will brood over and find a nesting-place in our hearts and homes.—Selected.

Unselfishness Overdone.

In the story of "Philip and His Wife," in the Atlantic Monthly, Margaret Deland says of one of her characters: "Alicia's special form of selfishness was unselfishness. This immoral unselfishness is characteristic of many excellent women. They practice an abnegation of their comforts, their rights, their necessities, even, which they feel endears them to their Maker, and at the same time gives them real happiness." The same writer argues that if it is selfish for others to accept a sacrifice, it is a sin for the unselfish person to make it.

Close kin to this abnormal unselfishness is a lack of proper self-assertion, and these two things do more harm in the world, and even in the church, than they commonly get credit for. First, they injure the modest or loving martyr who allows herself, or himself, to be overshadowed by others' interests or weighed down with others' burdens. There is a species of over-modest and over-amiable self-renunciation which amounts almost to self-obliteration—a kind of suicide. You have no right to blot out your personality, to cancel your own individual force and influence, to efface your own will. We ought not to be too weak or modest, or even too unselfish and loving, to assert our rights when not to do so is more likely to hinder than help those for whom the sacrifice is made.

For, secondly, this self-suppression and over-sacrifice nearly always injures others. Burdens are blessings by which God educates and develops us. If you take as your own a burden which belongs to another, you rob him of the needed discipline. It is a sin to do that which will dwarf and cripple your child, that which will make your husband or wife less lovely in character, or cause your neighbor or fellow-church member to be less strong and faithful. If your unselfishness nurtures selfishness in others, you are sinning against others. Sometimes fathers, and still oftener mothers, do lasting injury to their children by taking on their parental shoulders burdens which the children ought to bear. Such loving and self-denying, but over-indulgent parents often make their sons and daughters selfish and inefficient, and often ruin them.

In almost every family, or working circle, or church, one or more such willing and uncomplaining bearers of everybody's burdens are found. And laziness and inefficiency are ever ready to pile their neglected duties on the backs of such self-suppressing workers. Thus, as Mrs. Sangster says in a late article, "one culpably unselfish person may foster selfishness in others until he, or she, weakens their characters and develops in them a degree of sordidness and a lack of generosity as pitiful as it is painful."—Selected.

A Field for Mothers.

It is in America that we find boys and girls smart beyond their years, and with more nerve tissue than they know what to do with. The little folks remind one of adult age; we may well call them "little men and women." They already know too much; they are active in temperament because they can not be otherwise; and even before they are grown they will be rushed into society. The world around them moves fast, and they are racing along with it. The child eats at his father's table, takes the same food and drink, and it will be well if he does not have a similar smoke after each meal. Before he reaches manhood he will have laid the foundations for dyspepsia; and his little sister will not be a great way behind him.

Now, a practical question in this connection is what the mothers have to do with it. We hear a great deal of what women are doing in science, literature, art, invention, and other fields of human industry. This is well; but who is studying the physical well-being of the next generation? Bones and muscles, and the bodily tissues generally, are made from the food we eat; and they are often badly deteriorated and the blood poisoned, either by taking food which is not suited to the needs of the system, or that which is spoiled with condiments. Surely here is a field for mothers. Let them see to it that the young and growing child is not injured for life by any fundamental errors in its dietetic habits. No doubt the taste for strong drinks, tobacco and many forms of dissipation is too often acquired in the home and at the family table. Mothers, it is to be feared, do not sufficiently realize the importance of this subject, nor the close connection which exists between the tastes acquired in early life and the habits which persist in later years.—Demorest's Magazine.

A Young Man's Chances.

A mother who now sends out a son into the business world launches him at a time when the chances are all in favor of a young man, writes Edward W. Bok. Business men are never more willing to place large trusts upon the shoulders of young men than they are to day. "Young blood," as it is called, is the life of the modern business world, and is everywhere sought. In New York the demand for the right kind of young men in all capacities is far greater than the supply, and what is true of New York is true of all the large cities. Bear in mind, however, I say the right kind of young men, and by that classification I mean young men who are willing to work, and work hard. The day of the young man who works by the clock, eagerly watching for the hour when the office shall close, has gone by, even if it ever existed. Hundreds of young men are energetic in a new position until its novelty wears off, and then become mere machines, whose places can be filled at a day's notice.

No mother need have undue anxiety for the success of a son who this Autumn or Winter steps out into the business world, so long as he bears in mind a few essential points:

He must be honest above all things, and allow nothing to convince him that there is a compromise between honesty and dishonesty.

He must be an out-and-out believer in the homely, but forcible saying that "a man can not drink whisky and be in business."

He must, too, decide between being a society man or a business man. He can not be both.

He must make his life outside the office the same as in it, and not be possessed with the prevalent idea that his employer has no business to question his movements outside of office hours. An employer has every right to expect his employees to be respectable at all times in the office or out of it.—Exchange.

What Made Baby Cross.

"Mama, I wish you would call the baby in; he is so cross we can not play," cried Robert to his mama one day, as he was playing in the garden with his sister and the baby.

"I do not think he would be cross if you were not cross to him," said mama, coming out. "He does just as he sees you do. Just try him and see. Put your hat on one side of your head."

Robbie did so, and presently the baby pushed his straw hat over on one side of his head.

"Whistle," said mama. Robbie did, and the baby began to try to whistle, too.

"Stop mocking me," said Robbie, giving the baby a push. Baby screamed and pushed Robbie back.

"There, you see," said his mother, "the baby does just as you do. Kiss him now, and you will see how quickly he will follow your example."

Robbie did not feel exactly like doing this, but he did, and the baby kissed and hugged him back very warmly.

"Now, you see," said his mother, "you can make a cross baby or a good baby of your brother, just which you choose. But you must teach him yourself."—Selected.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. Ritchey, Winona, Miss: "Rev. W. M. McIntosh began a meeting at Winona, May 20, which lasted thirteen days. The church was packed from the beginning—some days more than could even get near the house. Results: about 150 conversions and reclamations. We received 46 into the Methodist Church, 12 were received into the Baptise Church, and the other three churches will receive some. About 75 gave their names to join some church."

Mrs. Emma R. Witt, Lake, Miss.: "We observed the third Sunday in June as Children's Day. The programme was carried out to the letter. The children performed their part beautifully. The floral decoration was lovely. Bro. W. W. Cammack gave us a beautiful address—subject: 'The Pure in Heart.' It was fresh and full of good things, both healthful to the soul and strengthening to the intellect. The collection was good. It was taken by two little girls. The music led by Miss Weaver was charming. Our Sunday school superintendent, Bro. W. M. Thornton, is unrivaled in that office. Order is perfect under his rule. His rule is love. He brings brightness into the school, and draws his teachers and scholars warmly to him."

Rev. Jas. G. Sibley, Columbia, Miss.: "Columbia circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, promises to hold its own even amidst the troubles and difficulties with which the State has had to contend for a year. The White Caps organization now seems to be completely broken up, though the courts are not yet through with them. I am glad to say that as far as I have been able to learn there is but one White Cap who is a member of the Methodist Church, and it is an easy matter to see how he became involved. Very soon now I begin my revival meetings, and with very good prospects of success. The general interests of the church are equal to the same at this date of previous years, notwithstanding the disturbed state of society and the stringency of money. Though after saying this I must say we are sadly in need of a revival of pure religion all over the circuit. But this I fully expect to see ere this season is over."

Rev. T. L. Mellen, Wesson, Miss.: "The protracted meeting conducted by Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, of Columbus, Miss., closed last night, June 24. Results: 22 accessions, about 100 conversions (including church members), and over 100 backsliders reclaimed; 8 or 10 family altars erected; 4 infants baptized; 2 young men confessed the call to preach, and 2 young men offer themselves for foreign mission work, and nearly the whole membership revived. Such a revival was never seen in Wesson before. No one who heard Sister Snell, and witnessed the evidences of God's approval on her work, doubts her divine call to the work she is doing. I never saw sinners more profoundly convicted nor clearer conversions, nor more decided instances of entire sanctification. Our people were unwilling to let her go, but duty called her elsewhere. Our prayers go with her. Whenever she can return a cordial welcome awaits her."

Rev. T. W. Adams, Moss Point, Miss.: "On June 5 we closed one of the most powerful meetings ever held in our church here. It lasted fifteen days, and resulted in many conversions, twenty accessions to the church membership, and a general building up of the interests of the church. The preaching was done by Rev. Robert Selby, Rev. F. M. Keen, Rev. D. O. Byers and the pastor. The most of the preaching was done by Bros. Keen and Selby. Their preaching was 'good to the use of edifying.' The result of the meeting shows conclusively that the presence and work of 'traveling men' are not indispensable to revival work. Under the blessings of God pastors can and will hold, if given a chance, successful meetings. Our newly repaired and improved church and parsonage are houses of great comfort and beauty. We have spent $1,000 in the work, and everyone thinks it a wise investment. The church-building is by far the handsomest one in South Mississippi. We are advancing on all lines of work, and hope to accomplish much in additional development between now and Conference."

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present to their easy-going doctor, separate diseases, for which he prescribes, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse, by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have promptly cured the disease.

Mrs. HARRY TAPPAN, of Reynolds, Jefferson Co., Neb., writes: "For two years I was a sufferer. A part of this time had to be carried from my bed. Was racked with pain, had hysteria, was very nervous, no appetite and completely discouraged. A few bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' effected a perfect cure." Sold by all dealers in medicines.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. S. S. Holladay, DeSoto charge. June 14: "Our protracted meeting closed here a few days ago, which lasted twenty-one days. Many bright conversions and twenty-six accessions to the church. Bros. H. W. Bowman and G. R. Hughes, of the East Texas Conference, assisted us. The Lord was with us in great power. The church is alive and at work. Sister Alexander visited us, and organized a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. We are praying for a revival and expecting one at each appointment soon. We are among a kind and appreciative people. Pray for us."

"Layman," Jeanerette, La.: "Owing to delay in receiving programs 'Children's Day' was not observed until June 10, at which time the M. E. Church at this place was tastefully and artistically decorated with great profusion of evergreens and flowers; around the altar being a huge bank of snow white magnolias, while a beautiful bow of flowers, emblematic of 'the promise,' stood upon a table just in front of the pulpit. Upon this table stood a miniature ship representing the good ship Zion on a missionary trip to our foreign Sunday-schools her deck well loaded with nickels and dimes, the offerings of our boys and girls and their friends. The exercises were very interesting, comprising nearly the whole program printed by our Publishing House, which was well rendered by the children. The songs were very sweetly sung, and recitations well delivered. An appreciative audience enjoyed the novel service, this being the first time Jeanerette had ever celebrated 'Children's Day.' To the patient drilling by the pastor's wife, organist and lady teachers of the Sunday-school is due the success of the day."

Rev. N. G. Augustus, Okolona, Miss.: "Began a meeting in my church here on April 29. Rev. J. C. Parke, of Houston, preached a week for us with great acceptability and success. Then Rev. L. G. Boggan, local preacher of Tupelo, preached for us two weeks. Bro. Boggan is an earnest, tearless Bible preacher. He preaches salvation from sin as the purpose of God in Christ for men. I know no man of greater promise of usefulness to the church. I made 195 pastoral visits during the meeting, prayed in all the homes of my church, and visited the men of Okolona in their places of business, urging them to interest themselves in religion. After my meeting of three weeks Rev. J. S. Weaver, of the Cumberland Church, preached a week in the Baptist Church. Four came into my church during his meeting. We report thirty-three additions, family altars erected, growth in the Sunday-school, and revival in nearly every department of church work. We have a fine League and Sunday-school, and an increase of interest in the prayer meeting. Okolona has been 'dry' since Jan. 1, leaving Aberdeen the only 'wet' town in East Mississippi. But Monroe will vote 'dry' this Summer."

Rev. N. B. Norwood, P. C., Lower Coast Mission: "We have just closed a protracted meeting at Wesley. The preacher in charge tried to get help from the brainy New Orleans preachers, but failed. Bro. Van Valkenburgh, the 'one hoss' preacher and book agent, hearing of my needs, left his business and came to us full of the Holy Ghost and power, and the good Lord blessed his labors. He came preaching a full salvation that is complete deliverance from sin. The message was heard and carried conviction to the consciences of the Christians, and as a result many set about seeking his glorious experience. Some have realized its fullness; others are still seeking it. The church is greatly revived, some souls converted, backsliders reclaimed, some joined. This preacher does not care much to have people join the church in the way it is frequently done: gathering all sorts, putting their names down, and that is the end of it. Our church rolls are encumbered with hundreds of names of people who know nothing of Christ. We have some lukewarm and dead members down here who would not be awakened by the blowing of Gabriel's horn, and I judge we will have to cut them off. As the result of our meeting: prayer meetings revived, young men's prayer meeting organized, also children's prayer meeting, and a general shaking among the dry bones in this dark valley."

P. R., Woodland, Miss.: "Amite circuit is situated in the piney woods, and has given good timber to the M. E. Church, South. Bro. Young, now in charge of North Wilkinson circuit; Rev. Nathan Roberts, of Greensburg circuit; Bro. Geo. Anders, in charge of East Feliciana circuit, and Rev. Denson, another itinerant preacher, hail from this circuit, and were licensed in Woodland Church, of which I want to tell you. Two young local preachers are now preparing themselves—one at Millsaps, the other at Lebanon, Ohio—for entering the itinerancy soon, while a third one does the same at home. Although the membership is poor in mouby matters, spiritually it is well off. On June 10 we celebrated 'Children's Day.' The old church—thanks to the ladies' committee—was beautifully decorated with flowers and green arches. Rev. Jerome Whittington opened the exercises with prayer and songs of praise. Recitations, essays, etc., followed. Children from three years up took part in the reciting. A sumptuous dinner was then spread for all, and after partaking of it, the audience was addressed by Bro. Wiley Roberts—the above-mentioned local preacher—on temperance; by Rev. Jerome Whittington, and the pastor, Rev. W. P. Jones. Although the weather was unfavorable, the old church could not hold all the visitors, and doors and windows were crowded by those who could not gain entrance. This was a gala day for old Woodland and neighborhood. God grant that the work of our Sunday-schools may result in bringing many precious souls to Christ. Collection, $4.85."

NUTTALL—STEIN.—At the residence of the bride's father, New Orleans, Thursday, June 21, by Rev. J. M. Beard, Mr. Dewitt J. Nuttall and Miss Julia G. Stein.

OBITUARIES.

EASTERLING—On the first day of February, 1894, there died in Bogue Chitto, Miss., one who by her gentle grace and unassuming goodness had endeared herself to every resident of the little village, who was held in highest esteem by a large circle of acquaintances, and was most warmly loved by those who knew her best. During the many years of her residence there the modest, godly woman had come to be looked upon with almost filial affection by the young people, and to the older members of the community she was a trusted, valued friend.

From her childhood a devoted Christian and an ardent Methodist, she was the preacher's friend, and many a member of the Mississippi Conference, whether her pastor or some transient visitor, has found a welcome in her hospitable home. The life of such a woman is a blessing to any community, and her death a common loss. The salient points of such a life may soon be traced; but who can measure its fullness, worth and beauty?

Susannah Graves was born in Simpson county, Miss., June 14, 1832. In her girlhood she was converted and joined the church. One who knew her most intimately says: "From her childhood she was a sweet, true Christian." When sixteen years of age she was happily married to Duncan B. Easterling, and into their home were born ten children, of whom eight are still living. In 1884 the family moved to Bogue Chitto, where, on the first of October, 1885, the husband and father died, and where the widow and her five younger children continued to reside.

In July, 1886, the writer of these lines became acquainted with the family, and from this time was a not infrequent visitor to their pleasant home. He has never entered a happier family circle. Here maternal affection and filial love held uninterrupted sway, and by their gentle influence banished every angry word and ungenerous thought. Three daughters and two sons, by their watchful care, seemed to anticipate the mother's slightest want, while the mother, with that gentle authority which was born of loving confidence in her children and a recognition of the respect due her from them, seemed at once to govern and serve. Never robust, the mother's health began to fail, and about a year before her death she became so weak as to be kept almost constantly in bed, and from this time her children, with alternating hope and fear, watched her failing strength until after months of patient suffering she fell asleep.

It is a privilege to have known this noble woman. She was a pronounced and faithful friend, and an unusually wise and devoted mother. Her heart seemed to know no unkind thought, and her tongue was singularly free from ungenerous words.

No greater blessing can be prayed for those who mourn her death than that the memory of her beautiful life may, by the grace of God, reproduce in them the virtues that adorned her character. A. F. WATKINS.

REW—Mrs. ELIZA J. REW, daughter of Charles and Mary R. Hooks, was born in New Hanover county, N. C., Sept. 21, 1818; moved with her parents to Marengo county, Ala., in 1834, where she was married to E. J. Rew, Feb. 21, 1839. They shortly after moved to Lauderdale county, Miss., and settled seven miles south of Meridian. To them were born nine children.

Sister Rew professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at seventeen years of age. Well educated, she grew to be an elect lady. Her life as pure as the grace of God could make it; and she possessed faith that never wavered. Confined to the house most of the time for two years, and to her bed for five months, she was always cheerful and talked about death like one who had conquered. Her Christian life is seen in her six living children—all honored members of the Methodist Church. Her bereaved husband waits in hope. Her last words were: "Children, why are you crying? I am so happy." She fell on sleep at six A. M., May 19, 1894.

Her funeral was preached by the writer to a large audience of white and colored from St John xvii, 4: "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do;" and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Sageville, near where she lived so long and well.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the ground is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while the pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A disastrous fire occurred in Brooklyn, N. Y., on June 29. The loss was over $1,000 000. Two men were killed and two others were injured by falling walls.

The American Federation of Labor threatens to take a hand in the great railway strike now paralyzing travel if the strike is not settled within a few days.

The French colony in this city, in memory of the late President of France, held services in St. Louis Cathedral, on July 1, simultaneously with those proceeding in Paris. About six thousand people attended the requiem.

Captain Kerkam's official record of the thermometer's fluctuations on July 25 put the temperature far above the top notch as far as New Orleans weather is concerned. The maximum reached was 99 degrees, which is nearly 2 degrees higher than that of Saturday.

The congressional committee which has for some time past been investigating the frauds connected with the furnishing of armor plates to the government, for use on the naval vessels, has pushed its inquiries with great industry, with the result that the whole nefarious business has been laid bare.

Acting Postmaster General Jones held a short conference with Attorney General Olney, at which the movements of the strikers were discussed. It was decided to rigidly insist upon carriage of all mails, and to prosecute all who interfere with postal transportation.

Mr. Jones, on the part of the Tariff Committee, will offer an amendment to the sugar schedule reducing the amount of bounty to be paid on the crop of 1894-95, and putting the duty into effect on the passage of the bill. The protests of the Louisiana senators against the change did not deter the committee from resolving upon the change.

A boycott was instituted by the American Railway Union last week against the Pullman cars, and indirectly against almost every railroad system in the United States; for almost every railroad system is under contract with the Pullman Palace Car Company to haul their cars, and a boycott of the Pullman cars is equivalent, therefore, to a boycott of almost every railway in the country. It appears already to have been established on most of the roads running out of Chicago, St. Paul, Indianapolis and San Francisco; all the Chicago roads, and the Northern Pacific, the Santa Fe, and the Southern Pacific being the systems already attacked.

FOREIGN.

Mr. Gladstone has positively decided that he will not be returned to Parliament again, and his party has decided to run Sir Thomas Gibson-Carmichael for his seat.

The Minister of the Interior has ordered a stricter watch than ever to be kept over the safety of Emperor William and imperial family, especially when traveling.

A workman has been arrested in the vicinity of Premier Crispi's house, having been overheard to threaten the life of the premier. When searched a large knife was found concealed upon his person.

The election of M. Casimir Perier to the presidency of France has been welcomed on all sides as a fresh augury of the maintenance of order. It is recognized in Berlin that France has for the first time since the death of Thiers a real statesman in the presidential chair.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures nightsweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

The remains of the late President Carnot, the murdered chief magistrate of France, struck down by the hand of Sanio Cesario, the anarchist, at Lyons on Sunday last, were deposited in the Pantheon, on July 1, by the side of the remains of his grandfather, Lazare Carnot, the "organizer of victory." The funeral was made the occasion for one of the most remarkable civic and military displays in the history of France.

A Noted Minstrel.

J. M. T. Swift, formerly business manager for W. J. Scanlan, the Irish Comedian, suffered with Rheumatism for years without relief until he bought a bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy. Two bottles made a well man of him. There are a thousand remedies for Rheumatism, but none have received the unsolicited testimonials from prominent people as shown by Drummond's Lightning Remedy. When a cure is wanted, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles of the remedy—enough for one month's treatment. The great Tower Bridge in London was formally opened on June 30 by the Prince of Wales in the name of the Queen. It has taken eight years to build it, and has cost the corporation over $5 000,000. London's new tower bridge is near the famous old tower of London, and connects Bermondsey, Walworth, Camberwell and Peckham, on the south bank of the Thames, with the western part of the old city, on the north bank.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

There is many a rest on the road of life,
If we only would stop to take it;
And many a tune from the better land,
If the querulous heart would wake it.
To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the wintry storm prevaileth.

Better to hope, though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
When the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Nor an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There's many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown,
Or the miser's hoarded treasure;
It may be the love of a little child,
Or mother's prayer to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart,
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snap the delicate silver threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then heaven blame for the tangled ends,
And sit to grieve and wonder.

Commencement at Mansfield, La.

The occasion opened June 17 with a sermon by Rev. J. L. Pearce, of Shreveport. His text was I. John v, 4, "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." His argument showed how man rose in the scale of being, by going out of himself, by looking forward to a future, by taking hold of that which was higher, and by trusting in a superior power. The immense audience listened with close attention as the preacher built up his theme to the culminating point. The sermon did great good, and implanted grander ideas of life in the minds of the listeners.

The night sermon, by the same preacher, was an awakening sermon, not ought to be long remembered by all classes of hearers, as it depicted the hopeless condition of the lost, and how easy it was to drift into such a condition.

Monday night the Primaries had a fine showing before an immense audience. The exercises were of a high order, no nonsense, but every performance was intended to show the training and the capabilities of the participant. The drills of the little folks were performed without a single break, with exactness and precision, entertaining the audience to a high degree, and was pronounced unexcelled by any previous occasion.

Tuesday night brought the pupils' annual concert, and it was a great occasion, presenting a splendid showing of the work done in the music department, and sustaining the high reputation this school has always maintained in the department of music. The program was varied, showing exact training, skillful execution and charming expression, and impressed the large audience with the fact that there were better facilities in the study of music to be found elsewhere in the South. The recitations of Miss M. Belle Fraser, of Mansfield, and Miss Lucy L. McGowen, of Jeanerette, La., gave evidence of marked elocutionary powers. The statue scene of the latter, turning into marble under dazzling calcium lights, was exquisitely beautiful. There was not an objectionable feature in the whole entertainment.

Wednesday brought the graduates to the front; everything was bright and cheerful. The decorations were elaborate and tasteful; the whole stage was a fairy scene of festooned cedars, flowers, green leaves, and beautiful pictures. After prayer by the Rev. R. J. Harp, and music exquisitely performed by Miss Fannie Parsons, of De Soto, the original composition by Miss Etta Elder, of Natchitoches parish, was read on the subject of "The Part That Woman Plays." It was a very sensible composition. Its fair writer said she knew that America was the best country in the world, because there were more good women here, where cultivated women rule, than anywhere else on the globe. Miss Sarah Fraser, of Mansfield, La., followed with an ably written essay on the "True Sources of Enjoyment." She showed that she knew where they were. She alluded to Coxey's army of industrials, and said that the road to happiness did not seem to lead to Washington, and that she was glad the Southern people did not join in the craze, but stayed at home and tilled the soil—after all, man's best friend. The Misses McVoy performed a grand concert on two instruments, perhaps the most intricate and difficult piece of music ever put upon this stage. The audience appreciated the exquisite execution.

The baccalaureate by the president, A. D. McVoy, was chaste, classical, appreciative, replete with fine and striking points and strong thought joined to tender feeling and wise counsel.

The diplomas were presented to each of the graduates with an appropriate proverb, which was quite a striking feature.

The president of the Board, Rev. R. J. Harp, announced that the Rev. A. D. McVoy had been re-elected for the third time, and would continue to guide the destinies of the institution. The applause of the audience during the announcements by Rev. R. J. Harp touching the action of the Board in its efforts to maintain the high standard of this school, gave gratifying evidence of the great esteem in which the Mansfield Female College is held by our people as a factor of inestimable good; and along this line Rev. R. J. Harp said many good things for the college, bespeaking for Dr. McVoy a liberal patronage and hearty support.

Prof. Geo. Pickles has had charge of the mathematical and chemical department, than whom it is difficult to find a more able and successful teacher. Miss Mary Ivey has ably managed the English and belles lettres department, and Miss Fannie Rives had won great praise among the kindergarten folks. The art display of this time-honored institution was, indeed, brilliant. This department received, as it richly deserved, the highest commendation of praise. The exhibition of paintings has hardly been excelled in the history of the institution. The fine class of subjects, the exquisite finish of the pieces, showed that no ordinary hand had been at the brush.

There has been for the past two years a local male annex attached to the college. This has been abolished, and only females will be admitted in the future. An effort will be made to canvass thoroughly the whole State, and we hope to receive an increase of patronage. Methodists of Louisiana, here is your school; the only female college in the bounds of the Louisiana Conference worthy of your patronage, and, doubtless, better than many institutions to which some of you have been sending your girls. For beauty of location, good cistern water and health, the Mansfield Female College can not be excelled by any institution in the South. Accessibility and other advantages claim a favorable consideration of the patronizing public. Send along your daughters, and we will do them good. A diploma from this college is a passport to the highest circles of cultivated society. The attendance has been 108 this year. Let us double it next year. Respectfully,

A. F. JACKSON, Sec.

The John A. Ellis Memorial Cottage.

At the late session of the Seashore District Conference, Dr. I. W. Cooper asked that a committee should be appointed to consider the advisability of undertaking to build a cottage on the campus of Millsaps College, to be named the John A. Ellis Memorial Cottage; and if deemed advisable, to devise means for raising the funds necessary to build. The committee asked for was appointed. At organization the writer was elected chairman, Rev. C. F. Emery, secretary, and Bro. John A. McLeod, treasurer. Dr. Cooper met with the committee, and stated that two gentlemen, living without the bounds of the district, had given $500 ($250 each), to be used in building the cottage; and proposed that the Seashore district should have exclusive rights to the cottage if we would raise the remaining $500 necessary to complete the building. The committee heartily accepted the proposition, and asked the chairman to appoint all help he should need in the work of collecting the $500. The committee further requested the chairman to make an appeal to the Methodists and all lovers of Christian education in the Seashore district to aid in this important and good work. Let everyone take this as a personal appeal to help. If you can not contribute largely, send any amount, however small it may be. The committee feel that it is perfectly reasonable to expect, at least, 200 persons to send $1 each in response to this appeal. The amount asked for must be raised by July 15. Send your contributions to Mr. John A. McLeod, Purvis, Miss., who is the treasurer of the committee.

There are two objects in view in this enterprise. One is to aid the deserving poor young men of the district in procuring an education by furnishing board at the cottage at the lowest possible figure—at the actual cost of things furnished. Dr. Cooper stated that board on this plan would not exceed $8 a month.

The other object in view in building this home is to honor the name of Rev. John A. Ellis, than whom the Mississippi Conference never had a nobler and purer member. His last work as presiding elder was in charge of this district, and his last pastoral work was in charge of the most prominent station in the district—Moss Point. How fitting, then, that we should, with loving hearts, build this home to honor and perpetuate the memory of his name!

My charge, Moss Point, leads off with $200. I think the subscription will reach $225.

I hope every collector will faithfully push this matter, and collect as much as possible. Let everybody do his duty.

T. W. ADAMS.

Moss Point, Miss., June 25, 1894.

Seashore District Conference.

The Seashore District Conference convened in the beautiful and hospitable little city of Ellisville on June 13. Nearly all the preachers of the district were present, there being but four absentees. All seemed to be in good health and spirit. The reports, which were elicited under the several heads—Spiritual State of Church, Sunday-schools, Mission Work, etc.—were full and interesting, showing, in some instances, that advanced ground had been taken. Quite a number of fine meetings have been held, resulting in many conversions, reclamations and additions. Under the head, Spiritual State of the Church, one sad fact, big with danger, was evoked—the very small number of family altars among us, lamentably few being reported. The Sunday-school question was fruitful of two inquiries: Is the Bible used in our schools? Why do not our children attend church services and Sunday-school in larger numbers? To the first of these questions came the answer: It is not. The Book has been displaced by lesson papers and else, with but few exceptions. To the second query the answer seemed not so readily to be found, though nearly all, I think, were agreed that the trouble lay in the parents not exercising proper authority and compelling their children to attend, and also in their failing to set the example for the children. A lame attempt was made to fasten this responsibility or blame upon the preachers; but it was not, nor can it be, proven that the fault is in any sense theirs.

Observance of the Sabbath was quite freely discussed, the discussion having been provoked by some strong resolutions on that subject offered by N. B. Harmon. The main feature of these resolutions was the condemnation of travel on railroad trains, and the sale of entrance tickets to the Seashore Camp Ground on the Lord's day. These resolutions instruct the newly elected trustees of the camp ground from this district to oppose such sale of tickets. The trustees are: Dr. E. F. Griffin, J. S. Dantzler, Jno. A. McLeod, and J. S. Turner. The above-mentioned resolutions carried.

Our district parsonage received some attention, and, as a result, a separate Board of Trust was appointed, composed of the following, i. e.: L. N. Dantzler, Sr.; Jno. A. McLeod, S. J. Johnson, R. J. Turner, and J. S. Turner. Furnishing, repairs, etc., of parsonage was all placed in the hands of this committee, in conjunction with the presiding elder.

A most delightful episode of the Conference was the introduction of Mrs. J. B. Chatfield, president of the W. P. and H. M. S. of our Conference. Mrs. Chatfield took the chair and gave us a most interesting programme, the main features of which was a paper by herself and an address by Bro. B. F. Lewis. The ladies were assured of the sympathy and hearty co-operation of our district in their "labor of love."

Millsaps College, vigorous child of prayer and persistent effort, was strongly represented by Dr. I. W. Cooper. A sense of pardonable pride and of deep gratitude to God pervaded all hearts when Bro. Cooper, in impassioned words, told of the grand equipment and noble work of our college. A plan was consummated by which our district might contribute to the erection of a memorial cottage to Rev. Jno. A. Ellis, of precious memory, for the occupancy of poor boys struggling for an education.

Whitworth College was ably represented by her new and strong head, Rev. J. W. Chambers. He assures us that none but strong talent, supplemented by earnest Christian character, will be employed in the college. We have abiding faith in this promise.

Bro. T. B. Holloman was with us in the interest of East Mississippi Female College, and made a strong speech in support of its claims.

These reports from our schools brought out three facts prominently, i. e.: They are fully equipped for the work; the teachers and professors are experimental Christian men and women; the expense to students is as small as any, and much less than many. With these facts before us, there is absolutely no excuse for our people patronizing other institutions, to say nothing of the question of disloyalty in their failure to do so.

The general verdict is, that the preaching done at this District Conference was above the average of such occasions. It was plain, pointed, practical. No effort at display was apparent. The truth was simply and vigorously stated. Such presentation of God's Word must bear fruit, and it will tell in the lives of those who heard it.

All in all, the Seashore District Conference of '94 was a most delightful occasion. The preachers were all happy and joyous, and everyone in Ellisville seemed to have opened the fullness of their noble hearts to us.

May the Holy Spirit continue to baptize presiding elder and preachers, and may the remaining months of this year roll up a grand and noble record for the kingdom of our God in this part of the Master's vineyard!

Alexandria District Conference.

The Alexandria District Conference convened in annual session in the town of Colfax, La., at 9 A. M., June 21, 1894. The presiding elder, Rev. S. J. Davies, was in the chair, presiding to the satisfaction of all, laying particular stress on the religious services. Three of the traveling preachers were absent; a fair attendance of lay delegates. The reports from the preachers show advance along all lines of church work. This session of the Alexandria District Conference was a good one from first to last.

Delegates elected to the Annual Conference: H. H. White, H. G. Goodwyn, Noel Norwood, and J. B. Pickels. Alternates: Daniel Brewer and Robert McGymsey.

The following resolutions were adopted, and, on motion, the secretary was requested to furnish the ADVOCATE with copies for publication:

CHURCH PUBLICATIONS.

DEAR BRETHREN: We, your committee, to whom was committed the subject of church publications, respectfully report:

1. That we find the circulation of our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, to be very small in proportion to the membership of our church.

2. That a great number of the present subscribers are in arrears with the office.

3. That although there is some dissatisfaction relative to the conduct of the paper, in the main it is heartily endorsed under the present management.

Your committee respectfully recommends the adoption of the following:

Whereas, A good, sound, healthy church paper is of great benefit in the dissemination of pure religious principles; And, whereas, The ADVOCATE is fully up to the required standard; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we heartily recommend the ADVOCATE to all of our people as an eminently useful paper, and in every respect worthy a place in every family.

Resolved, That we urge delinquents within the bounds of this district to pay their bills to the ADVOCATE.

Resolved, That we urge those who are not subscribers to invite the ADVOCATE to make its weekly visitations to their homes.

Resolved, That we are well pleased with our Sunday-school literature, and respectfully recommend its adoption in all our Sunday-schools in preference to any and all others.

Resolved, That the Nashville Christian Advocate is a most excellent central organ of our church, and that we recommend it to those who take more than one paper.

THOS. J. UPTON,
H. G. GOODWYN,
GEO. MCPHAETER,
Committee.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Whereas, We recognize the importance of education, and especially Christian education; And, whereas, Methodism has ever been famous for her interest in education; And whereas, Centenary College, located at Jackson, La., is now the sole property of the Louisiana Conference, and by an action of the last General Conference is embraced in its territory; And, whereas, We, as ministers and laymen of the Methodist Church, have in our vows promised to support her institutions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we put forth every effort to induce our people to send their sons to this excellent Christian college.

J. E. DENSON,
H. G. GOODWYN.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

Whereas, Methodism has, from its very inception, favored education both of an intellectual and moral character; And, whereas, The Louisiana Annual Conference has, in its wisdom, established Mansfield Female College; And, whereas, Said college is the only college of said Conference for the education of our daughters; And, whereas, Said college has already accomplished much good, and has the facilities for the accomplishment of much more good; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we heartily commend said college to our people, and earnestly entreat our people to patronize this institution by sending their daughters thereto.

Resolved, That we endorse the president, Rev. A. D. McVoy, and commend him to our people, and cordially invite him to our respective charges to represent said institution.

THOS. J. UPTON,
J. B. PICKELS.
J. I. HOFFPAUIR, Sec.

Meridian District Conference.

The Meridian District Conference convened at Shubuta, Miss., Thursday, June 21, at 10 A. M., and adjourned on Saturday, June 23 at 3 P. M., giving the members and visitors time to reach their homes without excuse for Sunday train running. D. A. Little, P. E., was in the chair as presiding officer during the entire session, and held the reins with firmness, fairness, and tenderness.

The first day, by previous announcement, having been set apart for the discussion of the Sunday-school and its varied interests, the carefully prepared programme served to make the entire day one of interest and profit. The presiding officer, at its close, expressed great pleasure at its marked success, and urged much Bible study and prayer in the home.

The attendance of preachers and laymen was about equal. An absence of written reports and statistical blanks made a true inventory along all lines since last District Conference impossible.

Committee on State of the Church in district noted an increased interest in the importance of family religion, and in some charges a decided advance in Christian liberality.

The little patronage given our church literature, and our Conference organ especially, was deplored.

The recent revivals held in the churches of Meridian were noted as ones of power, and with the increased membership deserved special emphasis.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: L. P. Brown, T. P. Bell, D. S. Harmon, W. S. Davis; alternates: H. H. Turner and T. C. Harmon.

The following preamble and resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote:

Whereas, Our presiding elder, D. A. Little, has been in bad health for some time, and has not thoroughly recovered, and we think a rest will most likely perfect his health; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we give him the time enforced in his third round of quarterly meetings, and that each pastor be requested to hold his own quarterly meetings, and to send the elder pro rata of the collection for the support of the ministry.

Resolution of thanks to the generous homes of Shubuta, the M. and O. R. R. and the local railroad agent, were adopted.

The following brethren were present as visitors, and represented their respective interests upon the Conference floor: Revs. W. C. Black, NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth College; T. B. Holloman, president of East Mississippi Female College; I. W. Cooper, agent of Millsaps College; W. D. Dominick, Book Concern, Jackson, Miss.; W. W. Cammack, missionary to Choctaw Indians. Rev. I. W. Cooper, despite hard times and warm weather, raised in cash $77.85 for the Jno. A. Ellis Millsaps College "Cottage Fund."

The new church edifice at Shubuta, in which the Conference was held, is a modern building, and its entire furnishings evidence business care and much taste. D. P. Bradford, preacher in charge, seems to have a hold upon his people, and they give one of the most essential evidences of spiritual growth, viz: praying to God.

The Conference, upon the whole, showed preachers and laymen a debt of gratitude to God for what had been done; yet the great unmet needs of the district demanded deeper consecration and more vigorous work.

L. P. BROWN, Sec.

Grenada District Conference.

The twenty-fifth session of the Grenada District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, met in the Baptist Church at Abbeville, Miss., June 28, 1894; the Rev. R. A. Burroughs, P. E., in the chair, and presided during the session with ease, dignity and satisfaction. Fourteen of the traveling preachers out of seventeen were present—only sixteen laymen; but we had enough to do the work. All the interests of the church on all lines in the district were looked after carefully, and the reports brought out by the different committees showed we are advancing on all the lines. The temperance cause is front.

The Rev. J. W. Malone, president of Grenada Collegiate Institute, was with us looking after the interest of his work. He is full of bright prospects and great expectations of much success.

The Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D., president of Millsaps College, and Dr. I. W. Cooper, agent of the college, were present with their families, speeches and collections for Millsaps. Bro. Cooper being an old settled preacher, it will not make him vain, so I say here that he preached a fine sermon at the Conference. The sermons were all good, preached by several of the boys.

Bro. G. W. Bachman, our Conference colporter, was present with his robust body and many good books and church papers, ready and willing to sell to the people; and he was having some success, but not so much as he would have had if there was plenty of money in the country and no strikes.

The attendance on the Conference and religious services was good all the time. The good people of Abbeville showed us much kindness in taking good care of us during our stay with them.

Mr. Editor, we expected you, but you failed to show up. We thought, perhaps, it was on account of the big railroad strike. I heard one brother say that he was very sorry you failed to come, for you was hooked to preach for his folks on Sunday, and he was out of soap. I suppose you know how one feels when out.

Bro. B. P. Jaco, the pastor of Abbeville circuit, is in high favor with his people. They say he is doing well.

Dr. R. W. Jones, L. Lake, J. S. Collins and J. J. Honston were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

The next session of the District Conference will be held at Duck Hill.

"Temperance Education."

New Jersey has just passed a Temperance Education law similar to that which has already been enacted in a number of other States. The act requires that "the nature of alcoholic drinks and narcotics shall be taught in the public schools and taught as thoroughly as other like required branches; that the space in the text-books shall be as great as that required for other subjects; that after January, 1895, no teacher who has not passed a satisfactory examination with reference to these subjects shall receive a certificate."

THE CELESTIAL BANK.

BY REV. JOHN NEWTON.

I have a never-failing bank,
A more than golden store;
No earthly bank is half so rich,
How, then, can I be poor?

'Tis when my stock is almost gone,
Or I without a groat,
I'm glad to hasten to my book
And beg a little note.

Sometimes my Banker, smiling, says:
"Why don't you oftener come?
And when you ask a little note,
Why not a larger sum?

"Why live so niggardly and poor,
Your book contains a plenty;
And when you draw a one-pound note,
Why don't you draw a twenty?

"Yea, twenty thousand ten times told,
Is but a trifling sum,
To what your Father has laid up,
Secure in Christ, his Son."

Since then my Banker is so rich
I have no cause to borrow;
I live upon my cash to-day,
And draw again to-morrow.

Sadly Misinterpreted and Dangerously Applied Scriptures.

BY REV. J. W. ELLISON.

MR. EDITOR: Whom did you ever know to be troubled about a doubtful interpretation of Scripture? Every passage of Scripture, whether related to others, or independently stating a truth, has one true meaning. Every person ought to be anxious to know that meaning, and be dissatisfied with mere guessing—"private interpretation"—until the true meaning is found.

Peter says one thing that should be considered by every Bible reader, viz.: "Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation." (II. Peter i, 20.) Romans viii, 38, 39: "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels," etc., is interpreted as the stronghold of the doctrine of permanency in grace; or, as the common phrase has it by Baptists, "Once in grace, always in grace;" or Presbyterians, "The final perseverance of the saints"—both of which mean the same thing to them. What is the meaning of the passage as used by Paul? Did he, in Romans or anywhere else, introduce the subject of permanency in grace? If so, where and why?

All unlettered Baptist people so apply the passage to support the idea, "Once in grace," etc. Educated Baptist preachers so use it. Presbyterians, who somewhat boast of an educated ministry, so apply it, and many of our own people feel this pressure in the absence of the true meaning.

I am not surprised at anything an ignorant man may do, for he has nothing but his prejudice to guide him; but I am amazingly astonished to see educated men, men of the ministry, display such carelessness, if not recklessness. The position taken by the Jews was that God had elected all Jews to salvation, and that all Gentiles were reprobated to eternal damnation; hence they, as a race, were "set at naught" by the Jews, and denied the gospel and refused a place in the church. Any Bible student, after reading the New Testament through, will see the above-named facts.

Furthermore, Paul declares that his call to the ministry was for the special purpose of preaching the gospel to the Gentile race; defending their rights as set forth in the Scriptures of the prophets, as promised by God, and to give them every assurance by scriptural testimony that they were elected unto salvation to everything arising from this "love of God, which was in Christ Jesus our Lord," equally so as were the Jews. For them he claimed the right of having the gospel preached to them. Romans i, 5: "By whom we have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith among all nations." The Jew condemned them as hardly human, calling them "dogs," "creature," and as too degraded to be brought into their social circle in the church, as admitted in Romans i.

Paul declares the Gentile a human being, and as to sin, both Jews and Gentiles alike, "all under sin" (Romans iii, 9), and of such a condition to be reached by the power of the gospel—the Holy Ghost. Romans i, 16, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ," etc., only admitting God's plan to have it preached to the Jews first. He denies salvation by the law as held and believed by the Jew (Romans iii, 20-29), and puts it on the plan of faith in Christ. Romans iii, 22-24: "Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference." Hence he proves that he was the God of the Gentiles in the same sense that he was to the Jews. "Seeing he is one God, which shall justify the circumcision (the Jew) by faith, and the uncircumcision (Gentile) through faith."

Concerning the word "predestinate," the only use made of it was to appeal to the promise of God to Abraham, who himself was saved by faith, and not by the law, as the one to whom and in whom this predetermined will of God was made, even before the law-covenant was made, which gave them all the rights of the Abrahamic covenant—"that in him all the nations of the earth should be blessed." He justified his preaching to them by referring to this fact, "Whom (the Gentile) he predestinated, them he also called." He claimed for them an equal share in that universal justification of the Adamic sin, which opened the door to the justification of personal sin for the former. Romans v, 18: "Therefore, as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." For the latter justification of personal sin: Romans v, 1, "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Justification opened the door for glorification. Spiritual regeneration now, and bodily regeneration in the resurrection morning. (Romans viii, 23.) In Romans vi he shows that the work of the Spirit was without respect of persons, for the fact was, that when the gospel was preached to the Gentiles in the house of Cornelius, "the Holy Ghost fell on them as on us at the beginning."

Now, having proved all these rights in behalf of his Jew-condemned client, the Gentile, in the long and wonderful argument for them—not to a few of them as Christians, but for them all as a race—he says, with the triumph of victory welling up in his heart: "What shall we say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?" "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Now, the ignorant man, who can not reason nor hold an argument in his mind, guesses he means the few Christians he predetermined to save before he made the world, whereas Paul applies it (the word "elect") to the Gentile race. Furthermore, the word "separate" has a history, which, when explained, shows its full meaning.

When the tabernacle was built, stakes were placed all around it, and curtains hung, making an enclosure, like a yard. This separated the Jew and the Gentile, the latter being on the outside, and was not permitted to come inside unless he became a Jew (believer) by circumcision.

When the temple was built the same was observed. A wall thirty feet high was built, thus separating Jew and Gentile—believer and unbeliever.

Paul showed that these arrangements were temporary, as they were simply representative (foreshadowing), and were now abolished, and the two nations made one; one in everything—all rights and privileges—as expressed in Ephesians iii, 6: "That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel." Hence, as he winds up his argument in their behalf, all these things—and others not here named—he triumphantly declared for them, since God willed their salvation. Nothing, high nor low, far nor near—in fact, nothing in the universe—could debar or separate them from these God-given rights; in brief, from "the love of God which was in Christ Jesus our Lord."

In his argument up to this point I would venture to say that Paul never once thought of the doctrine, "Once in grace," etc. Separate does not refer to falling from grace, equally as it does not refer to permanency in grace, but to the fact adduced by Paul that when God decided in behalf of the Gentile race, not simply the Gentile Christian, no one else could separate them. The aforesaid doctrine, held by the Jews, arose from this circumstance of separating the Gentile from the Jew in divine worship by their careless and prejudiced construction of it. God intended it to show that no unbeliever could stand before him without faith, nor could ever get into heaven without the mediation of Christ. Faith made one clean. The blindness of the Jew led him to construe it to mean the election of the Jew to salvation and the reprobation of the Gentile to damnation. Hence the word "separate" was used, because of its history with the doctrine. Why should any man lose sight of Paul's subject? What else could separate refer to than the reprobation of the Gentiles?

A Shanghai Sunday-School.

Central Church at Shanghai is said to be the most popular one of the city among the Chinese. Mr. Soon, who was at Vanderbilt awhile, is the superintendent of the Sunday-school. At the preaching services the house is often crowded; and at the Sunday-school, Sunday morning, April 15, 144 pupils were in attendance and 7 visitors; collection, $7.15. The teachers were Messrs. Collier, Fong, Ku, Sze, Chu, and Ling; Misses Richardson, Smithy, Dzau, Ying, and Sib; and Mrs. Reid, Gaither, Dzau, and Chang. The music was fine; Miss Richardson at the organ, Mr. Dzau with cornet, and the others with strong vocal organs. "I am so glad" is a favorite song, and it was glorious to hear them make it ring. Last year the school began to be self-supporting. The first day of the public collection only two mills was received, but during the year $50.

H. G. HAWKINS.

Hong Kong, May 2, 1894.

Into China—Soldiers—Chinese Progress—Shanghai.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Long before land appears a passenger on a ship from Japan bound for Shanghai sees the water muddy with the emptyings of the Yangtse river, some of which, perchance, started clear and pure among the snowy mountains of Central Asia. This ugly water extends far out into the sea, and even after fairly steaming up the river's mouth no land can be seen; but land birds fly overhead, Chinese junks are passed ever and anon, and at last the beautiful green of low-lying banks become visible, and the eye rests upon the continent of Asia. Forty miles up the river is a large island; south of this island the Woosung river empties into the Yangtse. Fourteen miles up the Woosung is Shanghai, the acknowledged center of foreign commerce with China.

A strong and very extensive Chinese fort guards the mouth of the Woosung. As we approached gun after gun fired. A Chinese war-ship was just ahead, and queer-looking war-junks, full of gaily caparisoned soldiers, were all around. A traveling companion remarked that some important officer was probably being honored. After going seven or eight miles thus, a little steam launch, which had kept by the war-ship, loosed herself and flew ahead—the herald, hearing announcements. We learned afterwards that this was the new Chinese minister to England on his way from Pekin to Europe. Two days later the English citizens of Shanghai, a company of volunteers, and about 2,000 Chinese soldiers came out to see this ambassador finally placed on board a French mail ship. The Japanese soldier wears foreign dress; not so these Chinese. Two hundred of them bore each a national flag on a tall, heavy staff; the remainder guns. They had on straw sandals without socks; a cloth was wrapped about the calf of the leg, the other part of the dress being somewhat soiled, ordinary native costume, except a new, strong, loose, red outer garment, with large Chinese letters printed on it. Though thus rude in dress, his gun is a good one, and made on the soil. The arsenal, four miles from Shanghai, is constantly at work turning out in great quantity bullets, balls, pistols, guns, cannon, and all manner of fine, modern battle implements, up to a well-equipped man-of-war.

"The eternal spring of hope has well-nigh ceased to flow in the arid regions of Chinese progress." So it, doubtless, seems to many who have watched and waited for China to adopt the civilization of the West. It may be, however, that He who rules the destinies of men is holding back these millions from the adoption of the forms of civilization until more of the leaven of truth can be put into their hearts. In a country when such mighty questions are to be solved, "to be slow, but sure," is best. Certain it is that the Chinaman is just as slow to adopt the arts and sciences of the West as he is in receiving Christianity. In all his broad domain there is not a mile of railroad. He bought and tore up the only one ever built by the foreigners. But the foreigner is allowed to build his Christian church and school almost anywhere, unless it be in the neighborhood of some pagoda, or between two pagodas on some imaginary dragon's head.

Having landed at Shanghai, by their dress I recognized two men as members of the China Inland Mission. "By their dress," because all members of this mission adopt the Chinese costume, even to the pig-tail. At my request, they directed one of the many jinrik-isha-men, who swarm around when a boat arrives, to take me to Yuan Road, where Dr. Reid, of the M. E. Church, South, is stationed. The man trotted off amid screaking wheel-barrows and dashing carriages. The first part of this mile ride, along a street to the west, revealed large foreign establishments. During the latter part these gave place to substantial native shops. The building materials used are mainly hard brick and a kind of red stone.

The police attract attention at once, some being Chinese, some European and American, and some East Indians. The last, tall and dusky, in their red turbans, present a very commanding appearance.

The wheel-barrows referred to carry passengers as well as commodities. Sometimes in the interior our unmarried missionaries make their courting expeditions to the homes of the ladies of the Woman's Board on these vehicles. Wealthy Chinese are in many of the carriages referred to.

The streets which run east and west are named after the chief cities of the Empire, as Pekin, Canton, Soochow. These running north and south have the names of provinces, as Kiangan, Yunnan, Szechuen.

All this applies to the foreign part of the city only. The crowded, walled native city would require altogether a different description. At first no Chinese lived in the foreign concession; they were confined to their own walled city and the suburbs. During their civil war, which occurred about the same time as the Confederate war in America, they were first allowed to domicile in the concession, and now they are so thick that many Europeans have their homes far out on the handsome roads running in several directions five miles from the city.

Temperance Report, Columbus District Conference.

Your committee would report as follows:

We do not deem it necessary at this late day to discuss the evils of intemperance (these are understood and confessed by all), nor do we think it needful for us to try to set forth the duties of the church of God in this matter. There is but one attitude we can sustain toward this great evil—that of deadly, unintermitting hostility. We are bound to oppose with all the forces at our command the encroachments of this monster evil; and we are glad to record that from the first our church has never occupied any equivocal grounds, or compromised herself in any wise with this great sin, but has led in the fight, and now our motto is, "Total abstinence for the individual, and entire prohibition for the State." We are thankful to God that there is a great change for the better in public sentiment on this subject. The masses are opposed to the open saloon, and are rising up in the majesty of their might and driving them from the States. We thank God there is not a saloon in the bounds of the Columbus district.

We are grateful for wise and wholesome legislation by our State Legislature, and that already, under the operation of these laws, all but about nine of the counties of the State have closed the saloons; and we fondly hope and fervently pray that at no distant day every saloon will be closed by law, and our beloved State forever rid of their pestilent presence.

We thank God that there is an improved public sentiment in regard to the illicit traffic in intoxicants. The people demand the enforcement of the laws, and the "blind tiger" must go.

We note with pain a disposition on the part of some of our over-zealous temperance workers to disparage the work of the preachers in this cause; and because we can not see our way clear to adopt all their methods or follow their lead, they denounce us as enemies of prohibition, and align us with saloon keepers and friends of intemperance. We repel these charges as untrue and ungenerous, for it is a fact but for the zeal, devotion and heroism of the preachers, our State would yet be at the mercy of the whisky venders.

Resolved, That we are as much as ever opposed to the whisky traffic, and exhort our people to be on the watch-tower and guard against any effort to repeal existing laws or obstruct their enforcement.

A. P. SAGE,
G. G. SANDERS.

Indian Mission.

May I ask the presiding elders and preachers in charge of works in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, and also the North Mississippi Conference, if they feel free to do so, through the columns of the ADVOCATE, to please make the statement to their Quarterly Conferences and congregations, that we are very much in need of money to carry on the work of the Indian Mission in Mississippi.

Now, brethren, I do not ask you to take a collection unless you feel free to do so, but simply state the needs of the work, and say to the people any amount they wish to give you will transmit to me. It will not be very much trouble, and you do not know how much good you may do in that way. Brethren, think of the poor heathen Indians in our State and Conference, and then in the name of him that said, "Preach the gospel to every creature," speak of it to the people, and ask them to hand you any amount they are willing to give, and you send it to me. The work is very important, and we do not want it to interfere with the regular collections.

Now, brethren and sisters of the laity, let us do what we can, and immediately. Hand amounts to your preacher or presiding elder, or send direct to me at Oak Ridge, Miss.

Yours for the salvation of the Indians,

A. D. MILLER.

Beyond.

There is a right way and a wrong way of looking at almost everything. Spiritual discernment is a very important grace, for many of our joys and many of our sorrows proceed from our method of looking at those things which concern our peace. Salvation depends upon a right view of Jesus Christ. The difference between the impenitent sinner and the same person after he is regenerated is, that he looks at Christ with a new eye, and has discovered him to be the very Savior and Guide that he needs.

How prone we are to regard many of God's dealings in a wrong light, and to call them by wrong names! We speak of things as afflictions which are really great blessings under a dark disguise. We often congratulate people on gaining what turns out to be a dangerous snare or a lamentable loss. Quite as often we condole with them over occurrences which are about to yield them blessings more precious than gold. Be careful how you condole with a man who has lost his money and saved his character, and be equally careful how you congratulate a man who has made a million of dollars at the expense of his religion.

Once more we repeat that there is a right and a wrong way of looking at all things. To the eye that has spiritual discernment this world is an avenue to the one which lies beyond it. Talents, wealth and influence are simply loans to be held in trust for God. High station means high work for him. A Christianized eye sees in money just so much bread for the hungry, just so much gospel for the godless, and just so many lifts for the degraded—as well as innocent and refining enjoyments for one's own heart and household. Christ's image and superscription ought to be on every dollar. To a truly regenerated soul all things become new, and we may well doubt the genuineness of that conversion which does not bring an altered estimate of everything earthly. Faith breaks the false charm of this world and adds a charm to the better world. My friend, "thou hast well seen" when thou dost behold Jesus Christ as the Lord of thy life, his service thy sweetest occupation, and his presence thy perpetual joy.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

Premium Offers.

MR. EDITOR: The 30 copies of Britannica Encyclopedia and 1 copy of "Christian Womanhood" were received in due time, and my wife and daughters are perfectly delighted with the copy of "Christian Womanhood," and the daughters are well pleased with the Encyclopedia; but the print in them is such that wife and I are not so much carried away with them. I think that was a big trade I made when I added them to my library, and often wonder why more people don't accept such offers when presented. The dear old ADVOCATE is a household necessity with us.

The Liquor Traffic.

Here is Henry W. Grady's arraignment of the liquor traffic: "To-night it enters a humble home to strike the roses from a woman's cheek, and to-morrow it challenges this republic in the halls of Congress. To-day it strikes a crust from the lips of a starving child, and to-morrow levies tribute from the government itself. There is no cottage in this city humble enough to escape it; no palace strong enough to shut it out. It defies the law when it can not coerce suffrage. It is flexible to cajole, but merciless in victory. It is the mortal enemy of peace and order, the despoiler of men and terror of women, the cloud that shadows the face of children, the demon that has dug more graves and sent more souls unshrived to judgment than all the pestilences that have wasted life since God sent the plagues to Egypt, and all the wars since Joshua stood beyond Jericho. It comes to ruin, and it shall profit mainly by the ruin of your sons and mine. It comes to mislead human souls and to crush human hearts under its rumbling wheels. It comes to bring gray-haired mothers down in shame and sorrow to their graves. It comes to change the wife's love into despair and her pride into shame. It comes to still the laughter on the lips of little children. It comes to stifle all the music of the home, and fill it with silence and desolation. It comes to ruin your body and mind, to wreck your home, and it knows it must measure its prosperity by the swiftness and certainty with which it wrecks this world."—Exchange.

Mr. Gladstone's Parish Church.

During a recent stay of two days in Chester, England, I took a "fly," and drove out to Hawarden Castle, the country home of Mr. Gladstone. It is an ancient estate, beautifully wooded, and here and there artistically thinned by the sturdy strokes of the Premier's renowned ax. But what interested me most was a visit to the little parish church where the great statesman worships, and where his son Stephen was the rector for seventeen years. Mr. Gladstone himself often "reads the lessons" on Sundays. Whenever he is at Hawarden Castle, he walks every morning in the week to the little church, where at eight o'clock there is held a daily morning service. Although a stupendous empire is on his hands, he finds time to go daily to church and worship. What a model for American statesmen!

The church is a venerable little structure, utterly unpretentious; but the spirit of worship is everywhere evident. One of the notices in the "porch" so impressed me that I subjoin a transcript:

"On your way to the Lord's house, be thoughtful, be silent, or say but little, and that little good. Speak not of other men's faults; think of your own, for you are going to ask forgiveness. Never stay outside; go in at once; time spent inside should be precious.

"Kneel down very humbly, and pray. Spend the time which remains in prayer; remember the awful presence into which you have come. Do not look about to see who are coming in, nor for any other cause. It matters nothing to you what others are doing; attend to yourself. Fasten your thoughts firmly on the holy service. Do not miss one word; this needs a severe struggle; you have no time for vain thoughts. The blessed Spirit will strengthen you, if you persevere.

"Remain kneeling, and pray. Be intent; speak to no one until you are outside. The church is God's house, even when prayer is over. Be quiet and thoughtful as you go through the churchyard.

"Be careful of your talk or the world will slip back into your heart. Remember where you have been, and what you have done. Resolve and try to live a better life."

Is there no hint in the above for American worshipers?—George Dana Boardman, D. D.

A Man's Wants.

Most men have what they really want. That is, if a man puts his life into a want, or puts a want into his life so that he is not content to live without that one thing which has his heart, he is likely to get it, and not likely to stop until he has got it. The trouble with men generally is, that their thoughts and desires do not center on one thing at a time, so that they have they must have that one thing or [illegible]. They have longings passing through them, but not possessing them; and they fail to rise up with determination and to press forward without stopping or swerving until they have reached and compassed the one end of their desires. A hungry man usually gets food, and a thirsty man drink. A man finds time, however busy he is, to make the one call of love or business or sympathy which he really wants to make when it ought to be made; and he takes time to write the one letter he wants to write, even though he leaves fifty other planned letters unwritten. If it is money, or knowledge, or spiritual power, that he reaches out after with utter longing, he gets it sooner or later. Let no man, then, complain that he really wants better things than he has, but he can not get them. The difficulty with him is, that he does not really want the better things that he says and thinks he wants, and so he is content to live on without them, and to take lesser things as he goes along. The words of God with reference to the highest blessing, as applicable to the lower blessings also, are: "Ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart."—Sunday-School Times.

What Are You Doing?

Christian, what are you doing? Are you doing your best to help on the cause of your Lord? If so, then you are not sulking because you can not occupy some high official place in the church. Nor are you pouting because some brother or sister is noticed by the pastor more than you are. You may feel at times that you do not receive that amount of attention to which you are justly entitled. You may have good reason to think that your labors for the church are not appreciated as much as they deserve to be. You must be aware that some officious member trying to crowd you out of the position that you now hold by the favor and confidence of the church and pastor. But if you be resolved to do the very best you can to further the interests of the cause of Christ, none of these things will be allowed to hinder your endeavors. You will not be disloyal to Christ on any account. You will take advantage of no excuse and stand firm in the Master's vineyard. You will not say, "If I can't have my own way in doing work for the church and humanity, I will not do anything." You will rather keep in mind the injunctions of that Christ continued right along in his blessed work notwithstanding the opposition he met with and the abuses be received. We will never do much good if we wait till all obstacles are removed and all of our opposers are dead. Are you doing anything?—Standard.

For one soul saved by scolding and fault-finding, ten are saved by sweetness; for one soul saved by fear of hell ten are saved by the thought of God. A gentle voice and a smiling face make religion beautiful to the most unable and sinful, whereas gloomy looks and a harsh or condescending manner make religion seem a thing to be avoided. Do you wish to draw souls to God? Then let your souls reflect his love. Be gentle, be patient. Pharisaical people may condemn you, but only this way you imitate Jesus.—Gospel News.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

It has been well said that no man ever sank under the burden of the day. It is when to-morrow's burden is added to the burden of to-day that the weight is more than a man can bear. Never load yourself so, my friends. If you find yourself so loaded, at least remember this: it is your own doing, not God's. He begs you to leave the future to him, and mind the present.—George Macdonald.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

Parsnip cakes made by forming mashed parsnips into small cakes, browning on each side in butter, are a change which has only to be tried to be liked.

ALMOND SWEET CAKES.—Beat the yolks of four eggs, half a cupful of butter, half a cupful of milk, and three cupfuls of flour, in which sift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with extract of almond, roll thin, and bake quickly. When done, press a blanched almond in the center of each. Selected.

HOW TO BOIL HAM.—Wash a ham well. Put in a boiler and fill with cold water, add two blades of mace, a dozen cloves, six pepper corns and an bay leaf. Place over a slow fire and let come to a boil gradually; skim and simmer gently fifteen minutes to the pound. When done, let cool in the liquor, take up, remove the skin, brush over with beaten eggs and dredge with grated bread crumbs and brown sugar. Set in the oven to brown. Garnish with parsley.—Exchange.

LEMON SNOW.— This is an old, but world's dessert, always popular. Soak half a box of gelatine in a cupful of cold water. Add two cupfuls of boiling water and a grated rind and juice of a large lemon or two small ones, and a cupful of sugar. Dissolve and strain. When cool, but not stiff, add the whites of three eggs beaten to a stiff froth, and beat the whole until it "sets" in a firm, white snow. Served with whipped cream, or a custard made with the yolks of the eggs and a pint of milk, sweetened and flavored with lemon.—Cultivator and Country Gentleman.

TOMATO SALAD.—Put the tomatoes on ice for several hours. Make the mayonnaise, and set it on the ice until needed. Wash the crisp part of the lettuce in ice-cold water, and shake dry. When ready to serve, make little nests with two or three lettuce-leaves each, and arrange uniformly on the dish. Peel and cut the tomatoes in slices, and place half a one in each nest, put a tablespoonful of mayonnaise on each tomato, and serve at once. If the tomatoes are not peeled until just before serving, they will be much firmer than if peeled before placing on the ice.—Exchange.

STRAWBERRY JELLY.—Put your berries into a preserving kettle and stand over the fire until the berries are heated. Squeeze a few at a time through a double cheese cloth until you have done them all. Measure the juice, and to each pint allow one pound of granulated sugar. Put the sugar into shallow pans and stand in the oven to heat. Turn the juice into a porcelain-lined kettle, place it over the fire and let it boil rapidly and steadily for twenty minutes; add the sugar quickly, stirring all the while until it is dissolved. Dip your tumblers hastily into hot water and fill them the instant the jelly comes again to a boil. The berries should be a little under-ripe.—Mrs. Pennington, in Table Talk.

HYGIENE.

Sit Up Straight.

Nothing is more abominable in a young person than the habit of stooping, and, except when caused by malformation or actual weakness, nothing is more inexcusable. A slouchy, stooping habit of carriage always suggests laziness, and often stealth and dishonesty. Carry your head erect, expand your chest, throw back your shoulders, or you will never possess grace or a commanding presence.

The Creator "made man upright." Round shoulders and bow-shaped spines may be avoided by watchfulness during youth, and an erect figure retained in maturity without an effort.

If you bend over too much in your studies, get a lower seat. Saw the legs off an old chair, and then sit down so low that your chin will come just above the table; make the hind legs a little shorter than the fore legs, and then read and write with your arms on the table, and it will take out some of the crook from your back.

One mother, whose daughter was getting the habit of stooping, used to have her lie flat on her back, without a pillow, for an hour each day, while she read to her out of some interesting book. In a little while she was as straight as need be, and a picture of health and strength.

In some countries the women carry pails, tubs and heavy loads on their heads—this keeps them erect. Throwing back the arms is another means of keeping straight. Remember, you may add years to your life by standing up straight; and you may have not only a longer life, but a stronger, broader, deeper, happier and more useful life, if you go about with head erect, chest expanded, and lungs well developed, with rosy cheeks and fresh complexion, than if you go about bent over, cramped up, stooping, flat-chested, sallow, nervous and miserable—Blue and Gray.

The Blessings of a Couch.

A room without a couch of some sort is only half furnished. Life is full of ups and downs, and all that saves the sanity of the mentally jaded and physically exhausted fortune-fighter is the periodical good cry and momentary loss of consciousness on the upstairs lounge or the old sofa in the sitting-room.

There are times when so many of the things that distract us could be straightened out and the way made clear if one only had a long, comfortable couch on whose soft bosom he could throw himself, boots and brains, stretch his weary frame, unmindful of tidies and tapestry, close his tired eyes, relax the tension of his muscles, and give his harassed mind a chance. Ten minutes of this soothing narcotic, when the head throbs, the soul yearns for endless, dreamless, eternal rest, would make the vision clear, the nerves steady, the heart light, and the star of hope shine again.

There is no doubt that the longing to die is mistaken for the need of a nap. Instead of the immortality of the soul, business men and working women want regular and systematic doses of dozing, and, after a mossy bank in the shade of an old oak that succeeding seasons have converted into a tenement of song birds, there is nothing that can approach a big sofa, or a low, long couch placed in the corner, where tired nature can turn her face to the wall and sleep and doze away the gloom.—The Family Doctor.

Why Bathing Soon after a Meal is Dangerous.

M. Wertheimer, in speaking before the Paris Academy of Science, developed some facts which it will be well to bear in mind now that Summer is approaching. He showed that a sensation of cold on the skin acts on the circulation of the lower part of the trunk; that is to say, the veins, and also on the brain, in the same way as a mechanical or electrical stimulus of the sensitive nerves of the skin. This observation affords an explanation of the fact that a sudden immersion of the body in cold water after a meal, and while the process of digestion is going on, may be attended with danger. At this time the abdominal system is the seat of an intense physiological congestion, and the accumulation of blood in it is suddenly thrown back towards the nervous centers. The consequence may be a shock resulting in death.

Physicians now declare that anyone who feels inclined to sleep after a meal is committing a crime against his digestion by not indulging his somnolency. The theory that these iconoclasts advance is, that when a person has taken a heavy dinner the stomach demands a special influx of blood wherewith to accomplish its work of digestion. The brain can not meet this demand unless the cerebral functions be meanwhile partially or wholly suspended. Hence the benefit of "forty winks." Dyspeptics will find this a very pleasant medicine, and if there are some who still think it an indolent practice, all we can hope for is their reformation.—America.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Fertilizing.

Of a twenty years' experience in truck farming there is no matter about which we have found as great a difference of opinion as we have upon the subject of fertilizing. All agree as to its necessity; but the variance seems to be upon its extent and kinds used. When we, as a community, began to grow vegetables for market, we were as ignorant as children in this matter. We had no one who had any experience in the use of fertilizers; we had no one to whom we could apply for information. What we did was wholly experimental; the result was in many instances a great and unnecessary expenditure in the use of fertilizers, without any profitable results—often just the opposite, and attended with great injury.

Now, it is true, we have never gotten out entirely of some of our old habits, and some are repeating as fatal mistakes as were in the beginning. The reason upon reflection is evident; some seem never to think, and pour down fertilizers preparatory to planting indiscriminately, without any reasonable limit. The result in many cases is a damage to the crops and waste of fertilizers. There is no question but many of our growers use an unnecessary quantity in many instances. Some may spring the question, Is there any fixed rule? We answer, No; yet there is a rule all should observe—that is, to prepare for dry seasons. The reason is clear; there are more dry seasons than wet. An excess of fertilizers in a dry season is disastrous; if it should prove to be seasonable, there will not be as fatal a result, and even then a less quantity would have proven sufficiency. There can be no established fixed rule for fertilizing for all kinds of soil and all seasons. No more than a physician could establish a fixed rule for treating all patients the same.

There can be some general principles laid down, that will aid very much the intelligent grower in raising his crops. Beyond this no one can go. It is a little amusing to read some letters sent us upon this subject. They begin about thus: "What kind of vegetables are most profitable?" "What kind of soil is best for all kinds of vegetables?" "What kind of fertilizer do you use for vegetables," etc. All questions which would require pages to answer. One general rule we would lay down, is to prepare the land thoroughly before planting. This does not mean only the use of the plow the Spring before, but even the year previous; to plant it in some kind of crop as peas, that will supply the land with a sufficiency of humus, especially clay lands. The plowing should be deep and thorough, and if any of the land holds water, it should be thoroughly drained. The fertilizer used, if a kind slow in its action, it should be applied a month or six weeks before the crop is planted, at least a part of it intended to be used. This should be thoroughly incorporated with the soil. Now, in growing corn we have adopted the practice with beneficial results of applying one fertilizer at two different times: the first at the time of first working, and the other as we "lay by." We do corn about the same. Now as to vegetables, the crop being short, we use but one application—that before or at time of planting according to the slowness of action of the kind used. As to the quantity to the acre, we are governed by the circumstances, the condition of and kind of land we are using. At this point, as we have said, there is great variance of opinion among our growers—using in quantity from five to fifteen hundred pounds to the acre.

More hereafter.

Remedy for Hog Lice.

I herewith send you a remedy for hog lice, that will prove on trial infallible. Procure some leaf tobacco, boil to a strong amber, in water enough to float it; mix in while hot enough lard or refuse grease to make a thin salve; rub on the pigs or hogs troubled, and in less than twenty-four hours they will not have a louse on them, if well rubbed. Also put leaf tobacco in their beds to make them smell strong, and the hogs will never be troubled with lice again while they sleep in the beds. The tobacco will not hurt pigs in any respect, even but a day old. —A Farmer, Hickman, Ky.

Grease with an ointment made as follows: Half pint of tanners' or train oil, and one-fourth pound of Scotch snuff stirred into it; rub along the back, around the ears and under the legs.—W. J. Camp, in Rural New Yorker.

Large as a Dollar

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

The Continued Strike.

At the hour of going to press the strike is still on, the situation in Chicago being about as bad as it could well be. Were it not for the presence of the Federal troops in the Windy City, there is no telling what devastation would be wrought by the infuriated mobs of strikers, who, not content with keeping men from taking their places, seem bent on doing all the harm they can to railroad property. A deplorable state of affairs is certainly at hand. The scenes of blood and wanton pillage which took place in Chicago last Saturday remind one of the wild disorder and bloodshed that characterized the French Commune. Certainly the events of the last few days are without a parallel in this country. We regard it as unfortunate that in the fight Saturday between a detachment of the State troops and the mob, the regulars, after killing twenty or more of the rioters, had to retreat. Emboldened by their success, the rioters are almost sure to come into conflict with a larger military force. If so, there will be great loss of life. Since President Cleveland has issued a proclamation, warning all good citizens to remain at their homes and not to engage in hindering traffic and in the destruction of property, a better state of things, we trust, will result. We are glad that the Chief Executive has taken things in hand, regardless of the ill-timed remonstrances of Gov. Altgeld, the anarchist sympathizer, against the invasion of States' rights. Prettily, indeed, does he pose as an exponent of the doctrine. Cleveland's laconic reply—one sentence it was—to Altgeld's long-winded complaint about governmental interference, is characteristic and to the point. It is as if he had used the words which Shakespeare puts in the mouth of Cassius:

"In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice offense should bear his comment."

It looks as if the question of strikes had reached a crisis. Something will have to be done by our chief law makers in the way of regulating and adjusting the differences between capital and labor. Better would it be to have the United States army doubled or even quadrupled in size than that the commerce of the whole country should be paralyzed as has been the case. Fortunate is it that Congress, a few years back, passed the Inter-State Commerce law, else President Cleveland would have had little chance to send Federal troops to the places of disturbance. The soldiers could legally have done nothing more than protect the mails. Men sometimes build wiser than they know. As we view the situation, the strike seems the most foolish on record. Because a few carpenters and mechanics working for the Pullman Palace Car Co. recently demanded a twenty per cent. increase in wages, which was not granted, the American Railway Union, with headquarters in Chicago, merely through sympathy, with no grievance whatever against the various railways affected, declared a strike. The strike seems to have been aimed primarily at the Illinois Central because of its contract with the Pullman Company. Wage-earners undoubtedly have the right to quit work whenever they please, and they also have the right to organize for mutual protection. They have no right, however, to keep other men from taking their places, and when they begin to use force to effect this, they are grievously in the wrong. The strikers who engage in burning and plundering property and in acts of violence deserve no mercy at the hands of the law. It is nearly always the case that toughs and vagabonds take advantage of strikes to do all kinds of mischief, for which the strikers themselves may not be directly responsible. Whenever a large number of men quit work and congregate in crowds, mischief is sure to be done. If well-meaning men happen to be along, so much the worse for them. The people of this country will not stand another such interruption of traffic. They will rise up in their might and rid themselves of the men who counsel such lawless measures.

Our Newest Educational Advance.

The establishment of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., under the control of the same Board of Trustees which governs the mother college at Ashland, and the immediate presidency of Dr. W. W. Smith, is a matter of general congratulation to our church. The times are probably not ripe in the South for many such institutions. Colleges for women employing the same grade of professors, paying the same salaries, giving the same courses and exacting the same standards for admission and graduation as our best colleges for men, must need be well endowed as this is, and must find their students here and there among the more ambitions. But we are heartily glad that we have this institution of our own, and that our daughters need no longer go North to Vassar or Wellesley for such educational advantages. We admire, perhaps extravagantly, the Southern type of womanhood, and wish to see it preserved and perpetnated.

John A. Ellis Cottage.

The funds for the Jno. A. Ellis Cottage are coming in encouragingly. One elect lady sends me fifty dollars. Rev. J. G. Sibley, one of our most active and useful pastors, will send us fifty dollars from the church of T. S. Ford, the Lamptons and Dr. Ferrill. Bro. Sibley is doing a fine work for the cottage. May our Father bless him! Bros. Selby, Emory, Dr. Cook and Bro. Jno. McLeod are also helping us. Bro. T. W. Adams, of Moss Point, who is one of the best friends the church ever had, active and useful in every good cause, writes: "I have no doubt about raising the $500 for the 'Jno. A. Ellis Home.' Moss Point will give $225, I am sure." When you remember that the Griffins, Dantzlers, Woods, the Evans, the Stewarts, Vanderwalls live at Moss Point, you will not be surprised to hear they send me $225. Let the cash come in at once. We desire to let the contract out in ten days. We want all the money in hand. Four young men have already engaged rooms in the Jno. A. Ellis Home. God is greatly blessing our work. I. W. COOPER,

M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, AT PEARLINGTON, MISS.

Our New Church, Pearlington, Miss.

The above cut is a very fine one of our new church in Pearlington, Miss. It is built according to No. 5, A. D. plans of Board of Church Extension. The structure is 34x55. Walls 18 feet to the square, and 24 center. Arched and pannelled ceilings, doubled beaded. Gallery over front entrance, 11x33. Tower 80 feet, with gilded ball and turrets, accented by black smalt. The interior has cherry stain on all openings and hard oil finish. The pulpit is uniquely and beautifully finished in white and gold, and is much admired by Bishop Keener and all who have seen it. The seating capacity is 350.

After an impressive and enjoyable sermon from Bishop Keener from II. Peter, 1, 18, 19, and a collection by the pastor to cover all indebtedness, this beautiful edifice was formally set apart, on the first day of July, to the worship of God, and the people are happy in the possession of the handsomest structure in the district.

We extend hearty congratulations to the pastor, Rev. J. V. Penn, upon his success in the completion of this beautiful new church. Considering the local conditions and the general financial stringency, it is quite remarkable that he should have accomplished so much during the first six months of his pastorate. But this is quite in keeping with his previous record. He is one of our Nehemiahs.

Our Duty to Missions.

In these times of financial distress and labor disturbance let us not forget that we have brethren and sisters laboring in foreign fields who need our prayers and our support. Their work is our work, and although we have difficult social and political problems to face, we must not let these earnest toilers suffer unnecessarily by reason of our neglect. The work must be carried on if the church would maintain her claim that she has the spirit of the gospel. Whenever we, as a church, slacken our efforts to evangelize un-Christian nations, and sit down to passive enjoyment of the gracious influences of Christianity, "Ichabod" will be written over our doors. Let there be no shifting of responsibility. Each of us should cheerfully do his part.

At a meeting of Baptist ministers, held at Northampton, England, in 1788, William Carey, who afterwards immortalized himself in doing missionary work in India, proposed as a topic for discussion, "The duty of the church to spread the gospel among the heathen." When the proposition was announced, Dr. Ryland, one of the aged members, sprang to his feet, and said: "Young man, sit down. When God pleases to convert the heathen he will do it without your aid or mine." As Bishop Haygood says, there seems to be force in the observation, but there is absolutely none, for it is directly contrary to the teaching of Scripture. Our Lord did not tell the disciples that angels would be sent to preach the gospel over all the world, but he gave the command, "Go ye and teach all nations."

The day of miracles has passed. We are living under a dispensation of grace, and no teaching of the Word is plainer than that the Christianizing of the world is to be accomplished through human agency. God working for man through man—that is what every effort at converting the heathen means. Just as millions in Europe and in America have felt the redeeming power of the gospel through the hearing of the Word, in like manner is salvation destined to reach the unregenerate millions in China and India and the isles of the sea.

For centuries the church was sadly derelict in her duty to the unsaved, and she is not altogether free from blame to-day. So zealous were the apostles and their co-laborers during the first century that tradition declares the gospel to have been preached throughout the then known world. Such was doubtless the case. Eusebius, in speaking of the Christians in the second century, says that "they distributed their worldly goods among the necessitous believers, and, quitting their own country, went forth into distant lands to propagate the gospel." Soon, however, there came the unfortunate and calamitious alliance between Church and State, followed by centuries of neglect and even retrogression. Had the church maintained her integrity, and had she constantly manifested the same degree of zeal in spreading the gospel that characterized her during the first two centuries of her history, the whole world today would be Christianized.

What other generations failed to perform remains for us to accomplish. Because they neglected a plain duty this is no reason why we should do so. Three-fourths of the human race are yet unevangelized. Nevertheless, there are church-members by the hundred who, when the church calls loudly and earnestly for help to continue the glorious work which Christ began, turn a deaf ear to every appeal and shut themselves up to selfish indulgence. What excuse can any Christian offer for exempting himself from the obligation to send the gospel to those who have it not? Is his a gospel of special privilege, meant only for him, and suited to no one else?

Duty is a noble word, but love is a nobler. If we shall girdle the globe with the gospel because it is our duty, we shall do well. But if we do so because of love for Christ and for humanity, how infinitely higher will be the motive that actuated us! What Christianity is to each one of us it may become—yea, ought to become—to all the nations of the earth.

Conditions of Church Membership.

Much ado is made in some quarters, and in some church papers, over the relative characters of the members of different churches. Some say: "Why, we take none but converted people into our church. Our members are all regenerated. You take unconverted people into the Methodist Church." This is said and repeated again and again until some of our Methodist people are nervous about it, and want to change the conditions of membership in our church. The statement is not true that other churches take in none but converted people. They do admit unconverted persons, or else some of their converted members "fall from grace," and it matters little to Methodists which horn of this dilemma they take. This is a foolish and silly boast on the part of others, and it shows weakness, or ignorance, for our people to grow nervous about it. We admit to membership in the Methodist Church precisely the same class and on precisely the same profession of faith as other churches. Other churches call all these persons converted, regenerated, but the Methodists do not. The difference is in the use of words and terms, and not in the character or condition of the candidates for membership.

Judged by the doctrine and standard of Calvinistic Churches, all who "desire to flee from the wrath to come and to be saved from sin" are converted, and this desire is one of the fruits of regeneration. They would not have this desire if they were not born again. Judged by the Wesleyan Arminian doctrine and standard, many of her own candidates for church membership, and as large a proportion of those taken into other churches, are only "penitent seekers of religion." The reason for this apparent, though not real, difference grows out of a different statement as to the order, or operation, of grace in the human heart. The theory of all Calvinistic Churches is that regeneration, by the sovereign power of God, is the very first thing in the process of personal salvation. Conviction, repentance, faith, holy living and infallible salvation are the fruits of the sovereign act of God at the beginning of the religious life. Each individual is totally depraved, wholly averse to God and utterly dead in sin until God restores life by a sovereign act.

Methodists believe in "prevenient grace"—"the righteousness of one that brought the free gift of justification to life to all men"—an initial quickening of the race; hence men are susceptible of conviction by the Holy Ghost, and they are capable of repentance toward God and of saving faith in Christ by the help of the Spirit. This is the condition, or state, of the whole human race by virtue of the Federal headships and merit and death of Christ.

Let me state this in another form:

Calvinism: 1. Election from before the foundation of the world a certain and definite number to be saved, according to the good pleasure of God's will.

2. Christ died for the elect, and for no others.

3. God regenerates the elect by his sovereign power whenever he gets ready to save them.

4. Conviction, repentance and faith grow out of regeneration, and they are proofs of it.

5. God having elected a certain number, and having sent his Son to die for that number, and having by his power regenerated that number, he will by his power, certainly and infallibly, save them.

This is the doctrinal scheme of Calvinism, and it is logically consistent, if the main thing be admitted. I speak of Calvinism as it is set forth in the creeds and books of theology.

Arminianism holds and teaches that God, foreknowing all things afore, provided Christ to be the Savior of all men of the race.

2. That when the race fell in Adam it was caught on this platform of second probation in Christ.

3. Here each member of the race is in the same relation to God through Christ, and each is capable of repentance and faith by the prevenient help of the Holy Ghost.

4. Repentance towards God and faith in Christ are the conditions of justification and regeneration.

5. All who are born again will be saved if they continue faithful to the end.

Now, the question is, "Which of these two systems is best supported by the Word of God?" By one system all penitent and repentant sinners are regenerated. By the other, penitent and repentant sinners are on the way to justification and regeneration. One system says, "They are converted;" the other says, "They are in a fair way to be converted."

Some one may say this is an old and a dead issue. I beg your pardon. It is preached now. Column after column has been printed in a church periodical this year in favor of the first scheme named. GILDEROY.

NOTES.

The new City Directory of Chicago shows the population to be 1,700,000.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, of the West Texas Conference, is in feeble health.

Bishop Granbery has changed the time of the Holston Conference from Oct. 10 to Oct 24.

The Ohio Wesleyan University has conferred the degree of LL.D. upon Miss Frances E. Willard.

Mr. Samuel Cupples, of St. Louis, has been made a member of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University.

Sister Norwood, wife of Rev. N. B. Norwood, of the Louisiana Conference, has been quite sick, but is now convalescent.

Rev. C. A. Evans, generally known throughout Georgia as General Evans, candidate for governor, has withdrawn from the race.

A dreadful scourge is raging in China, especially in Hong Kong, where the death rate is fully 100 per day. It is said fully two-thirds of those attacked die.

The Register of Vanderbilt University for 1893-94, and announcement for 1894-95, is a very interesting publication. Send for a copy of this Register to Wills Williams, Bursar, Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. W. D. Kirkland, our new Sunday-school editor, will continue to edit the Southern Christian Advocate until the close of this year. He will not make headquarters in Nashville until next year.

It is stated in some of our exchanges that Rev. J. C. Brown has succeeded Dr. J. W. Boswell as editor of the Memphis Advocate. We suppose that this is correct, but can not say positively, as the Memphis Avalanche has not come to this office for some weeks.

Dr. J. W. Lee, pastor of St. John, returned last week from his three months' tour of Egypt, Palestine and Europe, and preached Sunday morning and evening. Next Sunday evening he begins a series of lectures, giving the results of his travels and observations.—St. Louis Advocate.

The Board of Supervisors of Hinds county, Miss., has ordered a local option election for July 31. We trust our friends will leave no stone unturned in order to carry this most important election. The best people of the entire State will rejoice to see the Capital City free from the whisky curse.

An effort is being made by the Methodists of Durham, N. C., to have one of our Bishops reside in that city, and it is reported that they have offered to erect a house for him on the Trinity College campus. The Wilmington Messenger states that Bishop Wilson has consented to move there.—Holston Methodist.

In Miss Laura Haygood's address to the Missionary Society of the Wesleyan Female College, she told of a Missionary Society in Shanghai. There are seventy Chinese ladies in the church, sixty-five are members of the society and the regular attendance at its monthly meetings is fifty. They pay their dues as the least amount they can give.

The St. Louis Advocate got out a college edition on June 27. It contains cuts of Central College buildings, of the president, faculty and of some of the former president, including Bishop Hendrix—the whole gotten up in exceedingly tasteful and attractive style. We congratulate Bros. Chapman and Palmore upon their success in this venture as well as upon their success in general.

The Sunday Law Exemption bill, recently before the Louisiana Legislature, we are glad to learn, has been indefinitely postponed. This means that the present excellent Sunday Law will be left in statu quo. Despite the fact that the law is constantly violated in this city, we want no special exemption. Sentiment in favor of its enforcement is growing, and we hope after a while to have officials who will do their full duty.

An illustration of how lawlessness begets lawlessness is furnished by the recent tarring and feathering of Adjt. Gen. Tarsney, of Colorado, by a mob. Tarsney, it seems, is a rival of Governor Waite in the use of incendiary language, even going so far as to predict that the next election would be the signal for making bonfires of rich men's homes all over the country. When the leaders and representatives of the law so lightly invite appeals to physical force it is not to be wondered at if subordinates lose all respect for law and order. Chickens sometimes come home to roost.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2 25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to Juno, '95.

Change of Time.

The Louisiana Conference will meet in New Orleans, Dec. 5, one week earlier than at first announced. The change is made that the Louisiana Conference may not be held at the same time with the Mississippi.

J. C. GRANBERY.

A Call.

To the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana:

July 14 will be Woman's Christian Temperance Union Day at the Louisiana State Chatanqua. A programme of unusual interest is promised at the various meetings. A grand rally of our forces is desired.

Mrs. M. M. Snell, national evangelist, will be the orator of the day. Stirring temperanne songs will be sung. Your State president will preside, and many State and district officers are expected. There will be a Demorest Medal Contest and an "experienne meeting," in which it is hoped all will take part.

Sisters, this is a great opportunity for extending our work. Let us live up to our opportunities and see in them both duty and beauty.

Let every union send delegates—the number is not limited. Mrs. M. H. Williams, general manager of the Chatauqua, writes me, "All delegates will be entertained in Ruston, and railroads will give reduced rates." Let us all strive to meet at Chatauqua and quaff its clear and sparkling water in the toast, "Success to the Louisiana Chatauqua, and many happy returns of Woman's Christian Temperance Union Day on its grounds."

Yours for God and Home and Every Land. MARY READ GOODALE,
Pres. La. W. C. T. U.

Don't Take Our Word,

But ask your doctor if there is any cure for rheumatism. If a member of the old school, he will say there is none. If of the more modern and progressive practice, he will say that Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism is the only known specific, and that its proprietors offer a reward of $500 for a case it will not cure. The preparation is both internal and external, consists of two large bottles—one month's treatment, and is sent by express to any address upon receipt of $5 Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York. Agents wanted.

Evangelistic Work.

Please let me say in your paper to the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference that I have my plan made out so as to give me some time off of my circuit, and I want to make an evangelistic tour in dear old Mississippi to see loved ones and friends and tell them of the Indians, their habits, and other interesting things of this country.

So, brethren, if any of you would like to have me with you for a few days, let me know at once, so I can give you the time. Any brother employing me to assist him will be expected to pay my railroad expenses. I have been preaching by day and night for three weeks, and am entering upon the fourth week. The Lord is doing great things for us in the Indian Mission Conference. God bless you all!

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE CHRISTIAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE TENSE.

(John xv, 13; I. Peter v, 7; John xiv, 3.)

1. The past. The Shepherd died for his flock.

(1) The history of the world is a history of war. Cyrus, Alexander the Great, Napoleon Bonaparte, etc., slew thousands in order to established empires. They were not heroes, but wholesale murderers.

(2) Christ sought and accomplished victory in a quite different manner. He died for others. Gave himself for his sheep.

(3) The circumstances of his death distressingly interesting. Even the sun would not witness the astounding spectacle. "From the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land until the ninth hour."

2. The present. "He careth for you." This he has demonstrated by

(1) Giving us God-fearing parents who raised us in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

(2) Giving us good schools. The capacity for useful and happy lives enlarged.

(3) Giving us "our daily bread," health, comfort, friends.

(4) Giving us the holy ministry churches, Sunday-schools, etc.

(5) Providing for us even down to old age.

(6) Sending angels to escort us to the home of the soul when the vital spark of heavenly day quits this mortal clay.

3. The future. "Christ is preparing a place for us."

(1) He knows our disposition, want predilection, wishes. It will suit us.

(2) He is preparing a place for us. Some spark of heaven as a condition. That being so, we could enjoy heaven anywhere, even though located in hell. But heaven is a place. There are many mansions. The new Jerusalem, the city of our God.

(3) For us. For us, who were at one time God's enemies. But having repented of our sins, having obtained forgiveness, being converted, we have become children of God. And if children, then heirs. Glorious future!

From Fellowship League.

I notice, Mr. Editor, that the Leagues have not generally accepted the invitation to occasionally contribute notes or sketches interesting to Leaguers.

What are the country Leagues doing? We have only heard from a few.

As for the Fellinity League, with which the writer is connected, it has had a revival during the past few weeks that promises to do much good.

We propose to carry on a meeting of our own (in the name of the Lord) at the Fellinity Mission School, 700 Annunciation street. It is proposed to invite the different city pastors to preach for us there. The neighborhood is one that gives promise of good results.

Our League meets Friday, the twenty-second, and invite all Leaguers to be present.

JOHN M. EHLERT,

Sam Jones and Bethel Camp Meetings.

Some weeks ago the president, I think, of Sam Jones Camp Meeting Association complained through the ADVOCATE that we, of the Bethel Camp Meeting Association, had wilfully, or, at least, selfishly seized upon the time long since pre-empted by his association. I write to say that no one of us knew that Sam Jones Camp Meeting had in any way laid claim to that time. Had we dreamed of such a thing, we would have selected another time. If we had at some former time selected a certain time every year as the time for our camp meeting; and if the Sam Jones, or any other camp meeting association, had met before ours, and had seized upon our time, I would have attributed their act to their ignorance of our right and never to a wilfull disregard. I cherish the charity that "thinketh no evil."

Missionary Debt.

Bro. F. B. Ormond, North Kemper circuit, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, reports the following collected on Missionary Debt by "Penny Helpers:" Miss Florence Adams, $1; Miss Ida Waddle, $1; and asks that mention be made in the ADVOCATE. I do this cheerfully, although I have not charge of the missionary debt in our Conference at this time.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. R Seward, Athens, July 3: "We closed a very interesting meeting at Foster Chapel last Sunday night. We are indebted to Bros. J. L. P. Sheppard, P. E., and Jno. A. Miller for assistance. Results: twelve conversions, eleven joined the church by profession of faith, and the church greatly revived. Praise the Lord for his goodness."

Rev. Geo. P. White, P. C., Independence, La., July 3: "I have just closed a meeting at this place. Methodism is getting a hold in this section, the result of which time alone can tell. Bro. P. M. Brown, of Amite City, did the preaching. It measured fully up to his usual standard. Bro. Brown will do to depend on in revival meetings. The good accomplished during the meeting can not be estimated. Old, hardened sinners were moved under the power of the gospel that never moved before. We received during the meeting eight persons into the church. Baptized two children."

Rev. P. H. Howse, P. C., Meadville, Miss., July 4: "Our second Quarterly Conference was held on June 2 and 3. Bro. Weems, P. E., was with us and preached with great power two sermons that are rarely excelled. He literally captured our good people at Neho Church. I think he is a natural born presiding elder. We have a variety of people on our work—a number of good people, some bad and some worse. We have some dancers, some drunkards, some profane swearers, some adulterers, some liars, some ponzers and lots of covetous people. While it is no credit to Methodism, yet they are not alone in these deplorable crimes. We have about two other denominations that are dabbling in the same cess pool, and can beat a wolf backbiting and using deceit. Yet in all these denominations we find some as high-toned Christians as ever any pastor served. If God will help me, I am going to live them an example and help them to a reformation. Our finances are behind, but if the stewards will do their duty, Meadville will make a clean report this year. Pray for our success."

REMEMBER there are hundreds of brands of White Lead (so called) on the market that are not White Lead, composed largely of Barytes and other materials. But the number of brands of genuine is limited. The following brands are standard "Old Dutch" process, and just as good as they were when you or your father were boys:

"Southern," "Red Seal," "Collier."

If you want colored paint, tint any of the above strictly pure leads with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a pound of color to 25 pounds of lead. The best merchants sell them, the best painters use them.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

HOME CIRCLE.

MOTHER'S BOYS.

Yes, I know there are stains on my carpet,
The traces of small muddy boots;
And I see your fair tapestry glowing,
All spotless with blossoms and fruits.

And I know that my walls are disfigured
With prints of small fingers and hands,
And that your own household most truly
In immaculate purity stands.

And I know that my parlor is littered
With many old treasures and toys;
While your own is in daintiest order,
Unharmed by the presence of boys.

And I know that my room is invaded
Quite boldly all hours of the day;
While you sit in yonrs unmolested
And dream the soft quiet away!

Yes, I know there are four little bed-sides
Where I must stand watchful each night;
While you can go out in your carriage,
And shine in your dresses so bright.

Now, I think I'm a neat little woman;
I like my house orderly, too;
And I'm fond of all dainty belongings,
Yet would not change places with you,

No! Keep your fair home with its order,
Its freedom from bother and noise,
And keep your own tasteful leisure—
But leave me my four noble boys!

A Letter to Boys.

Success in life may be compared to a door with a peculiar lock, capable of being opened by several keys, some of which work easily, while others, besides being inserted with difficulty and requiring unusual strength to turn, must be tried many times unsuccessfully. Frequently some of the keys slip out or stick fast, so that the holder, wearied and disappointed, turns away in discouragement.

I am about to give to boys and young men an account of one of the keys which will never fail if the one using it is of good moral character. It is this: Never take a second step until you have mastered the first. I shall try to make this seem important by explaining its operation.

Take an example from arithmetic. Every well-arranged arithmetic proceeds from one step to another. First, you learn the names and meanings of the figures; then to add them; next, you subtract; afterward you multiply, and finally you are taught to divide. Can one perform a sum in addition who does not know the names and values of the figures? Can anyone multiply 329 by 526 who can not add? Can anyone do a sum in long division who can not subtract? But he who learns these in their order can do any of them at any time.

The more perfectly a thing is learned, unless learned correctly, the more certain one is to fall into serious error. Suppose one had learned the multiplication table correctly, except that he supposed five times five are twenty-seven. He might then take a situation to calculate prices and make change. He might do his work splendidly for a while, but the moment five times five should come in he would be wrong, and that would throw him out in every part of his work; for if he had multiplied five by five and called it twenty-seven, and had occasion to multiply that by seven, he would have fourteen too much, and so in any addition.

Apply this to recollection and understanding. We remember by attaching what we are learning to what we already know; we reason by drawing conclusions from what we already know; but if we are wrong, we have spoiled even our memory of something new, and our reasoning is worthless.

You propose to learn a trade; but if you take a second step without properly performing the first, you will be entangled. Neither the second nor the first will be right, for your work, as a whole, will show a defect. This is true, also, of any kind of business or profession. Many a young man has lost his situation at the time when he was doing his best because he was making some mistake, the result of not learning correctly something which he thought he had mastered many weeks before.

In reading a book never turn to a new page until you are sure that you understand and can tell to yourself what was on the last page. Better wait six days before the second step, than to try to take it before the first is understood.

It took me a long while to learn this. I had an impatient mind that saw into things more clearly anywhere, and I depended upon this. One day I discovered that in the absence of a book I could do nothing with a certain problem in algebra. When I turned to the book I saw to my sorrow that I had to begin many pages back of the one upon which this problem was explained, and slowly approach, restudying what I had only glanced at before in order to comprehend. Now I am sometimes a month reading a book that, so far as seeing what the words are is concerned, I should read through in two hours. This system will open the door of any trade, business or profession you may wish to follow. Others may run faster than you for a while, but when they are thrown by a net of their own weaving, you will be steadily advancing to success.

Try this perseveringly, and it will wonderfully help you.—Dr. Buckley.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

Keeping Young.

There once was a woman who shuddered at the thought of growing old. No woman really likes to grow old.

There are those who profess themselves quite willing to do so, and who seem to think it a duty to take not only pleasantly, but eagerly, the various steps which mark advancing age. Long before it is necessary, they give up all form of active amusement, with the smiling explanation: "Well, I'm getting old. I must leave these pleasures for younger folks." Of their own accord they take to unconventional, old-fashioned clothes, stiff, ungraceful coiffure and ugly colors, with the same innate idea that all things pretty, becoming or modish, should belong only to an age which they have passed, to a period of their lives which it savors of wickedness to regret or cling to.

And there are others who, while their spirits rebel, yet force themselves to adopt the same policy. They preach themselves lectures on the beauty of old age; on growing old gracefully; on yielding the field and retiring in favor of youth, and all the rest of the philosophy with which people force themselves to become old. Their friends assist them in various ways, and with all sorts of motives. Sometimes it is with love and tenderness they enforce the doctrine: "Let me take the walk, while you sit by the fire. I'm younger than you." "Take this big easy chair, auntie." "This style is the most suitable for one of your age, dear." Sometimes the motives are not so kind, but they ring the same changes: "It must be vanity which makes you select a hat twenty years too young." "Much as I think of her, I must say that in a person of her age such liveliness is ridiculous." "How absurd! She goes out and enjoys herself as much as a young girl!" So pushed along, they, sighing, make the various changes they think necessary in their appearance and manners, and proceed to grow old as fast as possible.

But this woman who hated being old shuddered so hard over the prospect that at last her spirit suggested to her, "Well, don't get old; keep young."

"How?" she inquired, and then proceeded to think it out.

She determined in the first place not to feel old, and never acknowledge until she actually died that she was old. She would keep up all sorts of lively exercise, being resolute against letting herself be "shelved" by anybody, from any motives whatever. She would decline extra warmth, ease and rest, which only invited the stealthy approach of the enemy she was determined to fight. She would keep her body in good condition by all proper means, but not by confessing that limbs and muscles were not meant to be used as long as they were at her service at all. And, above all, she would heed the voice which forever told her: "Don't worry. Keep quiet. Everything is all right." She would keep so thoroughly convinced that everything is all right, that her severe conviction would keep her far above any outward assurance that "things are all wrong." And she felt sure that this quiet certainty of "all being well" in her soul would in time express itself in her face and her whole body in activity, helpfulness, beauty and youth. And how far this one woman succeeded is of less importance than the question, Is not her example better worth following than that of the woman who lent herself to getting old as fast as she was able?—Harper's Bazar.

GRANDMOTHER.

I have a lovely grandmother,
Her hair is white as snow,
And when I take her out to walk
Her step is very slow.

Her voice is kind and gentle, like
The balmy breath of spring;
She never makes me cross, or sad,
But makes me want to sing.

She's always busy as a bee,
With knitting-work at hand;
Or mending socks for little feet
That never still can stand.

When I am naughty, oh, how sad
And sorry grandma is;
I would much rather make her glad
And have her loving kiss.

And often when the twilight falls,
She sits back in her chair,
And shuts her eyes and folds her hands—
I think she is at prayer.

And I am sure she prays for me,
So thoughtless and so wild,
And asks the Father up on high
To bless her little child.

Silent Voices.

We are often enraptured by the eloquence of speech, and thrilled by the power of music. We mingle in the throng and commotion of human life. But there are sweeter joys and higher pleasures than these. Silence has a tongue more potent than the jargon of human voices.

Go into the sick-room where, resigned and serene, the Christian lies awaiting the summons to come up home; the eye, the countenance, the expressive silence tell an eloquent story where no word is uttered.

We saw a frail boy who had never walked a step, whom the people pitied, and said, "Poor fellow?" But he was always cheerful, and never complained at his lot, while others, who said he had a hard life wheeling about the room, worried and fretted over many things. And so his sweet and gentle life was an eloquent speech which no words can utter.

Go, then, to the graves where loved ones sleep. Some of them have long been there. The leaning stones and touches of time tell the story. But how we recall their unselfishness, their devotion! In the silence they are talking to us, though no words fall on our ears. How ambition and passion are rebuked as we stand by the graves of our dear dead, where dried leaves are rustling, to remind us of our short stay, and where their silent voices, loving, pathetic, tender, are calling us away to the better and eternal life!—Selected.

The Mother Power.

For four and forty years I have been preaching the good tidings of the Word, and would not change places with a king, but I doubt if I ever would have been drawn to the service of Christ Jesus but for the faithfulness of that home preacher who rocked my cradle. At the starting point of nearly every minister's life stands a Christian mother. Dr. Potts requested all of us students in Princeton Theological Seminary who had praying mothers to rise up, and in an instant nearly the whole one hundred and fifty were on their feet. There we stood, a living witness of the power of a mother's prayers and a mother's shaping influence and example.

We pastors must not take on airs. There is a ministry that is older and deeper and more potent than ours; it is that ministry which presides over the crib and puts the first touches of gospel influences upon the infant soul. Before even the Sunday-school begins, the mother has already begun, and has been molding the plastic wax of character for weal or woe, for heaven or hell. A tremendous power this—it is the same power which sent Samuel out of the home of godly Hannah, and wicked Ahaziah out of the home of godless Jezebel. Both of them "walked in the way of his mother."—The Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

Reformation in men whom women think of marrying should be tried before marriage. A man who can not be reformed then, and by the woman whom he professes to love, and to whom he is making courtship, is not likely to be reformed afterwards, when he has ceased to be a suitor.—Western Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jno. B. Kent, P. C., Bayou Chicot charge, Louisiana Conference: "The Lord has not forsaken us in these parts. Preached a few days last week at Lone Pine Saw Mill—a new point; closed with three accessions and a handsome collection for the purpose of finishing the parsonage. Have had 15 accessions up to date, and baptized 12 children. Finances are low, but the preacher and his family have not suffered."

Rev. Ben. P. Jaco, Abbeville, Miss., July 4: "The District Conference for Grenada district was held here during the past week. It was well attended by the preachers, though not so well by laymen. The Conference was very harmonious, interesting and profitable. Every interest was diligently looked after, which is but a natural consequence when Bro. Burroughs is at the helm. We concluded the week with a Quarterly Conference for this circuit, and the organization of a strong Epworth League. The Conference was a great blessing to our town, and we hope to reap much as we go on."

Rev. G. A. Guice, P. C., Hermanville, June 19: "We celebrated Children's Day at this place on the fourth Sunday in May, and it was a day of joy and spiritual refreshing here. The children performed their parts assigned them well, even to the collection, for almost every child in the school contributed something, and most of them had earned the money with their own hands. The collection amounted to $7.30. Our second quarterly meeting is over. The presiding elder was with us and did some splendid preaching. We like him very much. Our finances are somewhat behind, and the spiritual condition of the church is not what it should be; but we are praying for and expect to see better times before the close of this year. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. F. B. Ormond, DeKalb, Miss.: "A revival meeting was recently held in the town of DeKalb, which lasted ten days, and was quite a success in many respects. A goodly number of the members of the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian Churches were blessed wonderfully, and the membership thus revived considerably. During the meeting Rev. N. M. Clark, J. A. Moore, H. J. Moore, and W. T. Browning rendered faithful services. This scribe also did what he could. The preaching by Revs. N. M. Clark and W. T. Browning was plain and forcible. The meeting was indeed a grand blessing to me. Five or six children applied for membership in the different churches. During the meetings Rev. R. A. Breland and wife, and Rev. H. J. Moore, L. P., received the blessing of entire sanctification, and many others in DeKalb are seeking the blessing. Glory to God."

Rev. W. J. Porter: "At our last Conference I was assigned to Indian Bayou circuit. Our move was neither long or expensive. Free transportation was furnished by the brethren, and our present abode reached in less than a day. We had a pleasant reception and a sumptuous repast in the parsonage. My predecessor had been abundant in labors; but as his family did not occupy the parsonage, it had been neglected. We soon had the grass burned away, and in a short time erected a nice barn. A little later enclosed a garden with a neat fence; also front and back yard and horse lot. Have also fenced a two-acre pasture, and have the material to enclose five acres of additional pasturage. Put one court of paint on the parsonage, and hope to have another soon, which, all told, will be upwards of $200 worth of improvements this year. Public services well attended. Bro. Beard held my second Quarterly Conference last week, and preached in the spirit of our great Commissioner. I have baptized thirteen this year. Received nine into the church. Organized two new Sunday-schools, and reorganized two others. We have five schools comprised of 336 scholars and 56 officers and teachers. We are preparing for a circuit picnic for all the schools on July 4, and desire your presence. God bless you."

THE MICROSCOPE.

A careful microscopical examination and chemical analysis of the urine, is a valuable aid in determining the nature of many chronic diseases, particularly those of the nervous system, blood, liver, kidneys, and bladder. These aids make it possible to treat such diseases successfully at a distance, without personal examination of the patient. Thus Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Inflammation of the Bladder, Gravel, and other Diseases of the Urinary Organs are successfully treated; Nervous Debility, Exhaustion, Dropsy, Liver Disease, and many other Chronic Maladies are cured without seeing the patient. REVIVAL NOTES FROM NORTH KEMPER.

The Lord has been blessing his people at Mt. Pleasant Church. We have just closed one of the grandest revivals this writer has ever experienced. Some of the old brethren say, "It was the best meeting ever held at Mt. Pleasant." The preaching was done by Rev. R. A. Breland, and it was with power. As the result of the meeting we give: 16 or 20 bright conversions, 10 or 12 reclamations; quite a number professed to have received a clean heart; several family altars erected; a weekly prayer meeting established. Special stress was laid upon the necessity and possibility of living above sin. To God be the glory.

F. B. ORMOND, P. C.

Rev. B. P. Fullilove, P. C., Mashulaville circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "Our parsonage is undergoing some improvement. The P. and H. M. Society appropriated $75, and the circuit a like sum. We have added one room and a gallery fronting all the way. We have an ell twenty-eight feet; we have it partly ceiled. Mashulaville is ahead of everything she has done in the past. We are expecting a gracious revival at every appointment, for which we earnestly ask the prayers of all the brethren. Wife is in very ill health. I was called home from District Conference last Saturday (June 9); found her doing very well. She had another bad spell Sunday (June 10). I also earnestly ask the prayers of the brethren in her behalf, that she may be speedily restored to health. We are sending out the Macedonian cry all over our district: 'Come over and help us.' 'Help those women who have labored with us in the gospel.'"

Nashville Advocate please copy.

Rev. J. W. Raper, P. C., Nettleton circuit, Miss.: "This has been the best year we have ever had. We have had more to do and have done more, and have received more blessings than in any year since we have been in the work. There has been some advancement spiritually, but not as much as we desire. There is a tide of worldliness sweeping over the churches throughout this circuit which is destructive in many ways. It gives the sinner an excuse for not becoming religious, and helps him to make an argument against the church. It helps the young convert to feel that all that is needed in order to be saved is to become a member of the church. The Lord has said, 'Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.' And, again, 'Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.' And we have the injunction in Hebrews, 'Go on to perfection.' We must work if we would keep in a state of justification. Brethren, let us do more work in the Master's service than ever before. Pray for us."

Rev. W. W. Simmons: "We commenced a meeting at Fayette on April 27. Bro. B. S. Rayner was here at the beginning and remained six days, preaching twice a day to the delight and edification of all. Then came Bro. Hodges, of Cary. Everything being now ready, the inimitable Joe Jones came and remained nine days. Joe, as usual, began grubbing at the very tap root of sin, and before the meeting closed there were very few of those old roots and snags but what he had given a lick and pull. Joe's preaching was plain and pointed and went direct to the hearts and consciences of the people. Visible results: 23 accessions to our church and 4 to the other churches, the membership greatly revived, and the town stirred from center to circumference. Then resting three days, we began a meeting at Harriston with Bro. P. H. Hinwse; but soon Bros. Crymes, Crisler, Anders and Guice came to our assistance. All these brethren did fine preaching, and the Holy Spirit was present in every service. We continued fifteen days. Twenty-one joined the church, many of them prominent citizens and business men of the town. These meetings have done untold good for our community. To God be all the glory. Finances coming up well. Harriston is the home of Dr. C. W. Campbell, and to him we owe much for services rendered during our meeting."

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, Walnut Grove, Miss., June 13: "Walnut Grove is moving forward. Attendance upon public worship good. Sunday-school interests are improving, though there is still room for improvement. Prayer meetings not so good. We have organized one young people's prayer meeting that gives promise of accomplishing much for those who participate. Returning from my appointment last Monday, I met an Indian whom I had met for the first time a week previous. He asked, 'Got your Bible with you?' I replied, 'Yes.' He then asked me to read I. John iii. I did so, and commented some on it. The verse attracting his attention most was the third: 'And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.' I soon learned that he belonged to the Holiness people (so called), but who have done no little injury to our churches through this section by the erroneous teaching of their preachers. They have about spent their force by denouncing the different denominations. But the members of our church who have been led off are now in a bewildered state, which in many instances is fatal to their religious experience. Mr. Editor, it seems to me that these men who set themselves up as teachers of the Word will have much to answer for before the Lord, the righteous Judge. The doctrine of Christian perfection, as taught by Mr. Wesley, is wholesome, uplifting; but as perverted by some of these self-appointed Holiness preachers through this section, can never lead their followers into perfect love."

OBITUARIES.

COLLINS—EMMETT EUGENE, son of Dr. R. M. and C. E. Collins, was born in St. Helena parish, La., Nov. 28, 1878, and died Feb. 28, 1894. When taken sick he was in attendance at school in Gillsburg, Miss., where he had been a pupil about fifteen months in the Gillsburg Collegiate Institute. He was frequently complimented by his teachers for his good, moral conduct, and the rapid advancement made in his studies. He was received into the M. E. Church, South, on profession of faith at Darlington, St. Helena parish, La., by the writer.

Emmett was lovely in person and disposition, bright in intellect, attractive in conversation, and a model of nearly every Christian virtue. The deep interest manifested in him during his long illness showed how much he was loved by all the community. When told that he must die, his reply was: "I am ready. God's will be done." God's sunlight was all sufficient to guide the young trusting Christian through the dark valley. He was not afraid to die.

His remains were laid to rest in the family graveyard. Many friends sympathize with the bereaved family, and sincerely deplore the death of one so young and lovely; but reverentially we must bow to the will of him who doeth all things well.

Did I not come with an offering of love to lay upon the grave of my dear young friend, my heart would fret under its burden of sorrow. Emmett was so gentle and true in disposition, that he entwined himself around the hearts of all who knew him. As a son, he was ever obedient and loving. His intellect was very bright, but with it was blended so much modesty that the excellences of mind and heart were but best known by the loved ones at home; there the gems of his noble life shone with a brightness unperceived by the world. Sad indeed is home without him. We weep to know that he is forever gone.

May this thought bring comfort: Your dear one is only gone before; there at the beautiful gate he will be watching and waiting for you. To the deeply afflicted parents we say: "Be resigned. God knows what is best, and has done all for your good. You are now the parents of a bright angel; meet him there. Say with the pure and now sainted son, 'Thy will be done.'"

N. J. ROBERTS.

RISHER—In the death of our sister student, Miss LILLIE RISHER, our Sabbath-school has lost an industrious and faithful pupil, ever zealous in the performance of any duties assigned to her. Our community has lost a useful and estimable member; a willing and cheerful leader and helper in all good works. A devoted Christian's soul has winged its flight from earth to heaven, whose whole life, sweet and gentle in all of its elements, is worthy of our emulation, and the memory of which should be treasured as something more than precious.

We know she met death without fear, and that she has gone from this earthly life into the life everlasting, across which the shadow of grief and sorrow shall never fall.

To the stricken family, who have lost a loving daughter and sister, we extend our sincerest sympathy. While the death of a dear one may cut like a dagger in the soul, still God gives the assurance that death is but the ushering of the spirit into his presence, and that those who are faithful unto death shall meet their loved ones and enjoy their society forever.

R. P. CLAYTON, for Committee.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The strikers are losing ground in St Louis. All but 40 of the 350 men employed in freight yard work had returned to work on July 9.

Gov. Jones, of Alabama, concentrated the State troops at Birmingham, and dispersed the strikers at the railroad yards at the point of the bayonet.

About 300 feet of the Illinois Central wharf at Southport, just above this city, has caved into the river. It was evidently caused by a change in the current.

The American Railway Union barred negroes from membership at its recent meeting in Chicago, and the Chicago negroes are taking steps to help to defeat the union's present strike.

Secretary Herbert has issued orders to stop all work in the navy yards, which would have to be paid for out of the fund for increasing the navy, as no appropriation has been made for this fund.

It is said that if Mr. Pullman will not agree to arbitration, or otherwise settle the differences existing between the Pullman Company and its ex-employees, Wednesday morning will witness a cessation of all labor on the part of the allied trades in Chicago, if not in the whole country.

At a meeting of the various organizations of labor in this city, on July 9, sympathy was expressed for the strikers elsewhere, while a committee was appointed to confer with the merchants and urge leniency toward the imprisoned agitators who were arrested on the charge of inciting a strike. The meeting leaned toward peaceful measures.

All the main buildings of the World's Fair, except the Horticultural Building, the Woman's Building, the Art Palace, the Machinery and the United States Government Building, were almost entirely burned on July 5. They were the property of the Columbian Exposition Salvage Company, and had been purchased for the Exposition Company for about $90 000.

Three visiting organizers of the American Railway Union were arrested and arraigned before United States Commissioner Wright, in this city, on July 7. They are charged with unlawfully conspiring and combining in restraint of trade and commerce between Louisiana and the other States of the United States. They were placed under bond of fifteen thousand dollars each.

President Cleveland issued a proclamation at midnight, July 8, declaring Chicago in a state of rebellion. A determined effort will be made to stamp out lawlessness. Frenzied at their previous successes, the railroad strikers at that place committed all sorts of depredations, and wound up by charging upon the government troops, who checked their impetus by two volleys of musketry. One man was killed and many wounded.

Since the passage of the Tariff bill through the Senate there has been a good deal of speculation on the probable action of the conference committee. It has already been announced that the House would make a determined fight for removal of duties imposed by the Senate on raw materials, and there is no doubt that the administration desires to have this change made in the Senate bill and a nearer approach to the Wilson bill.

The great railroad strike, which started at the Pullman shops, has spread until every section of the United States is affected or menaced by it. On July 6 bloodshed, riot and arson held sway in Chicago. Six of the strikers were shot on that day for riotous conduct, and several police officers were severely hurt by stones and clubs. Thousands of miles of railway are paralyzed; trains and engines have been burned and wrecked; cars have been plundered of freight in transit, and the freight in many more has rotted from neglect. The commerce of a great extent of country has been utterly deranged; many industries have been forced to suspend operations for lack of material; cities and towns are overrun by mobs, and many thousands of people are reduced to extreme distress; while rioting, burnings and bloodshed are common features of the situation.

FOREIGN.

Thirty-nine new cases of cholera and thirteen deaths from the disease were reported in St. Petersburg on July 8.

It is said that an Anglo-Dutch syndicate is anxious to take up and complete the Nicaragua Canal if the enterprise is abandoned by the Americans.

Representative measures against the anarchists in France will be introduced in the Chamber of Deputies. It is intended to dispense with jury trials in the cases of anarchists, as the juries always hesitate to convict.

Nothing Strange.

Intelligent people, who realize the important part the blood bears in keeping the body in a normal condition, find nothing strange in the number of diseases that Hood's Sarsaparilla is able to cure. So many troubles result from impure blood, that the best way to treat them is through the blood, and it is far better to use only harmless vegetable compounds than to dose to excess with quinine, calomel and other drugs. By treating the blood with Hood's Sarsaparilla, scrofula, salt rheum, dyspepsia and neuralgia, can all be cured.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The annual camp meeting for Topikew, Sumnit charge, Brookhaven district, will begin on Thursday, Aug. 9 and will be continued one week. Brethren of the ministry and others are cordially invited. Come, brethren, in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

H. P. LEWIS, Pastor.

The Orville-Whillington Camp Meeting will open Thursday, Aug. 16, next, and continue eight days.

The camp ground is located in East Feliciana parish, eleven miles southeast of Clinton, three and a half miles west of Greensville. There will be ample accommodations for all who come. Preachers raised to free of charge. All preachers friendly to camp meetings cordially invited in attend. There will be no gate fee.

By order of the committee.

A. N. BROWN, Sec. Com.

The camp meeting at Bethel Camp Ground, ten miles west of Centreville, twelve miles northwest of Wilson and seven east of Woodville, will begin on Thursday, Aug. 9 and continue over two Sundays. Everybody is invited. Come and build a tent, or pitch a cloth tent, or camp in a wagon; or come to our commodious hotel, where ample accommodations can be had at lowest rates. Come and stay through, but the meeting, or as many days as you can; or if no more, come and stay one day and get your dinner at the hotel or bring it with you, as you please—but be sure to come. No rate fees are charged. We take collections after the old Methodist fashion, to meet our expenses. We are out of debt and intend to remain so. All travelling preachers attending will be cared for by the association, and their expenses to and from the railroad paid. Leave the railroad either at Centreville or Woodville. If at Centreville, report to Mr. Richard Whitaker; if at Woodville, to Rev. H. Walter Featherston. The preaching generally, and especially of the Woodville district are earnestly solicited to be present.

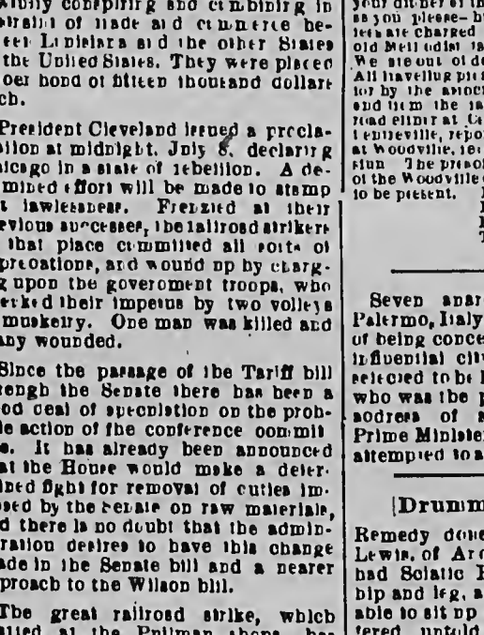
Seven anarchists were arrested in Palermo, Italy, on July 8, on the charge of being concerned in a plot to murder influential citizens. Among the men selected to be killed was Gov. Lafalina, who was the promoter of the popular address of sympathy presented to Prime Minister Crispi after Lega had attempted to assassinate him.

Drummond's Lightning

Remedy done great work for H. J. Lewis, of Anderson's Mills, S. C. He had Sciatic Rheumatism in the left hip and leg, and for six weeks was not able to sit up or walk a step, and suffered untold agonies. After using Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism for two weeks, he wrote that he could walk and that the pain was gone. If you suffer from Rheumatism and wish to be cured, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the two large bottles will be sent to your express address. Agents wanted.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder World's Fair Highest Award.

Irving's shipyards and those of Sir Gray, at Hartlepool, England, have closed down owing to the strike of the moulders. Four thousand workmen are thus thrown out of employment. It is expected that other yards will also be forced to close.



Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery.

Why is Pearline the mark for every soap powder, or so-called washing compound, which is brought out? Everything is called "the same as" or "as good as" Pearline. None of them say "better"—they cannot. They should not say "as good as"—they are not. The simple fact that Pearline is so largely imitated would be enough to prove it the best. And when a poor washing compound can do so much damage, do you want anything but the best?

PEARLINE is manufactured only by 369 JAMES PYLE, New York.

Free to Every Subscriber, New or Old.

FIVE USEFUL BOOKS.

We offer free to all our subscribers, new and old, on conditions named below, five books of sixty or more pages each, octavo size, double column, paper bound. The following very brief description will give a general idea of the character of these books:

THE PRACTICAL POULTRY KEEPER.—Embraces all the latest lines on the subject, finely illustrated, and is a complete treatise, covering the whole subject. Gives minute instructions in feeding, rearing, care and management of poultry; how to make an incubator and how to raise artificially-hatched chickens; how to preserve eggs; how to pack eggs and poultry for market.

THE PRACTICAL HORSE AND CATTLE DOCTOR.—This book was written by two distinguished veterinarians, one a specialist in diseases of the horse, the other in those of the cow. It describes the symptoms of the diseases with which horses and cattle are afflicted, and in such a plain and thorough manner that the malady will be readily detected; it also gives the cause of every disease, a knowledge of which in many cases will avert the evil; and it likewise contains plain and explicit directions for the treatment of disease, as well as the correction of all unruly and vicious habits, etc.

THE HANDY CYCLOPÆDIA OF EVERYDAY WANTS.—This book is a compendium of useful and valuable household information. It contains hundreds of valuable recipes for making and doing almost everything about a house, and is filled with hints and suggestions valuable to every housekeeper, alphabetically arranged.

THE LADIES' MODEL FANCY WORK MANUAL.—This new book embodies all the late ideas in needlework, crochet, knitting and embroidery. It contains designs and directions for making nearly fifty different patterns of knitted laces, many crochet patterns, also instruction for making many useful articles of wearing apparel and numerous articles for home decoration, among which are tidies, chair scarfs, doylies, purses, table mats, shopping bags, lamp shades, shawls, A Ghans, toilet sets, counterpanes, sofa cushions, chair covers, pin-cushions, dressing slippers, babies' socks, etc. It also contains full and complete instructions in the art of embroidery, with numerous beautiful designs. The whole is illustrated by ninety-five engravings.

HOW TO SECURE A BUSINESS EDUCATION AT HOME.—This work contains practical instructions in bookkeeping, penmanship, general business, business law, commercial forms, etc. A very valuable work to an aspiring young person who has not the means to take a course in a commercial college.

FREE TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The regular retail price of the above-named books is ten cents each, or fifty cents for the set of five. We will send the entire set free, postpaid, to every new subscriber received between now and the first of September. Also to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription at the regular rate of two dollars per annum up to September, 1895. These books would cost you fifty cents were you to buy them direct from the publisher. You have a chance to get them absolutely free. Moreover, you will give the regular commission to our preachers for all subscriptions sent in under this proposition, provided the cash accompanies the order, and, provided, furthermore, that the commission is to be paid in books selected from a list which we will furnish on application. IF WE KNEW.

If we knew the distant future,
With its weary load of care;
If we knew the woe to waiting,
And the burdens hard to bear,
We would wait with dread and fear
Till the time at last drew near.

Well for us that we can see not
All the sorrow on life's way,
And God wisely hides the future,
Gives us strength for every day,—
Strength to bear our grief and sorrow,
Trusting for a glad to-morrow.

True, we sometimes grow impatient,
Would our future like to know;
But if it was spread before us,
O how faint our hearts would grow.
Then wait gladly, God knows best;
Wait with patience for the rest.

Judge Grosscup's Charge to the Grand Jury.

We give below some extracts from the charge of Judge Grossonp, of Chicago, to the Federal grand jury sworn in to investigate the strike, the result being that Debs and his leading supporters were quickly indicted:

Gentlemen: You have been summoned here to enquire whether any of the laws within this judicial district have been violated. You have come into an atmosphere and amid occurrences that may well cause reasonable men to question whether the laws of the United States are yet supreme. Thanks to resolute manhood, and to that enlightened intelligence which perceives the necessity of a vindication of the law before any other adjustments are possible, the government of the United States is still supreme. You, doubtless, feel as I do, that opportunities of life, under present conditions, were not entirely equal, and that changes are needed to forestall some of the dangerous tendencies of current industrial life. But neither the torch of the incendiary, nor the weapon of the insurrectionist, nor the inflamed tongue of him who incites to fire and sword, is the instrument to bring about reforms.

The government of the United States has enacted laws, first, to protect itself and its authority as a government, and, secondly, to protect its authority over those agencies, to which, under the Constitution and laws, it extends governmental regulations.

Insurrection is a rising against civil or political authority; the open and active opposition of a number of persons to the execution of law in a city or State.

Now, the laws of the United States forbid, under penalty, any person from obstructing or retarding the passage of the mail, and make it the duty of the officer to arrest such offenders and bring them before the court.

If, therefore, it shall appear to you that any person or persons have willfully obstructed or retarded the mails, and that their attempted arrest for such offense has been opposed by such number of persons as would constitute a general uprising in that particular locality, and as threatens, for the time being, the civil and political authority, then the fact of an insurrection public the meaning of the law has been established; and he who by speech, writing, promises or other incitements, assists in setting on foot or carrying it along, or gives it aid or comfort, is guilty of a violation of law. It is not necessary that there should be bloodshed; it is not necessary that the dimensions should be so portentous as to insure probable success to constitute an insurrection. It is necessary, however, that the rising should be in opposition to the execution of the laws of the United States, and should be so formidable as, for the time being, to defy the authority of the United States. When men gather to resist the civil or political power of the United States, or to oppose the execution of the laws, and are in such force that the civil authorities are inadequate to put them down, that considerable military force is needed to accomplish the result, they become insurgents, and every person who knowingly incites, aids or abets them, no matter what his motive may be, is likewise an insurgent.

This penalty is severe, and, as I have said, is designed to protect the government and its authority against direct attack. There are other provisions of law designed to protect those particular agencies which come within governmental control. To those I will now call your attention.

The mails are in the special keeping and care of the government and laws of the United States. To insure unhindered transmission, it is made an offense to knowingly and wilfully obstruct or retard the passage of the mail or any carriage, horse, driver or carrier carrying the same."

That constitutes conspiracy to hinder or obstruct the mails will be touched upon in connection with the subject to which I now call your attention. The Constitution places the regulation of commerce between the several States and between the States and foreign nations within the keeping of the United States government. Anything which is designed to be transported for commercial purposes from one State to another, and is in actual transit, and any passenger who is actually engaged in any such interstate commercial transaction, and any car or carriage actually transporting or employed in transporting such passenger or thing, are the agencies and subjects under the law of interstate commerce, and any conspiracy in restraint of such trade or commerce is an offense against the United States.

I recognize, however, the right of labor to organize. Each man in America is a free man, and so long as he does not interfere with the rights of others, he has the right to do with that which is his what he pleases. In the highest sense, a man's arm is his own, and aside from contract relations, no one but himself can direct when it shall be raised to work or shall be dropped to rest. The individual option to work or to quit is the imperishable right of a free man.

The individual may feel himself alone unable to cope with the conditions that confront him, or unable to comprehend the myriad of considerations that ought to control his conduct. He is entitled to the highest wage that the strategy of work or cessation from work may bring, and the limitations upon his intelligence and opportunities may be such that he does not choose to stand upon his own principle of strategic or other conditions. His right to choose a leader, one who observes, thinks and wills for him—a brain skilled to observe his interest—is no greater pretension than that which is recognized in every other department of industry. So far and within reasonable limits associations of this character are not only lawful, but are, in my judgment, beneficial when they do not restrain individual liberty and are under enlightened and conscientious leadership.

But they are subject to the same laws as other associations. The leaders to whom are given the vast power of judging and acting for the members are simply, in that respect, their trustees. Their conduct must be judged like that of other trustees: by the extent of their lawful authority and the good faith with which they have exercised it. No man in his individual right can lawfully demand and insist upon conduct by others which will lead to an injury to a third person's lawful rights.

The railroads carrying the mails and interstate commerce have a right to the service of each of its employees until each lawfully chooses to quit, and any concerted action to demand or insist under the penalty or threat upon their quitting to the injury of the mail service or the prompt transportation of interstate commerce is a conspiracy, unless such demand or insistence is in pursuance of a lawful authority conferred upon them by the men themselves, and is made in good faith in the execution of such authority.

If it appears to you, therefore, applying the illustration to the occurrences that will be brought to your attention, that any two or more persons, by concert, insisted or demanded under effective penalties and threats upon men quitting their employment to the obstruction of the mails or interstate commerce, you may inquire whether they did these acts as strangers to these men or whether they did them under the guise of trustees or leaders of an association to which these men belonged.

I wish again, in conclusion, to impress upon you the fact that present emergency is to vindicate law. If no one has violated the law under the rules I have laid down, it needs no vindication; but if there has been such violence, there should be quick, prompt and adequate indictment.

I confess that the problems which are made the occasion of pretext for the present disturbances have not received the consideration they deserve. It is our duty, as citizens, to take them up and by candid and courageous discussion ascertain what wrongs exist and what remedies can be applied. But neither the existence of such problems nor the neglect of the public hitherto to adequately consider them justifies the violation of law or the bringing on of general lawlessness. Let us first restore peace and punish the offenders of the law, and the atmosphere will be clear to think over the claims of those who have real grievances. First vindicate the law. Until that is done no other questions are in order.

The Need of the Hour.

Much interest was attached to the meeting of the General Conference in Memphis. Thousands of Methodists in all parts of this Southland watched with eager and anxious eyes the proceedings of this legislative body of the church. No report presented for acceptance or rejection by the various committees is of more importance than that on missions. It was for this purpose the Son of man came "to seek and save that which was lost." It was for this the apostles were sent forth; in short, all the ministries of life, divine and human, were ordained and established. The great, loving heart of the Son of God went forth in tender compassion and yearning sympathy for the prisoners and slaves of sin, not only in Jerusalem, but to the uttermost parts of the earth. Neither time, place, race nor creed should be considered in the great work of extending his kingdom. The deeper the darkness, the more need of the light; the denser the ignorance and superstition, the more intense should be the zeal of the missionary and the church to give these the wisdom from above. No valid argument can be formed against missionary work. At home and abroad, wherever the sway and shadow of sin obtains, the church should sweep the fields with the eye of an eagle, and send her messengers of life and freedom. Much strength has been wasted and time lost by drawing invidious comparisons between the work abroad and at home, as though the kingdom of Christ was divided, and a soul in China of more value than one in Louisiana.

These discussions are irrelevant, and do not reach the heart and core of this momentous subject. Wherever sin abounds—in New York or Pekin; in the centre of civilization or the heart of Africa—there the command is to go or send. "There are heathens at our doors," cries the cold, careless nonworker in the Master's vineyard. "Yes, I know it," said Dr. Trippett, of the Louisiana Conference; "I have been preaching to them forty years." The good old man was rebuking the dead materialism and idolatry in the church. Certainly there should be no disagreement or division here. Wherever humanity is steeped in sin, it needs the gospel.

Here in our own State are fields white unto the harvest; aye, the golden grain is falling and waiting under the blighting winds of neglect. Southern and Central Louisiana could easily employ twenty mission preachers, and not trend on any territory already occupied. There are large areas of country, and towns containing from 2,500 to 5,000 inhabitants, practically destitute of the gospel. Markaville, the parish seat of Avoyelles, in the midst of a populous, rich prairie and wooded country, has no Protestant preaching. Napoleonville, Thibodeaux and Houma are not awakened by the sturdy sons of Wesley and his message of free grace and full salvation. But you say these are Creole Catholic towns. Some seem to think there never were any Americans, as they are, in these destitute regions. But our people are numerous there, and when not restrained from evil, take on the worse features of the older inhabitants, and frequently neglect to practice their few virtues.

People are gathering from all parts to this land of balmy air and glorious climate, and frequently clamor for preaching. I do not know what inducements other fields may present, but I am sure large returns will follow in these regions. An elect lady asked me, not long since, why we did not have preaching in our church in Thibodeaux, and I could frame no intelligible answer. Why? why? Have we lost our faith, zeal and courage? I can't answer these questions, but I know the need, and feel impelled to write. Of this I am assured: In many parts of Louisiana our people are dying, and there are none to preach the words of eternal life. S. J. DAVIES.

Opelousas District Conference.

The twenty-sixth session of the Opelousas District Conference was called to order by the presiding elder, Dr. Beard, on Thursday morning, July 5, the opening sermon having been preached by Rev. M. C. Manley on the previous night. The good people of Crowley had been preparing and looking forward to the Conference for some time, and it was gratifying to note that every pastor in the district was present except Bros. Singletary and Lyons, who were providentially absent. Some disappointment was caused by the absence of Dr. Carter, Bro. Van Valkenburgh, and the editor of the ADVOCATE, as well as by the absence of many of the lay delegates elected. Will some one rise to suggest a plan to secure full attendance of the laity at these gatherings?

A good program on Sunday-school and mission work had been laid out, and the discussions of these subjects throughout two days proved very interesting.

Saturday was devoted to reports, which showed considerable advance in many respects throughout the district. Several new works are being enterprised in outlying sections, which promise much for the extension of our work.

Our French Mission, under Bro. Joe Berwick, represents the beginning of a work which has been delayed too long. Some one will have to meet a fearful reckoning on the subject of this neglected population.

The Conference raised about $400 toward the support of several new missions just established, and passed a resolution declaring the necessity of supporting, at least, three missionaries in the district, and condemning the policy of dribbling out our home missionary funds on incompetent men, and trying to cover too large a territory with too little money.

The following also was passed by the Conference:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that our district, and the whole of Southern Louisiana which sorely needs the help of the Church Extension Boards, has been overlooked by these Boards, and that we call the attention of these Boards to the extreme need in this section.

(Signed) W. W. DRAKE,
J. S. SANDERS.

Prof. Wier ably represented Centenary College, and the Conference seemed generally hopeful on the subject.

The preaching throughout the Conference by Bros. Manley, Porter, Sanders, Foust, Montgomery, Parker, Denson, Beard, Riddle, Kelly and Lee was spiritual, the Conference was harmonious, and the love-feast was a feast, indeed. From the standpoint of the pastor who entertained, it was a blessing.

Capt. J. N. Pharr, W. T. Blacksher, S. N. Curry and C. P. Hampton were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference.

W. WINANS DRAKE, Sec.

Holly Springs District Conference.

The twenty-fourth session of the Holly Springs District Conference was held at Waterford, Miss., July 6-8; Rev. Joseph B. Stone, P. E., in the chair. The session was pleasant and profitable. All the traveling preachers of the district were present, and the attendance of laymen was up to the average. In addition, we were favored with the presence and counsels of Rev. Dr. Cooper, agent of Millsaps College; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Conference colporteur; Revs. J. A. Bowen and B. P. Jaco.

The Conference resolved to co-operate with the Sardis and Grenada districts in the erection of a Joseph H. Brooks Memorial Cottage on the campus of Millsaps College, and appointed the following committee to secure the necessary funds: Rev. J. B. Stone, Judge J. T. Fant, J. S. Oakley, J. C. Lowe, and Prof. E. H. Randle. Bro. Brooks spent many years of his useful ministry in the bounds of this district, and his honored dust sleeps in the Holly Springs Cemetery; hence it is eminently proper that this district should have a part in the building of the memorial cottage.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the next Annual Conference: Thos. Eason, O. S. Evans, J. R. B. Cooper, J. T. Fant. Alternates: M. C. Pegues, W. S. Blackburn.

Mount Pleasant was selected as the seat of the next District Conference.

The hospitality of the citizens of Waterford was unbounded, and appropriate resolutions of thanks were adopted. J. S. OAKLEY, Sec.

Dr. Stephenson's Impressions of America.

Many of your readers will remember that the Rev. T. Bowman Stephenson, D. D., LL.D., was a visitor to our recent General Conference at Memphis, and delighted large audiences by his sermons and addresses. Upon his return to England he was interviewed in regard to his impressions. The following selections will probably be of interest to the readers of the ADVOCATE:

"You have traveled a great deal in the United States. Do you believe that the total prohibition of the liquor traffic works out well?"

"Most decidedly. Of course, it does not make a State perfect. But the results are good. The minimum of crime and pauperism and lunacy is reached in those States where it is enforced. There are evasions of the law, and its opponents sneer and say that you can always be taken into back rooms, where you may have what you like to drink; but even then it is better that a man should have to go into a back room to get drunk than that he should be allowed to do so openly."

"In your journeys through the Southern States this time, did it strike you that the attitude of the white and black races to each other was improving?"

"It is improving. The black race is making wonderful advances; and, as time goes on, the white people are on better and better terms with their black neighbors."

"Do the Southern people generally approve of lynchings?"

"By no means. It is the rougher element which always causes them. The people, on the whole, are opposed to them. But there are great difficulties in the question, and not the least is that of maintaining law and order in new and remote countries."

"What is your opinion of the American press?"

"It is far more sensational than the English. Even the best papers are sensational. Criminality of all sorts is enlarged upon far more there than here. Some of the worst papers have a distinctly bad effect; but there are others which stand, as it were, head and shoulders above the moral level of the general press—the Philadelphia Ledger, for example. This is one of the few newspapers that does not publish a Sunday edition. Most daily papers are published every day in the year. The American press is very enterprising."

"Is it used as a vehicle for gambling as much as the English press?"

"As much, if not more. There are hardly any, if any, newspapers which do not publish the sporting news."

"One more question, Doctor. Were you interviewed in America?"

Dr. Stephenson shook his head. "Yes, several times, although my work was not public. I refused a great many requests. In some instances I asked the editors of newspapers not to say anything about my visit. I was over there chiefly on the Children's Home business, and took little public work, only preaching once each Sunday, and rarely addressing a meeting. American journalists carry the personal element a little too far. The other day—though this was not in the United States; it was at Hamilton, Ontario—I was rung up on the telephone. It was a Monday morning. I came to the instrument, and the man at the other end asked:

"'Are you Dr. Stephenson?'

"'Yes,' I said.

"'You were preaching last night at the Centenary, weren't you?'

"'Yes.'

"'What was your text?'

"I told him.

"'How did you treat it?' was his next question.

"I was obliged to decline to tell him, for it was impossible for me to go through my sermon again to a man at the other end of the telephone wire."

J. S. OAKLEY.

Holly Springs, Miss.

Vetoed by the Mayor.

Mayor Hopkins, of Chicago, who wishes to be understood as the friend of the "liberal element," has aroused the indignation of the better class of citizens and subjected himself to the strictures of the press by vetoing the Sunday-closing ordinance which the Council by a decided majority passed at the instance of the Sunday Rest Association and other organized bodies. The ordinance provided that no store should be opened on Sunday for the sale of "any clothes, dry goods, hats, caps, furnishing goods, jewelry, boots, shoes, hardware, furniture, meats, or groceries." It made, however, an exception in the case of grocery stores, which were to be allowed during the hot months to keep open for awhile on Sunday morning; after 10 A. M. on that day barber shops were also required to close. The passage of this very reasonable ordinance was not urged especially on religious grounds. The object sought was not to swell the church attendance, but to afford needed rest to a large number of persons to whom Sunday traffic has become oppressive, and who hoped to put an end to it by a united effort. The press of that city, which is committed to Sunday closing, is urging the Council to pass the ordinance over the mayor's veto. And this will, doubtless, be done if the various labor organizations insist upon it as they should.—Exchange.

Responsibility for Riot Losses.

Chicago is not only put to great expense to prevent rioting and disturbances growing out of the strike there, but it will have a big bill to pay after the affair is over for property destroyed by the mob. Already over $2,500,000 has been burned or stolen, and should a general strike occur there the total would undoubtedly be greatly swollen, for all the chances are that the rioting would be increased tenfold. For all of these losses the city—that is, the taxpayers—will ultimately have to pay.

Already proceedings have been begun against the city for these damages. The corporation counsel, Ruhens by name, is reported to have made light of them. He admits that the city is liable under the law, but in a tone of triumph he remarks that the burden of proof will be with the railroads and other sufferers to prove their losses.

There is no reason to think that this will not be done. The responsibility of the city is thoroughly established by law, and Chicago has in the case of Pittsburg an instance of what it may expect unless it provides properly for the protection of property against mob violence.

Pittsburg found the obligation resulting from the riot of 1877 so heavy ($5,600,000) that it was obliged to levy a special tax to meet it, and this tax will have to be paid in yearly installments until 1906, or twenty-nine years after the riot occurred. It has taken a full generation to pay off the losses resulting from a few days' strike rioting. With such experience it is not to be wondered at that Pittsburg should have become an extremely pacific and conservative town; that it has frowned at the A. R. U.'s orders to bring about a strike, and that its workingmen, after paying taxes for a generation because of previous trouble, do not want them again.

The decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of the Italians lynched in the Parish Prison released New Orleans from an expected burden in the way of damages for the lynching, but the same decision declared the responsibility of the city in the matter of the destruction of property; and if we ever have strike riots here the people will have to pay for them twice over; first, for the interruption of business; again, for the actual damages to railroads and other companies and individuals.—Times-Democrat.

A New Departure.

A book containing selections from the Scriptures, approved by Protestants and Catholics, is in use in the schools of Toronto, Canada. An immense petition, with 60,000 signers, has been presented to the Chicago Board of Education, asking that this book, or one similar, shall be read in the public schools of that city. It says, among other things:

As the whole religious world united, without objection, in the universal prayer, "Our Father which art in heaven," during the World's Religious Congresses of 1893, we believe that all right-minded classes of Americans now agree on the daily reading in the public schools of suitable selections from the Sacred Scriptures and the recitation of that prayer and two great commandments upon which hang all the law and the prophets, thereby fixing in the minds of the children the vital spiritual principles on which good citizenship and the future welfare of our country so largely depend.

It remains to be seen what will be the fate of this petition. We hardly think that the Catholics will offer much opposition, but the hosts of native and foreign infidels of every hue, which infest Chicago, will array themselves against the proposition, in which both Protestants and Catholics should heartily unite. We are in favor of placing the entire Bible in the public schools, but if we can not get this, we are willing to accept a part.—Presbyterian Banner.

What to Eat.

Professor Atwater has prepared for Secretary Morton three charts to be used for teaching the people economy of food. The first chart contains the nutritive value of the various articles of food—meat, fish, cereals, vegetables, etc., with the potential energy of each; the second represents how much of nutritious matter is contained in 25 cents' worth of each one of these articles; the third gives the amount of tissue, muscle and energy contained in 25 cents' worth of each article. Thus, a quarter of a dollar invested in milk and eggs will give several times as much nutrition as it would if invested in oysters. The same sum spent for round steak will give more energy than can be had in any other form. An attempt will be made to disseminate this information in a practical form, so that a blacksmith, for instance, or a seamstress will know what kinds of food will suit the occupation of each, and how each could get the most for his money.

News comes from Brazil, in the secular press, that Rev. E. A. Tilly, one of our missionaries to that country, sent by the Holston Conference, will likely be court martialed and shot, for having taken sides with the rebels in their recent troubles there. We are slow to believe that this statement is true, since a missionary from America would hardly identify himself with an effort to overthrow a republican form of government. The church will await full particulars with deep interest.—Holston Methodist.

TWILIGHT BELLS.

There has come to my mind a legend,
A thing I had half forgot.
And whether I read it or dreamed it,
Ah, well, it matters not.
It is said that in heaven at twilight
A great bell softly swings,
And man may listen and hearken
To the wonderful music that rings.
If he puts from his heart's inner chamber
All the passion, pain, and strife,
Heartache and weary longing,
That throb in the pulses of life—
If he thrusts from his soul all hatred,
All thoughts of wicked things,
He can hear in the holy twilight
How the bell of the angels rings.
And I think there is in this legend,
If we open our eyes to see,
Somewhat of an inner meaning,
My friend, to you and me.
Let us look in our hearts and question,
Can pure thoughts enter in
To a soul if it be already
The dwelling of thoughts of sin?
So, then, let us ponder a little;
Let us look in our hearts and see
If the twilight bells of the angels
Could ring for us—you and me.

A Walk in Soochow.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

At four o'clock one afternoon we started out from a missionary residence in Soochow for a walk to the Great Canal, which passes just outside the city wall. As we went through the yard gate my companion remarked that we would have an opportunity to see a "cry." Already we heard it. Just around the corner a man was filling the dirt into a rough, new-made grave, in which a small, thick coffin lay, and we knew that it was not, as we had at first thought, a cry over the past dead, but over some one just departed. Two women and two little children composed the funeral assembly. One of the women stood bending over the grave, loudly crying. It seemed that she was literally pouring her soul out and burying it there also. My companion, who understood Chinese, questioned the grave-filler, and learned that he was burying the woman's little daughter; that she had come to her death by being inoculated according to the Chinese method, with small-pox virus inserted in the nose. In the meantime the woman continued to wail, praying to her heathen god to protect her child in the spirit-land, because she was poor and weak, and unable to defend herself among oppressing spirits. And this she loudly cried until the other woman told her to stop. Then my companion advised her to trust rather in Christ, and explained the gospel to her. The grave-filler, especially, seemed to appreciate these remarks.

We walked on and soon came to the city wall. This wall was built originally about the time of Nebuchadnezzar. It is one of the best kept in China. It is in some places of stone, in others of hard brick, about as high as a one-storied house, two or three feet thick, and twelve miles in circumference, with five or six gates. At each gate the wall is thicker and two-fold, with a house on top used formerly as a watch-tower. In the gateway, on one side of the long passage under the wall, lay a man groaning as if in pain. Perhaps it was to attract sympathy from the passers-by, as well as to shelter himself, that he had fallen down there. But no one noticed him, and as we went on my companion remarked that even if one of his fellow-countrymen should be touched and take him under care, and the sick man were to die, his relations would hold the Good Samaritan responsible.

We passed a fort and stood on a stone bridge that spans the canal with a beautiful narrow arch. As we watched the towboats passing under, bearing commerce, as in the ages past, footmen went by with their burdens, and a little crowd gathered around the two foreigners, asking questions, such as whether or not the blue neck-tie worn by one of us was the sign of rank.

We thought of walking on to where a bridge of twenty arches spans the way between a lake and the canal; but it was late and misting. We returned, and while passing under the wall the sick man groaned as before, and called to us. Fearing some contagion, I went quickly ahead, and ascending to the watch-tower from the inner side, saw lying in the weather several pieces of cannon unused since the Tai-Ping rebellion, which half destroyed Soochow a little more than three decades ago. But my companion gave the sick man some money to use in getting to the Christian hospital, and some soldiers promised to assist.

Letter from Mrs. H. F. Johnson.

Bell Buckle, Tenn., June 29, 1894.

MR. EDITOR: I trust my letter will not—by accident, of course—reach the waste-basket, for through the columns of our most popular church organ I desire to reach our friends and former patrons. I never could enjoy a good thing without sharing with my friends, as all my girls will attest, and this is my apology for writing.

From the heading you learn I am living in the beautiful blue-grass hills of Middle Tennessee, and the pride and glory of our town is Webb School for boys. We have fine schools all over the South, but, in my opinion, this one "excelleth them all." Ex-Chancellor Garland, of Vanderbilt University, says: "The academy of Messrs. Webb has no superior, within my knowledge, in the Southern States." The late Bishop McTyeire, who we all honored and loved, said: "I know not its superior; its equal would be hard to find for all the parts of education. I consider myself doing a favor to parents by directing their attention to this school."

I can add nothing to the above; but I feel sure could all parents who have boys to send off know of the unsurpassed advantages to be had here, they would need no urging to send for circular. No father ever watched more tenderly and carefully his children than do they over those entrusted to them, morally, mentally and physically. I have been here with my daughter a part of the past term, and never did I see healthier or happier students—all anxious to improve the shining moments and to please their faithful teachers by doing their duty. The school is limited, and large numbers are turned away annually. I am anxious to have my Mississippi and Louisiana friends share with me this good thing; so please to address the principals, or myself, early—not later than July 20. School opens Aug. 17. My husband sent his two sons here, and referred his own patrons to it as a superior school for boys. They prepare their students for high classes in the universities to which they are admitted without examination.

I learn with much pleasure through Rev. J. W. Chambers of his election to the presidency of Whitworth College. I earnestly hope and pray that success will attend his efforts to carry out the work planned by my noble husband, who sacrificed his life for the advancement of the college. Send your daughters to Whitworth, and your sons to Messrs. Webb.

With kindly greetings to all my friends, I am, Sincerely yours,

MRS. H. F. JOHNSON,
Late of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.

W. F. M. Society of the Jackson District.

Thanks are due Mrs. A. F. Watkins, secretary of the W. F. M. Society of the Jackson district, for a copy of the Minutes of the first session, held at Edwards, April 13-15; Mrs. Howell, district secretary, presiding. With some omissions we have:

"Miss Lydia Austen, who was to have delivered the address of welcome, being absent on account of illness, it was beautifully read by Mrs. Charles Crisler." Response by Mrs. A. F. Watkins.

"Mrs. Howell made her address in a most graceful and pleasing manner, uttering many words of encouragement to the auxiliaries represented, and urging them to come to her aid in the work of the Lord.

"Miss Purnell read a most interesting and unique paper, in which she discussed the strong plea for foreign missions set forth by the women of the different nationalities gathered together in Chicago at the great World's Fair."

The program of the evening service was interspersed with music by the Edwards choir.

"The religious exercises of the second day, morning session, were conducted by Mrs. R. R. Parker in a very interesting manner. The following auxiliaries responded with reports: Edwards; Bolton; Jackson, First Church; Jackson, Capitol Street Church; Canton, Canton Gleaners, Camden, and Raymond." Letters were read from Madison and Yazoo City.

"Miss Marshall, our efficient Conference president, was introduced to the society, and spoke briefly.

"An interesting discussion ensued on ways and means of arousing interest in the work on the district."

At the afternoon session it was deemed advisable to elect an assistant, to aid the district secretary in organizing auxiliaries and visiting those already in organization.

"Much time was consumed in considering plans to raise our part of that one hundred thousand dollars, and also the amount pledged for the education of Miss McNemar, who is preparing to go from our midst into the work in foreign fields.

"Several names were given to be placed on the missionary quilt.

"Each society was urged to observe the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial, the doing-without week; and also to hold public meetings.

"The society was then converted into an experience meeting, led by Mrs. Birdsong, of Bolton. This was an occasion of spiritual refreshment.

"The program of the evening entertainment was a most delightful one. Most of the selections were composed by Mrs. R. R. Parker, and rendered most attractively by the children.

"Bishop Galloway, with his inimitable tact and grace, made an interesting and appropriate talk at the close of the exercises.

"The annual sermon, preached by Bishop Galloway on Sunday morning, was eloquent, forceful, and spiritual, as was the one he gave us on Sunday evening.

"The ladies met in a short session on Sunday afternoon, inviting all the ladies of Edwards to meet with them.

"By request of Bro. Drake, the 'Joors' of the Edwards auxiliary were opened, and Mrs. Watkins talked briefly on the women in the church who do not belong to the Woman's Missionary Society, and the excuses they give.

"She was followed by Bishop Galloway, in whose clear, strong words was found much of inspiration. Several names were added to the roll.

"Edwards is a royal place to hold a District Conference. It would have been impossible to be entertained with more generous hospitality.

"We came away with increased zeal to carry on the greatest work that our Lord has left his followers to do."

Encouraging to the P. and H. M. Society of the North Mississippi Conference.

Our pastor, Rev. A. T. Buck, and family are occupying a nice new cottage and premises this year, all our own, because of the timely aid of $75 received from the P. and H. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference. When our Conference president wrote she could aid us if we would raise $75, we almost despaired, for this part of the conditions appeared quite a damper to our moving propensities, for we had done all we thought we could do; but Bro. Buck was equal to the conditions; made a long stride, for which he is capable; so we complied with conditions and received the $75. The debt was liquidated. We appreciate the favor, and trust the ladies will press on in this good work, for without this means many of our ministers' families would be uncomfortable at their charges. Long live the P. and H. M. Society! May our dear Lord give to every woman in our church the grace of working and helping this glorious work to its utmost state of completeness. Sincerely,

ELLA C. HAMILTON.
Shuqualak, Miss.

Pastoral Visiting.

A pastor of one of our largest churches, with nearly two thousand members, who is constantly called on for public duties beyond his parish, had felt it impossible for him to make pastoral calls. He has long been used to insist that his one business is in the pulpit. Last January, however, he resolved to make the experiment of visiting his people. He publicly announced each Sunday on what streets he would call during the week. Within six months he made nearly one thousand pastoral calls, with so great advantage, as he believes, both to himself and his people, that he is determined to continue the practice.

He has discovered that their affection for him is greater than he had supposed, and he as heartily returns it. He has gained a new knowledge of their feelings, or temptations, and has in consequence a new power in preaching, and a new sense of the greatness of the work of the preacher and pastor. They have gained a new interest in their pastor, now that they have seen him out of the pulpit and in their homes, and a new interest in co-operating with him in their common work. The increase in additions is marked at every communion.

Such is the testimony of the Congregationalist. We are not surprised at any one of its statements. We are only surprised that he should have been willing to preach continuously without visiting his people. How did he learn, in the months that preceded, what were the needs of the people, and whether he had succeeded in meeting their souls' wants? Without this knowledge how could he hope to preach effectively?

A pastoral visit is not a social call, nor a season of giving or seeking pleasure. True, it must be very social in order to accomplish the result desired, namely, to get unreserved expressions of their feelings from the church members. But while thus conversing in an easy strain, the pastor must watch for their indications of feeling and for opportunities to make wise and prudent suggestions to them. So that this visiting is real true work for the Lord.—Christian Observer.

Transfigured Common Duties.

You may do your daily work, whatever it be, with this for its motto, "Thy will of the Lord be done." And they who thus can look at their trade, or profession, and see the trivialities and monotonies of their daily occupations in the transfiguring light of that great thought, will never need to complain that life is small, ignoble, wearisome, insignificant. As with pebbles in some clear brook with the sunshine in it, the water in which they are sunk glorifies and magnifies them. If you lift them out, they are but bits of dull stone; lying beneath the sunlit ripples, they are jewels. Plunge the prose of your life, and all its trivialities, into that great stream, and it will magnify and glorify the smallest and the homeliest. Absolute submission to the divine will, and the ever-present, thrilling consciousness of doing it, were the secret of Christ's life, and ought to be the secret of ours.—Rev. D. Maclaren.

Waiting for the Tide to Turn.

How many lives are ruined by flurry! Men become unmanned. They can not rest. They flounder about. Folded arms have accomplished as much in this life as outstretched, toiling arms. As much wisdom is shown in discovering the proper time to be idle as in deciding when to strike. I am not putting a premium on indolence. It is the wisest kind of doing nothing that I advocate. Wait with the guns shotted. Wait with hand on the wheel, watching for a change of wind. Wait broad awake and on your feet, not asleep in bed.

Waiting is courageous work. The bravest things in the history of armies have been siege days, when men could do nothing but wait for the long-delayed relief. What heroism has the reserve line exhibited standing in that safe vale, yet oppressed by that phantom of danger, the consolousness of death just an hour hence! A thousand times easier is the spirited charge, with enthusiastic cheer and movement.

What a trial of mettle has the sick-room witnessed when the loving watcher was helpless to do aught but keep the vigil and wait for the fever's turn! For my part, I am unequal to that. Let me go for the doctor, go for cordial, go fix the fire, go fetch a blanket—let me do something when my loved ones are ill. I am not strong enough to sit silent and sympathizing, doing nothing but hold the sufferer's hand.

How hard the past months have been! Tens of thousands have been doing nothing, and doing it bravely, too. The factory was idle, the shop has been closed, the store has had no need of clerks; yet the loaf has been cut and the barrel emptying day by day—the strong man has seen his savings melting away and nothing coming in; yet he has been cheerful, temperate, and full of hope. Doing nothing, he has behaved with a respect for law; he has kept the peace; he has carried a smile into his home, evening after evening, as he has returned from his fruitless search for something to do. A great, grand faith in the American future has characterized our population all these troublous months. The self-control of most of the industrious masses has been sublime, and the discipline of such a season will appear in years to come; it will make of us a stronger people.—Selected.

How a Beautiful Hymn Was Written.

One day Mr. Wesley was sitting by an open window, looking over the bright and beautiful fields. Presently a little bird, flittering about in the sunshine, attracted his attention. Just then a hawk came sweeping down toward the little bird. The poor thing, very much frightened, was darting here and there, trying to find some place of refuge. In the bright sunny air, in the leafy trees, or the green fields, there was no hiding-place from the fierce grasp of the hawk. But seeing an open window, and a man sitting by it, the bird flew, in its extremity, towards it, and, with a beating heart and a quivering wing, found refuge in Mr. Wesley's bosom. He sheltered it from the threatening danger, and saved it from a cruel death.

Mr. Wesley was at the time suffering from severe trials and was feeling the need of refuge in his own time of trouble, as much as did the trembling little bird that nestled so safely in his bosom. So he took up his pen and wrote that beautiful hymn:

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
While the waves of trouble roll,
While the tempest still is high."

That prayer grew into one of the most beautiful hymns in our language, and multitudes of people, when in sorrow and danger, have found comfort while they have said or sung the last lines of that hymn.

Higher Criticism Defined.

Prof. Howard Osgood, in an able and interesting article published in Christian Thought, New York, writes as follows:

"The fundamental principle of Higher Criticism, as defined by Kuenen, is that the supernatural is excluded from all consideration. This, of course, excludes all belief in and all consideration of miracles. If there is no supernatural in the world, no miracle, there has been no revelation from God, which would be a miracle. No supernatural, no miracle, no revelation, no prophecies—that are the necessary presuppositions, according to this school, of an unprejudiced study of the Bible. No one is ever called to a theological professorship in a German university, because he is a converted man, or believes the Bible. The one question is: Is he sufficiently learned and can he teach? Pfleider and Harnack do not believe in the supernatural; Wellhausen declares himself a polytheist; Kuenen, as his biographer tells us, made it his purpose in life to strip Christianity of every remnant of supernaturalism. There is one spot on earth where you will never hear sin mentioned or salvation spoken of. It is in their Criticism."—The Truth.

In the Hands of the Philistines.

BY H. G. H.

The young and inexperienced brother who co-operates with worldly or religious youths in getting up a supper for the purpose of raising his salary or for any other church purpose.

The preacher who thinks to assist himself in his pastoral charge by the publication of a little thumb-sheet, and then further weakens himself by asking other preachers to engage in the little business of circulating it.

The church or preacher that undertakes to establish a camp ground and run a camp meeting in connection with a Chautauqua or city boom and land speculation.

The Methodist preacher who engages in a public debate with a Campbellite free-lance controversialist, who has no respect for spiritual religion or the Holy Ghost.

The Methodist preacher who, on entering his work, allows a weakened church to persuade him not to preach doctrinal sermons, for fear of hurting somebody—for fear of hurting the devil, for instance, and thus is driven from the field before the battle opens.

The preacher who persuades himself that his usefulness will be increased by spending two-thirds of his time in the houses of his parishioners—thus wasting himself, and telling the people all he knows before entering the pulpit.

For the preacher to imagine the people to be well read up on matters of church extension, missions, Conference collections, baptism, holiness, church history, when, truth to tell, not one in five can tell you what these things mean.

For members of the church to imagine they have rid themselves of responsibility for the conversion of the heathen for twelve months by paying 25 cents, or dodging the preacher and thus failing to pay any amount.

For the preacher to imagine that he has but little to do after the revival and the evangelists are over—nothing but to shout hallelujah, when in truth his troublesome soul- and body-exhausting work has just commenced; and, even if he does look out, the devil will be in the pew and at his elbow every moment.

And, finally, for the preacher or people to think that any revival will be permanent in its fruit where deep, earnest, solemn, spiritual presentation of the themes of the gospel have been ignored—however sweet might have been the music rendered or pathetic the stories told.

Brethren, get the Samson of the gospel after these Philistines!—Texas Advocate.

Lowly Duties.

In one of Murillo's pictures in the Louvre, as described by a writer, one sees the interior of a convent garden; but doing the work there are not mortals in odd dresses, but beautiful white-winged angels. One serenely puts the kettle on the fire to boil, and one is lifting up a pail of water with heavenly grace, and one is at the dresser reaching up for plates, and there is a little cherub running about getting in the way, trying to help. All are so busy, and working with such a will, and so refining is the work as they do it, that somehow you forget that pans are pans, and pots pots, and only think of the angels and how very natural and beautiful kitchen work is, just what the angels would do, of course, if called upon to do it.

The picture is very suggestive. It shows us, for one thing, the dignity of all duty, even of the humblest drudgery. The angels are not ashamed to be seen doing it. It is the motive and the aim that alone can consecrate anything we do, and the doing of God's will is always splendid work, though it be but washing dishes or cleaning a street. "The smallest roadside pool has its water from heaven and its gleam from the sun, and can hold the stars in its bosom, as well as the great ocean." So the humblest duty is a bit of God's will, and shines with heavenly radiance. This ought to be an inspiration to those who live in lowly places and can do only common task-work. Do it all well, and as God's will, and no great man's brilliant deeds will shine more brightly than your little things in God's sight.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

One reason why some of us do not have more prayers answered is because we stop praying as soon as we come out of our closets. The right kind of a prayer never stops. We forget that sometimes the most effective praying is done with hands and feet and brain and pocket-book. We say amen and quit just when we ought to press on with more earnestness, or we stay on our knees asking for bread when we ought to be out in the field doing something with a hoe. God help us to pray in a way that angels can understand, no matter whether they hear our words or not. "If I had as much wheat in a barn as you've got, papa, I'd answer that prayer myself," said a little boy to the stingy father who had prayed at the family altar for a man who needed bread. That boy had a true idea of prayer that some old men never get.—The Ram's Horn.

Belhaven College.

PRESIDENT FITZHUGH'S NEW SCHOOL AT JACKSON FOR YOUNG LADIES.

President Fitzhugh announces that his new college at Jackson, for young ladies, bearing the above name, will open on Sept. 18, next. Prof. Fitzhugh voluntarily resigned the presidency of Whitworth College, which he had successfully conducted for eight years, to establish this new college, in response to what seemed to be a State-wide demand for an undenominational college of high grade at the State Capitol for the education of girls and young women. The establishment of such a college there, in addition to Millsaps College, makes Jackson a great educational center. Parents having sons and daughters to educate will now find there the very best facilities for both. As is well known, Jackson is the most accessible place in the State. Four railroads run into the city, bringing passengers from every quarter.

The college buildings, three in number, are situated on a commanding eminence, the apex of the hill being on a level with the top of the State Capitol. The campus, comprising twelve acres, is beautiful, being covered with lovely shade trees, grass and flowers. It is conceded by all who have visited the site that it is perhaps the most attractive and best adapted to school purposes of any in the South.

The school buildings will be new, heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and supplied with new furniture throughout. New pianos, of best make, have been ordered for the Conservatory of Music.

Great care has been observed by President Fitzhugh in the selection of his faculty, which will be the very best composed not only of graduates, but post-graduates of the best universities and conservatories of this country and Europe.

The new college will assuredly start out under the most flattering auspices and while regretting more than we can express that Whitworth College and Brookhaven must give Prof. Fitzhugh up, we at the same time feel the cause of female education in Mississippi will be the decided gainer by the step he has taken. President Fitzhugh has literally consecrated his whole life to the cause of education. Beginning after his graduation as a young man, he successfully conducted high schools in Smith and Rankin counties, until his abilities as a teacher there challenged the attention of the Board of Trustees of the State University of Mississippi and they elected him a member of the faculty. His universal popularity and the reputation he won there led the Board of Trustees of Whitworth College to offer him the presidency of the institution on the death of the honored and lamented Dr. Johnson, which he accepted. As president of Whitworth Prof. Fitzhugh has not only proven himself an able and capable educator but has exhibited the highest order of executive ability, and some departments of Whitworth, notably its musical department, have been brought to a higher standard than ever before. That he will make a grand success of his new college, The Leader confidently predicts. Leading citizens of Jackson compose the Board of Trustees with Gov. Stone as president, and it will begin its career with strong and influential friends in every quarter of the State.—Brookhaven Leader.

Professional Fault-Finders.

When Michael Angelo's great statue of David was placed for the first time in the Plaza in Florence, all the people were hushed in wonder before the majesty of the great statue, except Soderini, who was the dude of Florence. Soderini looked at the statue from different points of view, with a critical air, and then he said, "Don't I think that the nose is a little too long." And the great sculptor took his chisel and his mallet, and laid the ladder against the statue, so that he might reach the face, and as he went up he took a little marble dust with him, and seemed to change a little the feature of the statue, and let the marble dust fall, but did not really alter it in any way, and then he came down. Soderini looked at the statue critically, looked at it from this point of view, looked at it from that point of view, and then he said, "It is perfectly right." Do not you see that there are ever so many people who criticise for the mere sake of criticising, and who are the most useless of people?—Wayland Hoyt.

Dr. Cuyler has written: "To shout battle cry at the mouth of the cannon is easier than to put our hands on our mouths and be silent because 'God does it.' If he is silent as to explanations of trying providences, let us be silent in our filial submission. God knows what is best for us; that is enough."

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

Don't Take Our Word,

But ask your doctor if there is any cure for rheumatism. If a member of the old school, he will say there is none. If of the more modern and progressive practice, he will say that Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism is the only known specific, and that its proprietors offer a reward of $500 for a case it will not cure. The preparation is both internal and external, consists of two large bottles—one month's treatment, and is sent by express to any address upon receipt of $5. THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CABBAGE CATSUP.—To one quart of cabbage chopped fine, a tumblerful of white mustard seed, one tablespoonful of powdered mustard, one of powdered ginger, one of black pepper, one of allspice, one of grated horse-radish, one teaspoonful of red pepper, four onions chopped fine, and salt to the taste. Cover the whole with vinegar, and add sugar to the taste.—W. W.

EGGS IN PATTER.—An appetizing way to cook an egg is to mix two tablespoonfuls of thick cream with one tablespoonful of fine bread-crumbs and one-fourth saltspoonful of salt. Butter a china eggbaker, put in a teaspoonful of the cream mixture, a raw egg seasoned with salt and a little pepper, and the remainder of the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven eight minutes.—Boston Cooking School.

BANANA SALAD.—Peel and slice six oranges and one dozen bananas. Cut one ripe lemon into tiny pieces. Arrange the sliced fruit in a salad bowl, and add two heaping cups of powdered sugar and the juice of three lemons. Freshly grated cocoanut may be added to the fruit. Set it on the ice long enough to become thoroughly cold before using. This is very nice with cold meats.—Marie A. J. Walls.

MARY'S COCOANUT CAKE.—Whites of six eggs, two cups powdered sugar, three-fourths cup of butter, one cup sweet milk, three cups flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking-powder, one of lemon essence. Bake as loaf-cake, and next day cut off all the crust, and slice it in four layers. Grate two cocoanuts and put in the icing. Spread each layer with plenty of icing. When cut, it will be perfectly white all through, and a very handsome cake.—Mrs. A. Winger, Springfield, O.

TO PRESERVE PINEAPPLES.—Peel them, remove all the "eyes" with a silver fruit-knife, slice them, and lay them over night in an equal weight of sugar. Save the trimmings, if they are not decayed, and put them in a thin muslin bag to boil with the fruit. In the morning drain off the syrup, and boil the trimmings in it until the goodness is out of them; remove from the syrup, add the pineapple, and boil until tender. Put the fruit in cans, boil down the syrup, and pour over. Seal tightly.—United Presbyterian.

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP.—Put one quart of tomatoes on to stew for fifteen minutes. Put one quart of milk on to boil in a farina boiler. Rub a large tablespoonful of butter and two tablespoonfuls of flour together, add to the milk when boiling, and stir constantly until it thickens. Now press the tomatoes through a sieve, and, if ready to use the soup, add one teaspoonful of sugar, one quarter of a teaspoonful of baking soda, and a few whole cloves to the tomatoes, and then the boiling milk; stir and serve immediately.—Selected.

HYGIENE.

Eating and Genius.

What a strange mixture! And yet there is a very vital connection between thoughts that breathe and words that burn on the one hand and an unimpaired digestion on the other. President Patton once remarked to the Princeton students, "You may not need binomial theorems, but you will need a healthy stomach." The brilliant treasures of intellectual acquirement are stored in earthen vessels, and when these poor, frail bodies become cracked and disjointed, the wealth is apt to scatter.

In proportion as we are able to heartily eat suitable food will our brain be enriched, our thoughts be stimulated and become vigorous. Thus, the liveliest mind and most prolific thought is almost utterly dependent upon physical conditions, which are, in their turn, relying upon the productive qualities of food eaten and digested.

Thomas Carlyle stood, trembling and dyspeptic, before an audience of young students to bid them avoid his mistakes in reference to this very matter.

"Gentlemen," said the great savant, "it would have been a very good thing for me if I had considered health as needing my continual attendance, and there is no kind of achievement that you can make in this world that is equal to it."

Doctor Storrs simply re-echoes the Chelsea sage when he claims that "harmonious intellectual vigor demands opulence of health."

Without making stipulations here concerning diet, since one man's food may be another's poison, it is perfectly safe to lay down the general rule that the brain-worker, to do his normal best, must be a hearty eater. Quote exceptions, if you wish, but they do no more than prove this statement. Some people have been so deceived on this head as to imagine that a man must be very sick before he could be very brilliant; that cadaverous cheeks and wasted forms were the fit temples of the mighty thinkers, and that a genius who bumped the scales at two hundred pounds was an unpoetical anomaly.

But scientific investigation turns aside from such delusions with a very decided contempt, and declares that logic, eloquence and wit are what Doctor Holmes terms them, "So much beef and pudding" in highest activity.

Four great arteries carry to our brains one third of the entire circulation of the blood—the vital fluid which is their fire and fluid; and this fluid is generated from our food. Every thought and speech consumes brain matter, hence the continual need of a fresh supply. Men who can not afford time to eat, can not afford time to live to do their best work. For all thinkers and professional men we would prescribe golden-mouthed Jeremy Taylor's maxim: "Every meal is a rescue from one death, and lays up for the next rescue." You need not so many irritants and drugs, but healthy food and good digestion.—Exchange.

Deadly Danger in Milk.

The great number of cases recently reported of poisoning from the use of milk, cheese, whipped cream, ice cream and other things made from milk and cream, says the New Orleans Picayune, call attention forcibly to the fact which few people know, but everybody ought to know, that one of the most dangerous poisons known forms in milk that has been kept too long. It is known as tyrotoxicon, and is a sort of fungus growth. The richer the milk or cream the more apt it is to breed this deadly growth, and it becomes especially virulent by contact with metal, copper or tin. Its presence is detected by a moldy taste and smell, and when this is noticed the milk should never be used, as fatal results are sure to follow. This fungus is not killed by freezing, but it is by boiling, which makes ice-cream and other dishes made from boiled milk and cream safer than others. Most good housekeepers are careful to see that the vessels into which milk is put are kept clean by frequent scalding, but few of them are aware that this precaution is not only necessary to cleanliness, but to health as well. Physicians say that many a little child has been poisoned through its mother's carelessness as to the milk on which it is fed.—Evening Visitor.

Hygienic Vegetables.

Celery acts upon the nervous system, and is a cure for rheumatism and neuralgia. Tomatoes stimulate the liver, and spinach and the common dandelion (prepared in the same way) have a direct effect on diseases of the kidneys. Onions, garlic, and olives promote digestion by stimulating the circulatory system, with the consequent increase of the saliva and gastric juice. Raw onions are regarded as a remedy for sleeplessness, and the French believe that onion soup is an excellent tonic in cases of debility of the digestive organs.—English Mechanic.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Fertilizing.

Fertilizing, like many things else, if done right, in a proper manner, in right quantity and condition of soil, it will pay, if the seasons are favorable. To this the farmer has to trust to providence.

There are three essential elements in every properly prepared fertilizer: nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. It is said most soils contain all other elements of a sufficiency. But of every soil one or more, or all of the essential elements, are necessary in order it may produce to its highest capacity. To take the position that a fertilizer of a particular brand, with a definite quantity each of the essential elements, is good for every kind of soil and plant, is a mistake. As we have said before, like the practice of physic, circumstances, conditions, temperaments of different patients require different treatment, so of soils and plants—no two hardly admit of the same quantity and kind of fertilizer and same cultivation. This is the reason of the difficulty of a proper understanding of the subject of fertilizing. Indeed, we have come to the conclusion, after a close study and repeated experiments in fertilizing, there are few subjects less understood. It is the question among our experimental stations. All of them seem to be exerting themselves to have the matter better understood by our agriculturists. Many of their tests are valuable, yet unfortunately many farmers will not avail themselves of them. There can be no improvement among them while this be the case.

We do say, and without the fear of a successful contradiction, that fertilizing properly managed, properly understood, will give an impetus to our farming management that will enable our farmers to largely increase their crops with half the land now in cultivation. It pays in the same ratio that it does to plow heavy soil with a strong team instead of a poor, weak one. The contrast between farmers, with our ordinary lands—one fertilizing, the other not—is about fair between two parties trying to farm, one with a large fat, sleek horse or mule, the other with a poor, lean narrow-built mustang.

One thing we have learned—that it pays to fertilize every crop we plant. We will not make an exception. Even in leguminous plants, it increases their capacity to build up nitrogen in the soil. It is economy to fertilize. To illustrate: A farmer has ten acres to cultivate. He fertilizes six and cultivates in corn. As a rule, he will make more on the six than to cultivate the whole ten without fertilizing. The cost of the cultivation of the four over the six will be more than the fertilizer on the six; hence more made on less land, at less cost, and the other land left to rest, for pasturage or other purposes. As we now pass farms we can readily tell the difference in corn or other crops fertilized or not. The one fertilized has large, green heavy stalks, with one and sometimes two ears on the same; while that not fertilized has small, yellow stalks, with scarcely an ear on one in four or five stalks. One will make from twenty to thirty bushels to the acre, while the other will make only five to fifteen; this at a cost of not more than three dollars to the acre. To prepare from lands for even a less cost in fertilizer will be to plant them in peas the year before. The peas gathered will more than pay first cost in purchase of seed, and have the vines left as a fertilizer. Indeed, this seems to be the true plan, if phosphates are used.

No one can belong to God for an hour who does not intend to belong to him forever.

Report No. 2.

CENTENARY COLLEGE ALUMNI.

The alumni of Centenary College are coming forward with cheerfulness to the help of their alma mater. The president is hunting them up by correspondence, and awakening in them the pleasant memories of the past, and those memories are urging them to put forth their efforts in behalf of the old school. A very cordial and congratulatory letter from one of the class of 1855, who resides in another State, has this: "Your letter for the first time in a long while caused me to wish I was a rich man; but, believing that the small sum sent with a heart in the cause will be acceptable, I trust it will do some good toward your contemplated designs." This gentleman is a prominent physician in his State and a working member of the Presbyterian Church, and his example is commended to the Methodists of Louisiana.

An alumni who resides in New Orleans, and has for years occupied a prominent public position and discharged its duties with honor to himself, expressed himself to the president, not long since, as ready with voice and pen and purse to co-operate in every judicious plan for the betterment of the condition of the college.

The president has sent out circulars to every preacher whose name appears on the roll of the Louisiana Conference, and he asks for a judicious distribution of the same. The preachers can reinstate the college in the hearts of our people and fill our halls with students, and we simply ask them to do their duty. The outlook is hopeful.

C. W. CARTER, Pres.

One of the Causes of Hard Times.

In a city of 18,000 people in a Western State there were in existence some time ago forty saloons, each one of which paid $100 a month into the municipal treasury, the total yearly tax reaching the sum of $48,000. Each saloon did such a "prosperous business" that it could afford to pay, out of its profits, after providing for all other expenses, $1,200 a year into the city treasury. These large sums and the additional amounts which represent the profits of the traffic—confessedly vast, as is well understood—come chiefly out of the pockets of the poor. The patrons of the saloon are in most cases the very men who can least afford to misspend a single penny of their hard-earned wages. The millions which they pour into the pockets of saloon keepers in this country mean bread and clothing and comforts denied to home and children. One of the evils of the traffic is the monstrous waste of money it involves.—Exchange.

Loyalty to the Church.

A great deal is being said just now about liberality in creed. It is a hopeful sign that the spirit of tolerance seems to pervade all denominations. Controversies are rare, and we are glad such is the case. Nevertheless, it is not well to be too liberal in one's religious views. A mistake in this direction leads to instability of character. The church member who believes that one denomination is about as good as another seldom makes a zealous or faithful worker. Men and women of strong convictions who are well grounded in the doctrines and history of the church—these are the ones who can be depended upon to do the work of God in the world. Had Martin Luther been a man of weak faith he probably never would have been heard of. The men who move the world are those who believe something with all their heart.

Southern Methodism, we fear, has many who belong to us in name, but who are not of us. Too often it is the case that persons join our church, not because they accept our doctrines and polity, but because of our strength and influence. When such is the case, permanent loyalty is hardly to be expected. In many instances members, on removing from one city or village to another, transfer their membership to another denomination because it happens to be in the ascendency, or because fine music and fashionable people are to be found at that particular church. Creed, in their eyes, is a thing of little importance.

Southern Methodism to-day needs members who will stick to her through thick and thin. We have a history to be proud of. A more consecrated man than the founder of Methodism the world has never seen. We belong to a denomination that is doing more, perhaps, to evangelize the world than any other. From the first even until now there has been no lack of eloquent preachers and profound theologians. In every good work we are foremost. Every Methodist who is an earnest student of the Bible must believe that no other denomination has caught more of the spirit of the gospel than has ours. Then why should any man or woman desert us unless it be for a matter of faith? Let every Methodist who leaves his native place put in his membership where he goes, regardless of the financial or social condition of the church he finds there. If the church at the place to which he removes be weak, let him put his shoulder to the wheel and help to make it stronger. A soldier who will not fight except behind embattlements is a poor sort of soldier. Let there be no desertions among us because the church where we live is not conducted as we would like, or because it is lacking in vigor and social standing. Some churches are no better than ecclesiastical clubs.

Were Methodist parents half as careful as our Catholic brethren to instruct their children in religious matters, proselyters would meet with little encouragement among us. In some cases we think pastors make a mistake in trying to hold on to members who have removed to other charges. Pride in keeping up a large membership or in preventing a decrease should not stand in the way of the best interests of the church at large. If, wherever there has been a removal, each pastor would send the church member his letter and notify the preacher in charge that he had done so, or if he would send the letter direct to the member's new pastor, many members would be saved to us.

"Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in Askelon;" but we have heard it hinted that in some instances members are negligent about transferring their membership in order to escape the calls for money needed to carry on church work. Pity it is to think that any church member would be so disloyal! We believe it best both for the church and for the members that each member should have his name enrolled where he resides.

Theological Seminaries.

Not long ago the announcement was made that one of our Southern Methodist colleges had so enlarged its scope as to give special biblical training to young men looking to the ministry. This would seem to be a step forward, but some of our leading educators are not sure about this. This much is certain: Our colleges must either confine themselves to the work of general education, or they must come into competition with the great universities of the country. As the college has not facilities for giving the best instruction in special lines, the student who takes the post-graduate courses offered suffers in consequence. Only after he has entered upon his life-work does he realize his mistake. A fledgeling university is as much a hindrance to the cause of education as is a fledgeling college. In some cases, college authorities, rather than see students go elsewhere to get special training, offer them inducements to remain, and attempt to do work of this character, although the courses offered are greatly inferior to those offered by a real university. A college professor who has a special chair has little time to devote to work outside of his department; and unless he be a genius, the quality of the extra work will be imperfect. He may be a man of splendid attainments, but he can not teach Hebrew or New Testament Greek or Systematic Theology so well as can a specialist in one of these branches.

There is the further objection that few students after having taken a short course in theology at a college would be likely to go off afterwards to a university in order to finish. The course already taken would furnish an excuse for not doing so. Not being at an age when they would appreciate the advantage of a full theological course, they would naturally think the one offered by their alma mater amply sufficient. The tendency among young men, and it is true also of young preachers, is to take a short cut in education, if possible. Any college which shall attempt to do work of the character mentioned will, intentionally or unintentionally, furnish its ministerial students a pretext for not attending our theological seminary at Nashville. Nor are we alone in this opinion. Some normal schools are bringing themselves into disrepute by pretending to give students a classical education in two years. May not a college of high standard make a like mistake in attempting to do a kind of work that should be left to our university?

It may be argued that such instruction is given mainly for the benefit of students who have neither the time nor the money to attend our regular divinity school. Students, however, who are working for a degree have little time to spend in special work of this kind; and if they neglect their regular work on that account, they fail to get the thorough training which they should have received, and without which education is a farce. Because other denominational schools offer such courses is no reason why a Southern Methodist college should do so. Thus far we are in the lead in educational work. Why should we not take a forward step by correlating our institutions of learning?

McKENDREE M. BLACK.

Just one new religious denomination is needed, the Church of the Ugly Disposition. If it could get all its own, it would draw heavily on all the others. We should lose some esteemed brethren ourselves.—Interior.

At the Seashore.

We spent last Sabbath at the Seashore Camp Ground. We arrived on Saturday night just in time to hear a very earnest, practical sermon from Bro. Wade, of the Alabama Conference. Sunday morning, at eight, Bro. Simpson, of the North Alabama Conference, preached a sermon on "Self-Denial" that was good to the use of edifying. At eleven the audience had the privilege of hearing one of Bishop Keener's masterpieces—subject, "The Ascension of the Son of Man." The afternoon hour was occupied by that renowned rhetorician and orator, Dr. Shoaff, of Mobile, in a discourse which fully sustained his high reputation. At night the president of Southern University, Dr. J. O. Keener, preached a sermon of great uniqueness, originality and force. During our stay we had the good fortune to be domiciled with Bro. and Sister Campman, of New Orleans, to whom we are indebted for a generous hospitality. Monday morning, at five o'clock, we were all aboard for the ADVOCATE office. We will not attempt here any full account of the meeting, as that will be furnished by a correspondent.

Conspiracies and Boycotts Illegal.

The decision of Judge Taft, of the United States Circuit Court, in the case of F. W. Phelan, a labor agitator, who went to Cincinnati as an agent of Debs to stir up the strike there, is an interesting and important one, covering strike matters thoroughly, showing what a striker can do, and when he transcends and breaks the law. The decision is clear and exhaustive; and it will receive the warmest commendation of the public. If other judges will look on the matter in the same sensible manner as Judge Taft has done, we may still have strikes, but they will be unaccompanied with violence.

The judge recognizes the right of laborers to unite and combine in unions, appoint leaders and to strike whenever they wish to do so; that is, to leave their employers in a body because they are not satisfied with their wages or want to better themselves in any way, but they can not go beyond that, and a boycott is clearly illegal.

Phelan was sent by Debbs to Cincinnati to institute and assist a boycott there in order to compel the railroads to break their contracts with the Pullman Company and compel the latter to treat with its employees. This attempt to enforce a breach of contract was, the court declared, an unlawful conspiracy, not only against railroads, but against the public, a conspiracy to paralyze business and to starve out the nation in order to force an employer to terms. Moreover, Phelan attempted to carry out this conspiracy by means of a boycott, which is universally declared to be illegal.

Like other labor agitators, Phelan believed that it would be impossible to prove his guilt, and denied the conspiracy and the boycott, but the telegrams which passed between him and Debs, as in other cases, proved sufficient to convict him, and he was found guilty and sent to jail for six months.

There is a lesson in this case, a warning which it is to be hoped will be profited by. While strikes are lawful, conspiracies and boycotts are not, and those guilty of them make themselves liable to a heavy punishment.—Times-Democrat.

The Need.

Ever and anon some zealous people, misled by the experience of secular weeklies made up from the forms of the daily, and furnished to its large constituency at a dollar a year, try the experiment of low-priced religious journalism, with the usual disastrous result. One thing seems invariably forgotten, that the world is as yet bigger than the church, and furnishes therefore a larger possible constituency. The experience of that excellent Methodist organ, the Zion's Herald, of Boston, is worth quoting:

"Do you say a reduction of price will increase the circulation? That we tried once, but the experiment resulted in no appreciable increase in the list of subscribers. There are papers which have lucrative advertising of a very wide field in which to operate, which might profitably reduce their rates. With Zion's Herald it is different. The bulk of our patronage must be in New England, and this field has been pretty well ploughed. Our list might be slightly increased by flash advertising and offers of premiums; but the gain would not be healthy or reliable, as our previous experiments in that direction have shown. What is true of Zion's Herald is equally true of the Advocates. Each paper has a normal reading constituency that will not be greatly enlarged. What is needed is not a reduction of the price of our papers, but the development in our people of a better appreciation of our weeklies and an exacting and universal demand that Methodist journalism become the equal of the best."—Southwestern Presbyterian.

The Transferred Territory.

It has been authoritatively announced by Bishop Keener that the transfer of territory from the Mississippi to the Louisiana Conference went into effect at the close of the General Conference. Preachers in that territory who prefer to remain in the Mississippi Conference can be transferred at the close of the Conference year; but they will have to make their reports to the Louisiana Conference.

Two Danger Periods.

At the beginning and close of the great function of womanhood especial care should be observed. Health or disease is in the issue. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC will wonderfully aid nature by its reparative, alterative and energizing powers.

Corinth District Conference.

The Corinth District Conference is now in session at this place. Bro. T. W. Lewis, the new presiding elder, is presiding "as to the manner born." He does everything in the right time and in the right way. The preachers are all present and their reports encouraging. Finances are better up than they have been before for several years. The prospect is good to clear the decks on the collections ordered by the Conference. There is disappointment by the editor's absence.

PERIODICALS.

Vol. I. of the Epworth Era lies upon our table. It is a small-sized, eight-page sheet. It presents quite a handsome appearance, paper and typography being all that could be desired. As to editorial make-up, it is just such a publication as one would expect from the facile, vigorous pen of Dr. S. A. Steel. What it needs in order to make it a first-class success is a large subscription list. That will, doubtless, come in due time.

The Review of Reviews offers its Fourth-of-July greeting to American citizenship in the form of a thoughtful discussion of vital political and social questions, and particularly of the so-called new sectionalism that is apparently arraying the West against the East. Several pages of the July number are given to letters from Western men describing Western economic conditions and movements. This publicity to Western views is given at this time with a view to promoting better understanding and mutual respect between the sections.

The Review of Reviews, for July, finds cause for rejoicing in the reports which it is receiving from all parts of the country concerning the steady diminution in the numbers of unemployed. It will be remembered that the Review canvassed the situation thoroughly in the early Winter, and placed before its readers returns from nearly all the large cities showing the number of men out of work and the measures inaugurated for their relief. Supplementary information has been received which enables the Review to state that almost everywhere such relief work has ceased because the necessity for it has disappeared. The editor comments on this improved condition of affairs and adds some interesting reflections on the passing of Coxeyism. In this connection the statue of the Populist party in Congress is discussed.

The Treasury of Religious Thought, for July, is like its predecessors, filled with excellent, suitable matter for all preachers, Christian workers and families. Rev. Dr. Thomas W. Anderson, of the First United Presbyterian Church, New York City, has a sermon on The Advancing Kingdom—a strong, sensible presentation of the truth. Other full sermons are by Drs. John Hall, J. H. Duryea, G. P. Mains and A. C. Dixon. There are also several excellent Leading Thoughts of Sermons. The Creation of Air is discussed by Prof. J. Murphy, D. D. Light Holders, by Dr. T. L. Cuyler, is presented in an attractive style, well adapted to interest and benefit its readers. How to Improve the Church's Spiritual Life should be read by both pastor and people. Several short articles on Family Life will amply repay careful reading. Excellent brief, pithy articles are given, helpful for Young Peoples' Devotional Meetings.

The Preacher's Magazine, for July, with its valuable contributions to theological and homiletical thought, is received. A choice sermon by Joseph Agar Beet, D. D., upon The Father's Business, is worthy of that prince of commentators. The Rev. Mark Guy Pearse has a sermon upon Balaam, which is one of a course of sermons upon Moses: His Life and Its Lessons. The second of a series of articles which is commanding world-wide notice on The Teacher and the Class, is by James Stalker, D. D., entitled The Qualifications. The Lesson of Pentecost, by Rev. Wm. Crosbie, and an article on The Lord's Supper, add to the value of its contents. The Homiletical Department always attractive, is doubly so this month. The names of Rev. John Telford, B. A., John Edwards, Rev. Robert A. Watson, Joseph Parker, D. D., and Rev. I. E. Page, are found therein and various outlines of vigorous thought presented. Notes and Illustrations find prominent place. Short Sermons for Busy Men, by Joseph Parker, D. D., is racy. Other papers present an unusually good number of this steadily growing magazine.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

HEAVEN AS A CITY, A HOME, AND AS A REST.

(Rev. xxi, 10-26; John xiv, 2; Heb. iv, 9.)

1. Heaven is a city. With the Jews Jerusalem was the quintessence of excellence. Hence, without depreciating rural and suburban beauties, the Holy Spirit, in figuratively describing heaven, portrays a city, unique and charming.

(1) A great city. Twelve thousand furlongs, cubiform.

(2) The foundation solid and of precious stones.

(3) Abundant means of access: twelve gates. These gates of pearl.

(4) The streets of gold.

(5) Vast riches: "The kings of the earth do bring their glory into it."

(6) The inhabitants are "the nations of them which are saved."

(7) The Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are its temple and light.

2. Heaven as a home.

"The dearest spot on earth to me
Is home, sweet home."

(1) Here the family convenes.

(2) Here sweet peace is domiciled.

(3) Here music and praise abound.

(4) Here we have a safe shelter after life's fitful fever.

3. Heaven as a rest.

(1) Rest from the arduous labor of love. Here often weary in well-doing.

(2) Rest from the onsets of Satan. Shall himself be cast into the bottomless pit. No sin, no temptation there.

(3) Rest from life's ills. Here sickness, pain, poverty, want, disappointment, tribulation, abound. With death all these die.

(4) In heaven the weary pilgrim rests. The journey through life's desert wastes concluded.

"When shall I reach that happy place,
And be forever blest?
When shall I see my Father's face,
And in his bosom rest?"

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. A. Davis, Oak Ridge, La.: "My work is moving along finely under the circumstances. While our church at Mer Rouge is not dedicated, yet we think we have enough money to procure a handsome bell. Two members have been received in the church there by letter this year. At Collins we have built a new church, and are about ready for dedication. Our District Sunday-school Conference has just closed Wednesday, July 4, after a session of two days. Financially, we are doing pretty well, and live in hopes of realizing quite a spiritual harvest. We are laboring to that end. Pray for us."

Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, Columbus, Miss., July 12: "I have just completed eight days of glorious religious work in the town of Laurel, Miss., where there is the largest lumber manufactory in the State. Men who were gamblers gave up their cards, dice and accepted Christ. Scores confessed profanity, and in the power of God renounced it. Drinking men gave up the drink. Dozens of bottles of wines and liquors were given me to break. The whole town was shaken with the power of the gospel and made new. Scores were converted and added to the church; plans for a new church made, and money given to begin the work. Indeed, the grace of God abounded. It was the greatest religious work of my life."

Rev. J. R. Whittington, Gloster, Miss.: "I made my arrangement to move to my work, Carthage, Miss., the first of January. I reached there Jan. 7, expecting my family to follow soon. My wife became very ill before the time to go, and through the advice of my physician I came back to Gloster, my home, and found it necessary to notify the presiding elder that I would be compelled to remain with my wife for an indefinite time; but, thank God, she is nearly recovered, that I can return back to Carthage in a few days. It has been my glorious privilege to be a regular attendant at our beautiful church here. While the congregations have been small, on account of a split in our church, the preaching has been superb. Bro. Powell is in great favor with his people as a preacher, and, in my judgment, he has very few, if any, superiors in our Conference. The church here has also a very fine Sunday-school (one of the best—presided over by Bro. J. W. McLane and a fine lot of teachers). Bro. Powell has also organized a fine League, and I believe is doing good work. Upon the whole, the outlook for Methodism in Gloster is not the worst in the land. The Sam P. Jones Camp Grounds is hard by, and a more favored spot could not have been selected. The hotel and tabernacle are in a stone's throw of the Valley railroad. It has also as fine springs as ever flowed out of mother earth. All necessary arrangements are being made to accommodate all who may come. The hotel belongs to the association, and will be run by the Executive Committee, and good meals may be had at twenty-five cents, and cots for the same. There are a few tents for rent which may be secured by applying to J. F. Cassels, secretary of Executive Committee, Gloster, Miss. The annual meeting will be begun Friday night before the fifth Sunday in July. Revs. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, and McIntosh, the noted evangelist, have been invited to come, both of whom have accepted the invitation and will be present. This is a most favored opportunity of hearing these grand men of God. Come, everybody. Dr. Black, can't you come?"

Conference Claimants.

The old veterans, widows and orphans of the Mississippi Conference, claimants on the Conference fund, will wait and suffer and, if needs be, perish. The pastors of the Mississippi Conference could relieve you if all would make an effort. Some of the strongest charges have not paid anything on this claim as yet. Brethren, how much longer shall I wait for funds to pay the second quarter?

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

HOME CIRCLE.

I NEVER THOUGHT.

BY REV. GEORGE F. HUNTING.

I never thought my friend could die so soon,
His morning unt yet ripened into noon:
I never thought that June might have its frost.
O God, I never thought he could be lost!

I never thought my child could pass away
Just at the dawning of life's little day;
That he, so wild, so wayward and untaught,
Could die. O God, forgive! I never thought!

I never thought my glowing, golden sun
Could set and leave my life-work all undone.
The day has been so glad and gay and bright,
O God, I never thought it could be night!

"I never thought!" O wretched, worthless plea!
When God, thy God, O man, shall challenge thee,
Shall this be thy defense, this thy reply?
Hear then thy sentence, "Thou shalt surely die."

Day is the time to sow the guiden grain,
Night to regret thy indolence in vain;
Day is the time to reap the fertile soil,
Night is the time to rest thee from thy toil.

Life is thy day, thy day to think and do;
Death is thy night—night to rejoice or rue:
Life is thy seed-time; do thy very best.
Death is thy harvest, to regret or rest.

—American Messenger.

Making Play of Work.

There is everything in the manner of teaching a child how to use its hands. Some children are very slow and clumsy in using their hands, while others are deft and skillful. Some men and women never seem able to become expert with tools, while others take to the saw, the hammer, the chisel, the needle, the scissors, as ducks to water.

If a child seems slow to learn how to use its hands, more pains should be taken with it to overcome its inability and to make its way easy and delightful. The kindergarten methods are most admirable in all these respects, and to those familiar with them we can make no suggestions. It is a pity that every mother can not take kindergarten training, and so be able to make the world a garden of delight for the childhood of which she is guardian. Then children would be as pleased with every fresh acquisition of knowledge as they are when they take the first two or three steps alone.

Any mother can teach her child how to handle a needle if she will procure some parti colored beads not of the smallest size. Tie a silken thread into the needle and at the other end of the thread a bead, and let the child string beads, but before it begins to be weary of the exercise put them away till another time. This trains the eye and the hand. Later the child may be taught to sew, not plain sewing first, but embroidery always at first. Bits of flannel or cashmere with silk or wool thread of bright colors will serve to begin with. Then a scallop may be marked with a thimble or button to guide the pencil, and a buttonhole edge be worked round the scallop. A doll's petticoat thus edged will give almost any little girl great pleasure. When the child is taught to knit, let the yarn be bright in color and soft in quality, and something easy to knit be given, a set of reins for instance. A mother who gave her girls a stint to knit on an old brown stocking, "so they would learn how," gave them a great distaste for knitting, not meaning to do so, but because of the unskillfulness of her method.

It should not be forgotten that the nerves of the arms develop later than do those of the legs. The intention of this is easy to see. The child can run much earlier than it can work with its hands. If the nerves of the arms are developed too early by continuous training the child will be the subject of nervous derangement. Sedentary employments may be indulged in within limits profitably, but the larger part of a child's waking hours should be given to active muscular play, in which feet and hands have equal part.

It is economy in every way to supply a child with furniture suited to its size. There should be as many small chairs in a family as there are children, so that each child can sit in its chair with its feet, not dangling, but resting comfortably on the floor. A low table, like a kindergarten table, is a joy to little children. They can sit in their low chairs at their low tables, with their toys or their work before them, and find their employments easy and convenient. Thus suiting their plays and their tasks to their growing capacities, they may naturally and pleasantly grow into the knowledge and attainment of what is expected and required of them.—Exchange.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

Care in Trifles.

A druggist in one of our large cities said, lately: "If I am prompt and careful in my business, I owe it to a lesson which I learned when I was an errand boy in the house of which I am now master. I was sent, one day, to deliver a vial of medicine just at noon, but, being hungry, stopped to eat my luncheon.

"The patient, for lack of the medicine, sank rapidly, and for some days was thought to be dying.

"I felt myself his murderer. The agony of that long suspense made a man of me. I learned then that for everyone of our acts of carelessness or misdoing, however petty, some one pays in suffering. The law is the more terrible to me, because it is not always the misdoer himself who suffers."

This law is usually ignored by young people. The act of carelessness or selfishness is so trifling, what harm can it do? No harm, apparently, to the actor, who goes happily on his way; but somebody pays.

A young girl, to make conversation, thoughtlessly repeats a bit of gossip which she forgets the next minute; but long afterwards the woman whom she has maligned finds her good name tainted by the poisonous whisper.

A lad, accustomed to take wine, persuades a chance comrade to drink with him, partly out of a good-humored wish to be hospitable, partly, it may be, out of contempt for "fanatical reformers."

He goes on his way and never knows that his chance guest, having inherited the disease of alcoholism, continues to drink, and becomes a hopeless victim.

Our grandfathers expressed the truth in a way of their own:

For the lack of a nail the shoe was lost,
For the lack of the shoe the rider was lost,
For the lack of the rider the message was lost,
For the lack of the message the battle was lost.

—Youth's Companion.

"Heaping Coals."

"Mama," said Willie, "Harry has stolen my marbles, and the next time I see him won't I give him a pounding?"

"Willie, in the Bible we read: 'If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.'"

"What is an enemy, mama?"

"A little boy who steals your marbles."

"And what is heaping coals on his head?"

"That is being as kind as possible to him the very first chance you get."

"I believe I'll do it, mama."

Not many days after Willie came running in to his mother, and exclaimed: "Get me a penny out of my box! Harry's mother gave him two pennies to buy a kite, and he's lost one, and he's crying; and I want to heap coals."

His mother gave him the penny, and he ran to Harry with it.

Then Harry and Willie were friends again.

Don't you think heaping coals was much better than for Willie to pound Harry?

At a critical moment in the battle of Waterloo, word was brought to the Duke of Wellington that unless the troops at an important point could be reinforced, they must soon yield.

The Duke sent back, by the conrier, a short command: "Stand firm!"

"But we shall all perish," said the officer.

"Stand firm!" again thundered the Iron Duke.

"You will find us there," called the soldier as he galloped away.

And there at the close of the day they were found, for nearly every man of that brigade had fallen bravely at his post!

MUD CAKES.

A LITTLE GIRL'S RECIPE.

I don't see why the big folks all
Need go to cooking school,
For it's easy enough to make a cake,
If you make it by this rule.

First, you must have an apron
That you're not afraid to hurt,
For in this recipe we use,
For flour, sifted dirt.

Then dig, with an iron spoon,
A hole in the cool, dark ground,
And put in dirt and water,
Stirring it round and round.

And then a handful of pebbles,
You'd best put into the dough.
What are these for? In this recipe,
Pebbles are raisins, you know.

And when you get it all thick enough,
You make it into a cake;
Then put it on a nice, clean board,
And set it in the sun to bake.

Dear me! I'd most forgot to say,
You must sprinkle with sugar—or sand;
And when they're done, no better cakes
Will be found in Babyland.

That's all! You see, to learn to cook
You don't need to make a fuss—
Though mama says, when she comes to the door,
"Why, Bessie, child! What a muss!"

Obedience.

"I've got orders, positive orders, not to go there—orders that I dare not disobey," said a youth, who was being tempted to a smoking and gambling saloon.

"Come, don't be so womanish, come along like a man," shouted the others.

"No, I can't break orders," said John.

"What special orders have you got? Come, show them to us, if you can. Show us your orders."

John took a neat wallet from his pocket, and pulled out a neatly folded paper. "It's here," he said, unfolding the paper, and showing it to the boys.

They looked, and read aloud: "Enter not into the path of the wicked man. Avoid it; pass not by it; turn from it, and pass away."

"Now," said John, "you see my orders forbid my going with you. They are God's orders, and, by his help, I don't mean to break them."—Selected.

Always Be Civil.

We little appreciate the effect of a kind word upon those who are more used to blows. It seems that one evening a young lady abruptly turned a street corner and ran against a boy, who was small and ragged and freckled. Stopping as soon as she could, she turned to him and said, "I beg your pardon. Indeed, I am very sorry."

The small, ragged and freckled boy looked up in blank amazement for an instant. Then taking off about three-fourths of a cap, all he had, he bowed very low, smiled until his face became lost in the smile, and answered, "You can hev my parding and welcome, Miss, and yer may run ag'in me and knock me clean down, an' I won't say a word."

After the young lady passed on he turned to a comrade and said, half apologetically, "I never had anyone ask my parding before, and it kind o' took me off my feet."—Selected.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. N. J. Roberts, Greensburg, La., July 7: "Began a meeting at Day's Church, July 1; closed on July 4. Rev. V. D. Skipper, of Clinton, La., did the preaching with great acceptability and success. Results: 10 accessions, about 15 conversions, the whole membership revived, and $50 of the Conference assessments raised in cash and subscription."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, P. C., Terry, Miss., July 9: "Please let me report from Terry circuit. A gracious revival is going on; Bros. Hopper, Cammack, Gatlin and Dr. Bethea have assisted. Have had twelve conversions and twenty five sanctifications. The Holy Ghost has come down at every service, and we are rejoicing in the experience of 'old-time religion.' Such experiences have not been felt in Terry in many a day, and the world and many in the church wonder what has come to pass, and we point them to Acts i and ii. Praise the Lord for full salvation."

Rev. J. M. Beard, P. E., Lafayette, La., July 10: "I closed my second round of appointments on Opelousas district with the District Conference held at Crowley. All the preachers were present except one, who is absent from the State on account of ill health. The reports from every part of the district might be briefly summed up as good news. We raised four hundred dollars ($400) for local missions at one of the afternoon sessions of the Conference. Large crowds attended, and the last day was a veritable Pentecost, resulting in the conversion and sanctification of numbers of people and preachers. A more extended account will be furnished to your columns by the secretary, Rev. W. W. Drake."

"An Observer:" "Children's Day at Pleasant Valley, June 10, was a very enjoyable occasion. There was a large and very appreciative audience; good order and the greatest good humor prevailed, although the church was full to overflowing. The regular program was beautifully carried out, and several other interesting recitations and essays added. Words of commendation were heard on every hand, making glad the hearts of our faithful superintendent, Bro. T. E. Millsaps, and his band of earnest workers, who tried so hard to make the Sabbath-school children and young people happy, and make 'Children's Day' a success. Our beloved senior superintendent, Bro. Jesse Thompson, who could not be with us last year on account of ill health, was present with a smile and kind word for everyone. The choir, under the leadership of our efficient organist, Miss Hannah Millsaps, deserves special credit; they entered heart and soul into their work and felt what they sang. Our pastor, Bro. I. B. Robertson, just suited the occasion. He was brimming over with wit and humor, and made many happy hits in his address to the young people and in regard to the collection. The collection amounted to $6 10."

Rev. A. J. Jones, Pleasant Hill, Miss.: "We have served about half of our second year on the Pleasant Hill circuit, and the more we know about these people the better we love them. We have been greatly bereaved this year in losing quite a number of our best members, some going to Texas, others to Arkansas, and several to that 'city whose builder and maker is God;' but the Lord is filling up our broken ranks with new recruits who promise much for the church. The protracted meeting season will soon be upon us, and we are confidently expecting a great ingathering. Some sheaves have been garnered already. Our financial outlook is good for the 'times.' We have also done some much-needed improvement on churches, and especially on the parsonage; have expended over three hundred dollars repairing and building additions to the parsonage, besides furnishing it from kitchen to parlor. It is but justice to the ladies to say that much, if not all of this, has been made possible through the help of the good women as they have worked so effectively through the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, organized here last Fall. We also have a Foreign Missionary Society that is doing well. Pray for us that the good work may go on. God bless the dear ADVOCATE."

To build up both solid flesh and strength after grip, pneumonia, fevers and other prostrating diseases, there is nothing to equal Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

PROSTRATION FOLLOWING GRIP.

MRS. GARRETT.

MRS. REUBEN GARRETT, King George C. H., Va., writes: "I was taken with grip which finally resulted in pneumonia. Was prostrated for three months. Had a terrible cough and was emaciated and very weak. Was fast drifting into "quick consumption." The doctor gave me medicines all the time. I grew weaker. He advised cod liver oil emulsion. I took two bottles of it without any relief. I had pain in my left shoulder and back. I wrote you, and you prescribed your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took only one bottle before I felt better. After two bottles I could sit up, and felt I had been saved from the grave. I increased rapidly in flesh and strength."

FROM THE WORK.

"A Member," Big Cane, La.: "Our pastor, Rev. A. W. Turner, commenced May 4, with Bro. Haney, of the Mississippi Conference, and Bro. J. R. Roy, of Simsport, to help him. The sermons of both, denouncing sin and directing sinners to Christ, were preached to appreciative congregations, which were larger than we have had for years. Bro. Haney left after the first week, and Bro. Roy conducted the services the second week. Much interest was manifested throughout the meeting. Fifteen persons were received into the church, three of whom had joined previously during one of the services conducted by Bro. A. W. Turner. One infant was baptized. Much good was done in the way of reviving the membership. This amount of good is visible, and none can say how much invisible good was done. Many thanks to these ministers for their zealous efforts. Let all lovers of our Zion pray for our progress to be thorough and continuous."

Rev. W. T. Currie, P. C., Ponchatoula, La.: "The second Quarterly Conference for Ponchatoula charge, Mississippi Conference, was held on June 10 and 11. Bro. Johnston our beloved presiding elder, was not with us. All were sorry. We had a good service any way. The Lord was with us. The stewards are all hopeful that the preachers will be paid in full. We will bring up the collections in full. We reported the parsonage so finished that we can live in it. We have received 60 into the church. We expect to report 100 by Conference. This work is on the up grade. Two of the churches were taken off at the last Conference; but the stewards made the assessment more than it was last year. We held Children's Day, and had a good time. We have a good Sunday-school and prayer meeting. We will commence a meeting at Wesley Chapel on June 16. Bro. Rawls will help us. Bro. F. N. Parker will help us here. We expect to stay in the Louisiana Conference. Pray for us."

Rev. Geo. W. Hull, P. C., Vancleave circuit, June 29: "Just closed a glorious meeting at Mt. Pleasant Church. God owned and blessed every service. Christians shouted and praised the Lord, while strong young men wept and trembled and were converted. Mt. Pleasant was stirred as never before. Eternity alone can tell all of the good done in the meeting. About 25 persons were converted and 11 united with the church. At the close of our meeting 10 little boys and girls took the front seats and took the vows of the church. May God continue to bless the children of our land! Bro. Johnson Ware, one of our old and afflicted members, who has been going on crutches for some months, stood in the aisle leaning on his crutches, while those precious children gathered around him for him to give them the right hand of fellowship. Oh, what an impressive scene this! We were all melted and bathed in tears. We will have no tears nor crutches in heaven. Many thanks to Bros. Holland, King and Goff for valuable services rendered. Bless the Lord, I am happy on the way."

Rev. J. R. Roy, P. C., Simsport circuit, La.: "This is my second appointment and third year in the Conference. Although this is an old work, we found no house ready for us. Although a house had been given by a good brother for a parsonage, yet no steps had been taken to get it ready for occupancy. So the preacher and good people went to work, and in a short time had it comfortably furnished. This property has not yet been deeded to the Methodist Church, though we hope to have it secured before Conference. The spiritual condition of the work we think is improving. We have a good people, who are kind to us, and have done for us what they could temporally; but this is not salvation to them. They seem to think that if they belong to the church and occasionally attend on the service, and pay a little now and then, and take the sacrament, that this is all that is requisite to salvation. God hasten the day when the people will know that godly living only is Christianity! My second Quarterly Conference is over. My presiding elder was with me on the occasion and ably preached the Gospel. We protracted the meeting for eight days, the presiding elder doing the preaching save two sermons preached by Bro. Turner, of the Melville and Big Cane work. I trust the meeting will prove profitable, though there are no visible results, notwithstanding the preaching was plain and practical, eloquent and earnest. Brethren, I earnestly ask your prayers in behalf of my people. We have had eight additions to the church, and have baptised four infants this year."

Rev. C. H. Ellis, Williamsburg, Miss., July 7: "By invitation of the pastor, Rev. A. C. Burt, I came to Williamsburg, Miss., June 22, and began a meeting. It was well understood that the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification would be taught from a Methodistic and scriptural standpoint. Last year, and years preceding, there had been great ingatherings into the church, so that the meeting proposed had in view, especially, the quickening and establishing believers. The attendance from the beginning was large, and increased from day to day. Some expressed themselves as having the witness of perfect love, and very many more of the membership were reclaimed from a backslidden condition. Dram drinking had become strongly prevalent in certain quarters, effecting some of our noblest and otherwise best men and members. This evil was dealt with unsparingly, and a general pledging of total abstinence was entered into by those especially prominent in the community. Eleven joined our church, one of whom, a prominent citizen, had been the victim of strong drink for many years. He had never made any demonstrations religiously before, so he states. God saved him, and he now rejoices in salvation for soul and body. I go to-day with Bro. Burt to hold a second meeting at Bethel, fifteen miles out in the country, and from thence the next Sabbath at Pleasant Grove. Bros. M. L. White and J. G. Sibley were with us a few days, and aided in the work by their earnest prayers and otherwise, the latter preaching twice and raising a collection for Millsaps College, and the former preaching once and doing much altar work and private admonition which told on a number for great good. Bro. Burt is in feeble health, but untiring in zeal for the good of his people. A number of altars were established in homes formerly without this beautiful institution. To God be all the glory!"

ADAMS—ANNA JANE ADAME (nee Drake) was born in Rockingham, N. C., Feb. 2, 1820, and moved with her father to Kemper county, Miss., when but a child, and was happily married to T. W. Adams in 1844, and died at her home, Marcon, Miss., May 22 1894, after an illness of only a few days. She was laid to rest in the family graveyard, May 23.

Sister Adams professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1852, and during this long period of forty-two years she never faltered in her Christian endeavor and fidelity to her Master. She was punctual in her attendance at the house of God and a liberal supporter of the church. Surely she was a good woman. "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter into the joys of thy Lord."

HER PASTOR.

RAWLS—Died, in Terry, Miss., Feb. 10, 1894, Dr. D. L. RAWLS. Bro. Rawls was born in this county, near Bear Creek. His father was a local preacher. He was consecrated to the Lord early in life. Guided by the Word, he came up in life a good young man; was converted while down with typhoid fever at home. Joined the church at old Crystal Springs, under the ministry of Rev. S. L. L. Scott. Spent a good part of his life in Copiah county; moved to Terry in 1871.

He stood well among those of his profession, and did a lucrative practice until his health failed. He loved his church, was conscientious about his serving God; had clear-cut views about religion; was grounded in the glorious doctrines—possessed a large soul. He was a living epistle known and read of all men. He was a devoted husband, an indulgent father, a true friend; had strong faith.

His last days were his best days. He often rejoiced when alone with the Savior. He leaves a wife and three daughters to mourn their loss and wait for the call to go to be with him.

W. T. GRIFFIN, Pastor.

HUDGINS—Rev. J. E. HUDGINS was born in Tennessee, Dec. 26, 1816. When quite small he moved with his parents to Jackson county, Ala., where he was reared and educated. He was converted when a boy, and joined the Methodist Church. On March 10, 1839, he was happily married to Miss Jennie Mitchell. To this union were born two sons and five daughters. In 1845 he moved with his family to Lafayette county, Miss., where he lived (except two years spent in Water Valley) until his death, Dec. 14, 1893.

He was licensed to preach in 1854. Every preacher who traveled the Oxford circuit for years can testify of his love and loyalty to his church. He was a local preacher, made an independent living, yet had regular appointments as long as he had strength to go. His Summers were mostly spent in assisting in protracted meetings. Often after returning from these meetings, when the Bible was opened for family prayer, he could hardly read or pray for shouting. Is it any wonder that, with a consecrated wife, their children all professed faith in Christ and joined the church before they reached their "teens."

Three children preceded him to the beautiful mansions above. The rest are following on. He has left his descendants the rich legacy of an untarnished name and a good example. For a year before his death he was extremely feeble, and suffered intensely most of the time. He and his wife celebrated their golden wedding, March 10, 1889. She patiently awaits the Master's summons, "Come up higher."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A freight train was sent out from Oakland, Cal., on July 16, guarded by 600 militia.

Prendergast, the condemned murderer of Mayor Carter Harrison, was executed in Chicago on July 13.

Aided by the strong arm of the government, the railroads in California were moving trains in all the disturbed centers on July 14.

Charles F. Crisp, the speaker of the House, was unanimously renominated for Congress from the Third Georgia District on July 12.

The Third District Democratic Convention (Mississippi) met in Vicksburg, Miss., on July 12, and nominated Congressman T. C. Catchings to succeed himself.

Three hundred and fifty marines from United States warships were landed at Oakland, Cal., and took the city out of the hands of the strikers. Martial law was established at Sacramento last week.

President Cleveland, on July 16, signed the act which made Utah a State. The influence of the mormons has been exerted for toleration of all religious sects, by which is insured the preservation of their institutions, excepting polygamy.

The leaders of the Railway Union decided to call off the railway strike under certain conditions on July 13, but the railway managers refused to treat with them. The Federation of Labor has decided not to strike, and also the Trades Council of Chicago.

Two ladies of the American Presbyterian Mission at Canton were brutally assaulted, on June 11, by a Chinese mob. The attack was caused by the attention of the ladies to a dying Chinaman, who was lying in the roadside, restoratives having been applied by them.

A new post office in New Orleans has been provided for by the House Committee on Public Buildings. The bill limits the cost of the building and site at $2 000,000, and the committee amended it by providing an initial appropriation of $400,000 for the new public building.

A caisson of Battery F, Second Artillery, U. S. A., exploded with terrific force on July 16, at Grand and Oakwood boulevards, Chicago. Two artillerymen and one trooper were instantly killed. Nearly a score of other persons—troopers, residents in the vicinity and passers-by—were injured, some of them fatally.

Strikers in Alabama, reduced to desperation by defeat, armed themselves with Winchester rifles and swarmed about the Pratt Mine on July 16. As the negro miners emerged from the mine they were shot. Six were killed and many wounded. Gov. Jones has called the militia to arms again to avoid a repetition of such barbarity.

The New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, with a capital stock of $10,000,000, has been incorporated under the laws of New Jersey. The company is organized for the purpose of constructing a system of electric roads in New Jersey, which will extend from New York to Philadelphia, with a number of branches connecting principal cities not on the direct route. Altogether the system will comprise about 150 miles of road.

The American Railway Union officials have determined to make a desperate struggle to regain for that order the prestige it has lost in the great strike now rapidly approaching a close. The Executive Board of the Union held a meeting on July 15, the object of which was to map out a course for the future. After a lengthy discussion, it was decided to send out "revivalists" to all important sections of the West. Six agitators had been sent out Saturday, and it was decided to augment this number.

The labor leaders of Chicago called upon President Cleveland, at Washington, on July 12, to ask him to appoint a commission on arbitration, by authority given him by the Arbitration Act of 1888, to investigate and decide what shall be done to settle the railroad strike. After discussing the features of the situation, the President promised if the leaders would return to Chicago and use their influence towards restoring peace and order, he would appoint the commission as soon as the disturbance had ceased to such an extent as to render a careful, thoughtful investigation possible.

FOREIGN.

Another plot against the life of the Czar has been unearthed in Poland.

There were reported in St. Petersburg, on July 15, 218 new cases of cholera and sixty-nine deaths from the disease.

The Centrist party in Germany is furious at the Bundesrath's rejection of the Reichstag bill to repeal the anti-Jesuit law, and threatens the government with all kinds of retaliation at the next session of the Reichstag.

The Japanese government has chartered twelve English steamers at present in Japanese waters for the transportation of troops. Lloyds are asking a premium on their vessels on account of the war risk in eastern waters.

The Autumn maneuvers of the Russian army have been abandoned. This is due to the discovery of bombs intended to blow up the building which would have been occupied as the headquarters of the Czar. A number of Nihilists have been arrested.

Turkey was badly shaken by earthquake shocks last week. The Sea of Marmora seemed to be the center of the disturbances. The shocks were very severe at Abahszar. One hundred and thirty houses were wrecked there, and twenty-two persons lost their lives.

The Success which Hood's Sarsaparilla has had in freeing old and young from afflictions caused by impure blood, is really remarkable. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a building-up medicine.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists.

Both China and Japan have accepted, in a friendly spirit, the offer of the Earl of Kimberley, of the good offices of the British government to bring about a settlement of the disputes regarding Corea. Twelve representatives of both China and Japan will shortly confer with the Earl of Kimberley with the view of settling upon the basis of an amicable arrangement.

Drummond's Lightning

Remedy done great work for H. J. Lewis, of Anderson's Mills, S. C. He had Sciatic Rheumatism in the left hip and leg, and for six weeks was not able to sit up or walk a step, and suffered untold agonies. After using Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism for two weeks, he wrote that he could walk and that the pain was gone. If you suffer from Rheumatism and wish to be cured, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the two large bottles will be sent to your express address. Agents wanted.

For Mental Exhaustion

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. R. M. Tucker, Helena, Ala., says: "I have used it in my practice for some time, and am well pleased with the effects in dyspepsia, nervousness and in deranged secretions. It acts well on the kidneys, and in mental exhaustion I think it is a good thing."

The annual camp meeting at Sam Jones Camp Ground will begin Friday, July 27, 1894, and continue to Aug. 6. "A general and cordial invitation given to all ministers friendly to the meeting." Ample provision made for their comfort and entertainment. Distinguished preachers, men of God, full of faith and the Holy Ghost, have promised to aid in the meeting. Bishop Key, 1 train, and other Gideons of the Lord's hosts, are expected. Come, ye hosts of the Lord! All who desire the baptism of power and fire, come! THOMAS B. WHITE.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting under the management of the Henningion Camp Meeting Association will commence Thursday, Aug. 9, 1894.

Rev. Joe Jones, the famous evangelist, will conduct the services during the meeting. Ministers of the gospel are earnestly invited to attend, and will be hospitably cared for. The meeting is expected to be the largest ever held, and ample arrangements will be made for the accommodation of all who may attend. The L. C. R. R. will give the usual reduction of fare from all points on the road. To meet the expenses of the meeting, and to avoid the necessity of a public collection, the usual entrance fee of 25 cents will be required—to be paid only once during the meeting. The Salvation Army has recently celebrated its annual May meeting. No matter what we think of its plans, its purpose is to do good, and among a class of people that do not receive much attention from the churches. Its success has been wonderful. Only begun a few years ago, its adherents are numbered among the hundreds of thousands, and its meetings for religious worship beyond all our count. Mr. Booth at this meeting stated that in the last three months 5,500 000 people have attended their meetings, that their people have spent 111,113 hours in visiting, have held 78 500 meetings, and 15,030 persons have professed salvation. Those who "profess salvation" may or may not be all they claim. But no friends of Christ can look at what this Army is doing without thanks to God. Whatever they lack—and they lack much—they do not lack religious earnestness, and in this respect set an example that others might follow.—Southern Churchman.

WHAT I LIVE FOR.

BY G. L. BANKS.

I live for those who love me,
For those I know are true;
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit, too;
For all human ties that bind me,
For the task my God assigned me,
For the bright hopes left behind me,
And the good that I can do.

I live to learn their story,
Who've suffered for my sake,
To emulate their glory,
And follow in their wake;
Bards, martyrs, patriots, sages,
The noble of all ages,
Whose deeds crown history's pages,
And Time's great volume make.

I live to hail that season
By gifted minds foretold,
When men shall live by reason,
And not alone for gold.
When man to man united,
And every wrong thing righted,
The whole world shall be lighted
As Eden was of old.

I live to hold communion
With all that is divine,
To feel that there is union
'Twixt nature's heart and mind;
To profit by affliction,
Reap truth from fields of fiction,
Grow wiser from conviction—
Fulfilling God's design.

I live for those that love me,
For those that know me true,
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit, too;
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do.

"The Sunday-School as Affecting the Attendance of the Children on Public Worship."

It is stated by some that the Sunday-school children are not in the habit of attending the regular services of the church. And our senior Bishop, in a newspaper article, which has been copied by several of our church organs, calls attention to what he believes to be the tendency in this day—the children of the church absenting themselves from preaching. In certain localities, and in some congregations, no doubt such is the case; but I do not believe that it applies to our children as a rule. On the contrary, I fully concur in that part of the report of the Sunday-school Committee to the last General Conference, which refers to this subject in the following words:

"Because it has been a question, it gives us much pleasure to report that it has been found, upon careful inquiry, that a very large percentage of our Sunday-school children attend the regular services of the church. The attendance is proportionally larger than that of our church members. This statement rests upon investigation in city pastorates. It is probable that in our country churches the attendance of children on the ministrations of the pulpit is much larger for the schools than it would be without them."

In this short paper on "the Sunday-school as affecting the attendance of the children on public worship," I shall consider the subject in the light of my own experience and observation.

During the last twenty years I have frequently had opportunity in our larger cities to note the conditions of both church and Sunday-school work, and it has been my observation that the attendance of the children on public worship was small; yet, when the circumstances are considered, I believe that the attendance of the children will compare favorably to that of the grown people.

I doubt if the aggregate seating capacity of the churches in any of our large cities will equal twenty-five per cent. of the population; yet how often do we find these churches only half filled! It is estimated that in some of the largest cities less than ten per cent. of the population go to church. The proportion of the population who attend church increases as the city or town decreases in size, until in our smaller cities, towns, and in the rural districts, more than one-half, and sometimes three-fourths, of the entire population attend public worship. In cities I find, upon investigation, that the small attendance of children upon public worship is due to their environment and the conditions of their home life. In all large cities the people, in a measure, turn night into day, taking most of their recreation after tea. They retire late and rise late. On Sunday morning few families breakfast before nine o'clock, and frequently later. The usual hour for preaching is 10:30; hence there is no time for Sunday-school between late breakfast and church hour. Consequently the Sunday-school is held immediately after church services, at twelve or one o'clock, or in the afternoon. In this way the children frequently remain at home until the Sunday-school hour arrives, and thus neglect public worship. I observe that where the Sunday-school session is held before preaching services, there is a better attendance of children on public service. Outside of the large cities the attendance of the children upon the services of the church is good. I do not believe that under favorable circumstances children are averse to attending the services of the sanctuary. Children do what they are trained to do, and believe what they are taught to believe. In my own school, numbering 250 scholars, 100 are under nine years old. Only a few of these little ones are members of the church, and probably not more than one-half of them remain to church services; but of the 150 over nine years old, nearly all attend church, and all are members of the church except thirty. Some of the pastors and superintendents inform me that the same is true in other schools in this district.

I hold that the Sunday-school is not an institution by itself, but is a part of the church as much so as the prayer meeting, or even the Sunday service. Nor is it even a missionary or temperance society; nor is it in any way independent of the church; but rather is it only the church itself working in that particular way while carrying out its mission of evangelizing the world. The church itself is only the school of Christ, and the future of the church depends on what kind of boys and girls we raise up to take our places. The future members of the church are now the Sunday-school children. While the clay is soft and pliable it can be modeled at the artist's will, and he can easily shape it according to any genius, or skill, or experience which he may possess. So the young life of the child can be taught and trained in the channels in which it should go. As the twig is bent, so the tree will grow.

I sympathize fully with those who deprecate any arrangement or the organization of any society that tends to draw away children from the regular services of the house of God. The Sunday-school is no substitute for the church. Indeed, the greatest argument in its favor, in my estimate, has always been that it brings the young to the church. It is a feeder for the church. If in any instance the school has been so conducted, with respect to its teachings or its sessions, or any of its arrangements, as to lead either young or old away from the church, or to diminish the attendance upon the stated services of the church, or to become regarded by teachers or scholars as an equivalent for the public worship of God in his sanctuary, assuredly in such a case there has been a sad mistake.

So far as my own observation and experience go, children who attend Sunday-school are more likely to remain to church than those who do not attend Sunday-school. Grown people, in considering this matter, make the mistake of judging the children's feelings by their own. Children are not worn out by the ninety minutes Sunday-school session. Look at the scholars as they issue from a well-conducted school. You see no jaded looks among them. They are as full of life and buoyancy as when they left home. They are just as ready and as fitted, physically and mentally, for attending the church service as if they had come fresh from home. Sometimes more so, for there is a stir and a social excitement in the school-room which can not always be found at home, and this stir and excitement awakens the faculties and makes them more ready for new mental occupation. In a great majority of cases those children who, on being dismissed from school, do not enter the church, would not have gone to church had they not been at school. The church is not attractive to them. In this enlightened day I take it that no one would advocate making the school less attractive in order that the church might be more attractive. Continue to the school all the attractions it has, and give it manifold more. But let the church itself have some attractions for the young. Children ordinarily have nothing to do in church. They are not encouraged to join in the singing, for fear it might produce discord. They are not required to carry their Bibles and follow the minister in reading the Scriptures. Frequently there is nothing in the sermon addressed to them, and usually little in it which they can understand. They are merely required to sit still and do nothing. Truly, it is a hard task. Flesh and blood cry out against it. No wonder that children are rebellious on the subject.

People, old or young, are interested in a service in proportion as they have active participation in it. I can not but think that it would be a wise arrangement of any public service to have it so ordered that the mass of the people should be active participants in it. Grown persons with minds matured and disciplined may be able, by a process of mere mental abstraction, to enter somewhat into the various services. But it is not so with a child; and I have noticed that children are much more inclined to attend church in those congregations where it is the custom of the people to participate actively in the services. The largest attendance of children that I know of on public services is in a church where they sing one or two songs by themselves, and unite in giving responses and repeating the creed.

Let teachers and parents who wish children to become interested in the church services see that they take as active a part in it as the prescribed order of the church will permit. Let the seats they occupy be furnished with Bibles and hymn books. When the minister reads a chapter let each child be required to find it in the Bible and follow the reading, the parent or teacher setting the example. When the hymn is announced, let each child find it and follow the reading, and join in the singing. Let children be trained to assume a devotional attitude during prayer, and let the parent set the example.

Now, these things will not do themselves; but are they not proper and commendable?—and if practiced by the parents in our church, tempered by consecrated common sense, would they not lead to results very much to be desired?

Beyond this I know that I am on ticklish ground. But will not our clerical brethren listen to a short sermon from a lay brother? Not every minister has the gift to preach sermons to children. But this is not necessary; indeed, except as an occasional service, it is not expedient or wise. But may not every minister in every sermon put in something which shall be level to the capacity of the child-part of his audience? May not every minister, in the composition of his sermon, remember that children are to be among his hearers? Though he can not, perhaps, make his whole discourse such that they can follow it, yet surely he can adapt some of his paragraphs to their intellectual capacity. And let him be sure of one thing: No part of his discourse will be so acceptable to his whole congregation as those passages which were intended especially for the little ones, and which the children appropriate as their own. Will not our ministers think of this? Do, brethren, say something every Sunday to the children. The children will then feel that they have something to come to church for. The comfort and convenience, as well as the taste, of the children should be considered equally with the grown people in all questions relating to the arrangement of our churches and the public and social services of the church.

It is a fundamental truth that education is the main agency to be used in Christianizing the world. The Sunday-school is the chief agent of Christian education and training. Teaching and training make the man; teaching and training make the nation.

At the present day there is a great upheaval all over the world. In every department of life we observe a spirit of unrest. An all-pervasive spirit of restlessness characterizes every movement. Old principles are readily deserted, and the masses, eager for change, credulously accept the untried opinions of partisans and demagogues. Popular movements here and there in the world attest the truth of these assertions. Men are dissatisfied, and in seeking to effect a change in their general conditions, strikes of great magnitude are ordered in the labor world. Honest men and vagrants mingle promiscuously in such mottled hordes as Coxey's Industrial Army, aimlessly seeking to satiate the ravenous demon of restlessness which has taken possession of them. The questions that find expression in communism, nihilism, socialism, labor strikes, strife and war, I believe will never find their true and final adjustment, if they are adjusted at all, except in the principles and influences flowing from the Christian religion.

When the minds of men are reaching out as never before after something new in the social and scientific worlds, it is an imperative necessity that the principles of an immutable Christianity be kept before them. Wearied with the hollow pretenses of the world, disappointed by the bursting bubbles of ambition, they turn from scenes of constant change to the church to seek that "which changes not, from a Babel of opinions to a ground of common belief." The destiny of the church, of society, and of the nation, is in the hands of the children, and those hands are held out to us.

Brethren, a glorious opportunity has been laid in your hands and mine; an opportunity not wholly to come, but one which is even now here. Shall we not use it aright? Let us not try to escape our work, nor to shirk it. Above all, let us not fail to see it.

GIDEON D. HARRIS.

Columbus District Conference, June 7, 1894.

"Why They Did Not Join the Methodists."

The above is the title of a pamphlet by Rev. O. L. Hailey, A. M., a minister of the Baptist Church. Two of his members, a gentleman and his wife, decided to join the Methodist Church, and wrote him a note to that effect. He called at their house and had a conversation with the lady—her husband being absent—which resulted in their remaining in the Baptist Church. The conversation is published in this little book for the enlightenment of all others similarly benighted. The writer professes undying love for the truth, and as he has evidently not found it, I propose to lend him a little assistance. I shall not discuss his notion that "the Baptist Church is the only church of Jesus Christ," and that there can be "no union or fellowship" with Methodists. He and others have a perfect right to believe this if they wish to do so. I shall not discuss the doctrine of apostasy nor of infant baptism. My space will be taken up with an enumeration and refutation of his misrepresentations of the Methodist Church.

Misrepresentation No. 1: Methodists pretend to love God, but by willful disobedience they are guilty of "insulting hypocrisy."

He says: "But let me relate a story which I read once of an Eastern king, which will illustrate what I mean. A great king required of his satraps, who governed his many provinces, that they should wear on their breasts a golden medal which bore his name and a copy of his seal. They were to do this as a pledge of their allegiance to him, their great sovereign. He sent a satrap to a distant province, one who professed a personal love for him. To this one he sent a medal, but after some years he heard that the man had never worn the medal. The king had the disobedient satrap arrested and brought to his capital and into his presence. He asked the prisoner: "Was not my command to wear the golden medal explicit and plain?" "Yes, your majesty; but it did not seem to me necessary. I thought I could serve you as well without it." "That is, you thought you were not my subject, under obligation to obey my orders." "But, your majesty, the medal was to be worn as a sign of love and loyalty to you. You know I love you and I knew it, and I thought that was sufficient." "You had no right to presume to decide what was sufficient in my commands." "But, although I refused to obey you, I used to talk about you to the people and tell them how noble you were and how well you deserved their love, and how dearly I loved you, and I thought that would do just as well."

The monarch's eyes blazed with indignation as he said to his officers: "Take this man and throw him to the wild beasts. The pretended love of a subject to a king is an insulting hypocrisy if it does not lead to obedience. The command I gave was plain and peremptory, the thing itself was easy. One atom of reverence for my authority would have led any satrap to wear the medal, and one spark of love for me would have made him glad to wear it. Away with him to the wild beasts."

Now, what was this story intended to illustrate? Methodist disobedience to the command of Christ. What command? "Well, when he gave his commission to the apostles, it was he that believeth and is baptized." The commission as written in the New Testament speaks of going into all the world and preaching the gospel to every creature. But Bro. H. says: "It was he that believeth and is baptized." Well, don't Methodists believe and baptize? They do not practice immersion to the exclusion of other modes of administering the ordinance of baptism. They do not believe that the mode or manner of administering an ordinance is the ordinance itself. The ordinance is one thing, the way it is administered is another. Methodists do not reject the command of Christ to baptize any more than Baptists do. And until some one can show that the mode is the ordinance itself, and that the scriptural mode is immersion, they will continue to baptize as they have always done, and the charge of "insulting hypocrisy" will be of no avail whatever.

Misrepresentation No. 2: Methodists allow the authority of man in baptism to supersede that of God, and when they immerse are guilty of perjury.

In answer to the statement of his beclouded sister that Methodists will immerse if the candidate for baptism demands it, Bro. H. says: "True, but he who does it seems to me to perjure himself before God, for he will heed your word before he does God's word." . . . "Now, what do they mean, but to say that God commanded them to do that, and yet they have just said that God has not commanded that. What is that but perjury?"

It is no light thing to charge anyone with this crime. Webster gives the following definition of perjury: "False swearing; the act or crime of wilfully making a false oath, when lawfully administered." What an opinion Bro. H., and those who think like him, must have of those Methodist preachers who have immersed anyone! A perjured lot of men going about preaching the gospel! In speaking of another imaginary evil, Bro. H. says: "But the people who join them, and support that sort of preaching and practice, are just as really saying that as the preachers." So the Methodist people are all perjured. Yet Bro. H. says "they are a good people. Many of them are very excellent people." Verily, Bro. H. is a Master of Arts.

But how do we allow the authority of man to supersede that of God? Here is the answer: "Paul says there is one baptism, and the Methodist practically says, Yes, there is one baptism, but I don't know which it is, whether sprinkling, or pouring, or immersion, until you decide. When the candidate decides, then he says he is doing it by the command of God." When Paul says there is one baptism, is it not possible that he has reference to something besides mode? One must have a very watery imagination to think he has reference to mode at all. May he not have meant that there was not a baptism in the name of Peter, and one in the name of Apollos, and one in the name of Paul, but that the one baptism was in the name of Christ? As he speaks of water baptism and of the baptism of the Spirit, is it not possible that he emphasizes the importance of the baptism of the Spirit by calling it the one baptism? But we are said to heed the word of man before that of God, because we allow one to choose where God has not chosen. If men could grasp the idea that there is a difference between doing a thing and the manner of doing it, there would not be so much noise about water. When Christ told his disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel, the manner of going and the manner of preaching were not prescribed. We can heed the command and go today on foot, on horseback, by steamboat or railroad. The manner of going is not essential. A better argument for going on foot, however, can be made than for immersing in baptism, for it is well known that that was the ordinary mode of traveling by Christ and his apostles. The mode of preaching was not prescribed, and whether we preach written sermons or extemporaneously, we fulfill the command to preach. So, when Christ commanded his disciples to baptize, he did not say how it was to be done, and those who insist on mode as essential teach "for doctrines the commandments of men." We neither perjure ourselves nor give preference to the word of man over that of God.

Misrepresentation No. 3: The Methodist Church requires no change in the moral character or conduct of those who apply for membership, and no pastor dares to refuse them when they apply.

He says: "Any man in this city, no matter what his moral character or conduct has been, or is, can join any Methodist Church, North or South, next Sunday, if he wishes to, and he need not change a particle to do so, only say he wants to 'quit his meanness and join the church.'" . . . "It would be more than the preacher's place is worth for him to refuse."

These statements are utterly without foundation. Bro. H. claims to have a Methodist Discipline, and to be very familiar with it. If he had cared to know the truth, by turning to page 124 of the Discipline of the M. E. Church, South, he would have found this question and answers. "How shall members be received into the church?"

"Ans. 1. When persons offer themselves for church membership, let the preacher in charge inquire into their spiritual condition, and receive them into the church when they have given satisfactory assurances of their desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins; and also of the genuineness of their faith, and of their willingness to keep the rules of the church.

"Ans. 2. When satisfied on these points, let the minister bring the candidates before the congregation whenever practicable, and receive them according to the prescribed form."

According to this it certainly does matter what an applicant's "moral character or conduct has been, or is." Some discretion is not only allowed the pastor, but it is required of him. There is hardly a Methodist pastor of many years' experience who has not had occasion to delay the reception of applicants for membership, and some have been refused altogether without the preacher finding it more than his place was worth. "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." L. CARLEY.

Brandon District Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Thinking that some of the readers of your paper would like to hear from the Brandon District Conference, just held in Montrose (from July 4 to 7), I write you a few notes. The session was interesting from the beginning to the close. The fourth was devoted to the preachers' institutes. The papers prepared and read, and the addresses on the several subjects down on the program, were interesting, and, no doubt, much good was done by the interchange of ideas. The fifth was devoted to Sunday-school work, and in our judgment, by reason of the interest and care manifested in the preparation of the papers read and the addresses delivered, the Sunday-school cause received a fresh impetus that will result in renewed effort in that line of work throughout the entire district. Friday and Saturday the reports from the different charges in the district were heard, and other business of the District Conference attended to. The reports show an upward move in all lines, and especially as to the spiritual state of the church.

But, Mr. Editor, the most gratifying part of the session were the religious services held. They were refreshing and soul-stirring. Many penitent came forward to the altar for prayer at each service. Rev. J. W. Ellison preached a sermon that produced a profound impression upon the minds and hearts of all who had the pleasure of listening to him. His remarks were directed principally to the parents of children. We heard many express themselves as being highly pleased with his discourse.

Sunday morning, at eleven o'clock, Dr. Murrah, of Millsaps College, delivered a sermon on "The Choice of Moses" (Heb. xi, 25-27), which, for beauty of construction and finish, it has not been our privilege to listen to for a long while. As we listened we could not help but wish that he could have had before him in the audience every young man in that community.

Altogether, I believe that the Brandon District Conference will leave an impress for good in and around Montrose that will abide many days.

Before closing, it would only be the proper thing to mention that it would be hard, indeed, to find a more hospitable people than those of Montrose; and they deserve the praise of everyone attending the Conference.

IF AND PERHAPS.

If everyone were wise and sweet,
And everyone were jolly;
If every heart with gladness beat,
And none were melancholy;
If none should grumble or complain,
And nobody should labor
In evil work, but each were fain
To love and help his neighbor—
Oh, what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

And if perhaps we both should try
That glorious time to hurry;
If you and I—just you and I—
Should laugh instead of worry;
If we should grow—just you and I—
Kinder and sweeter-hearted—
Perhaps to some near by and by
That good time might get started;
Then what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

Statistics and Influence of Missions.

BY REV. R. W. TUCKER.

(Read before the Woodville District Conference, April 26, 1894, and sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication by order of said District Conference.)

The earthly mission of the world's Redeemer had now been "finished," and with his disciples he stands upon the hill of Bethany, at whose base slept the lonely garden of Gethsemane. Jerusalem, with its towers, pinnacles, palaces and magnificent temples, glittered in the distance, and Calvary, studded with fresh Roman crosses, stood out boldly in view in the transparent air. Jesus seemed for a moment to survey these scenes of his sufferings with the look of a divine Conqueror, and, realizing that all was now "finished," he stands, a victor over death, hell, and the grave. But of what is he now thinking? Of the dark and dismal night when, forsaken and alone, he stepped into the crimson wine-press, unbaring his sacred breast to receive the sword of justice which was to awake and smite the shepherd? Is he thinking of the insults and cruel indignities heaped upon him as he stands, the accused, in Pilate's judgment-hall? Of the agonies of the cross, the awful throes of death? Or is he thinking of the rays of glory which encircled him as he burst the bonds of death, laid aside his grave clothes, and came forth the reigning King over the powers of darkness and the mighty vanquisher of that last and most subtle of all enemies, death? Or is he contemplating the cohort of angels who are in waiting to escort him back to his home beyond the skies, or the royal reception which awaits him there, with the heaven-jeweled crown which is to sparkle forever and ever upon his serene and godly brow? Nay, my brother, these were not his thoughts; but he was thinking of you and of me. Casting an eye athwart the arena of time, he caught a glance of human misery and woe; and looking down the stream of years, he penetrated the ages yet unborn, and heard a groan which stirred the depths of his inmost soul. And now, ere he would say the final good-by, he turned and delivered his farewell charge, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Fired with the love of human souls, and burdened with this, their Lord's last command, the little Christian church rallied under the crimson banner of their ascended Lord, and went forth to disciple the world in his name. They invaded the armies of proud old Rome, and made them bow the knee to Christ, and entered the walled cities of classic Greece, and where their temples pointed high to heathen gods, they tore them down and erected others to the Christian's God; and although this little band of missionaries were few in number, friendless and poor, having the wealth and wisdom, with the intense hate of the combined world, to contend, and although they were ridiculed, scorned and killed, yet, ere four centuries had come and gone, they had carried the gospel to almost every quarter of the then known world. But, as it would be impossible to review the progress of missions from the beginning of the Christian era down to the present time in a paper like this, I shall, therefore, come at once to the statistics of missions as reported by the authorities of the present day. The want of time forbids me to review the missionary enterprises of the many denominations separately. Suffice it to say, the leading denominations are all engaged in establishing and maintaining missionary enterprises, and in order to give you in brief the result of all missionary effort, I quote from the March number of the Methodist Review of Missions as follows:

"Dean Vohl, president of the Danish Missionary Society, is considered at the present time to be the great authority on missionary statistics. He has made an elaborate and, as far as possible, exhaustive study of missionary agencies and results throughout the world. There are several peculiarities, however, about his method which should be carefully noted in connection with his statistical tables, and which modify somewhat their accuracy as representing what we are accustomed to regard as foreign missionary work. In the first place, he does not count the wives of missionaries as missionaries, and reports only men and unmarried females, and, moreover, counts all local societies in heathen lands as distinct missionary agencies. He also takes no account of missionary efforts and results among nominal Christians, confining his investigations strictly to mission effort among non-Christian peoples. The results as given relate only to missions among the heathen and Moslems, so that in Turkey and Egypt, for example, only work among Mohammedans is counted. Then, again, he includes missions to the North American Indians, and the Indian, Chinese and Japanese residents in the United States, Canada and British Columbia under the head of foreign missions. Also he counts the thirteen local missions in the British West Indies, reporting 158,284 communicants, as foreign missions, and the local missionary societies in Asia, Africa and Australia, amounting to the surprising number of sixty-nine distinct societies, reporting 118,492 communicants. These are counted in with his statistics as missions to the heathens. It will be noticed that according to this method an addition of something over 250,000 communicants is obtained in excess of the results generally counted under the head of foreign missionary converts, while at the same time the entire results among nominal Christians are omitted. If these facts are borne in mind, we may regard the recently published tables of Dean Vohl as the most complete and accurate presentation of the whole subject that has ever been given to the world. The following is his table representing the result of all missionary effort for the year 1891: Income or money expended, £2 749 340; male missionaries in the field, 5,094; single ladies, 3 515; native ministers, 3,730; other native helpers, 40 430; communicants, 1 158 560. It will be noticed that the number of adherents is not reported, but only the communicants. It is the custom of some of the continental missions to make slight distinction between a communicant and an adherent; nevertheless, we may safely say that the number of communicants given may be multiplied by 3½ or 4 to obtain the number of adherents, which give us a Protestant following in foreign mission fields of not less than 4,000 000; and to this also we may add the Protestant converts from the nominal Christians in South America, Mexico and the Orient, which will add more than 200 000 to the total adherents. If we add to the number of communicants reported by Dean Vohl the Protestant communicants from nominal Christian sects, we shall have, without any exaggeration, a grand total of 1 200 000 communicants and 4 500 000 adherents as the present results of missionary effort by all agencies among those counted under the head of foreign mission converts."

And now, add the communicants and the adherents, and we have 5 700 000 believers in the Christian religion among those who dwell in the heathen lands of darkness and superstition. Surely such splendid success is rivaled only by the vastness of the work yet to be done, and the above figures should encourage and stimulate the church at home to greater effort, especially when we remember that everywhere the door is open to receive Christ and the simple story of the cross.

And now as to the influence of Christian missions on the world, we have time to say but a word. And we remark, in the first place, that to the advance of Christianity the world owes its high state of civilization, and to its spread all science owes its richest materials. Wherever the Christian missionary has gone he has substituted the laws of equity and justice for those of ignorance and superstition; and in numberless instances they have given to nations a civilization and literature that had not even an alphabet. Science, under the magnetic touch of the gospel of the Son of God, has emerged, as it were, from her long repose, and is marshaling the forces of earth and air, utilizing them for the good of man. Humanity, whenever and wherever brought into vital relations with Christianity, is lifted up on a higher plane. It discovers powers and stirs emotions in the breasts and brains of men which had hitherto lain sleeping, and with new hopes and higher aspirations quickened into life and called into activity by the powerful influence of gospel truth, we see man each day taming the wild elements which once impeded his progress, and carrying them through the scientific furnaces and refineries, they come out instruments and implements which speed him on in his splendid career. It's a false science which opposes Christianity; a science which deserves not the name. Christianity and all true science goes hand in hand, and to the influence of the former all true science acknowledges itself indebted for its best and most brilliant achievements. Nor has the influence of missions been less salutary upon the morals of the world. When we look into the moral condition of man before Christ came, as also where his gospel has not been preached, we are staggered and driven back at the moral degradation and crime which exist; but how changed when once the principles of Christianity have been established! Under its benign influence the drunkard becomes sober, the sluggard industrious, the liar truthful, the cruel merciful, the murderer humane, the adulterer virtuous, the covetous contented; yes, so marked has been the influence of missions upon the moral conduct of men that even many of the enemies of Christ have acknowledged the benefit derived by the gospel's spread. But, perhaps, nothing has felt more powerfully the influence of missions than the work of education. The first thing the missionary has done upon entering a new field has been to establish schools and colleges, and, as a result, the world has more and higher education. The State, to be sure, has in many instances vouchsafed to educate, but the education furnished by the State has ever been incomplete. It proposes to educate only the head, leaving the heart uneducated. Christian missionaries have, therefore, found it absolutely necessary to establish institutions of learning in order to furnish a more thorough education. The education of the whole man, and the influence of men thus educated, and the influence of these mission institutions themselves, have had their bearing upon State institutions, and, as a result, the State is giving a far better class of education. But time would fail us to note the numberless other ways in which Christian missions have contributed to the world's civilization. The humblest missionary has shared in a work which, in the nobility of its object and the beneficence of its purpose, with the magnificence of its results, is the grandest achievement of human effort, and at no period in all the history of mission work has such encouraging results followed as now.

Already the gospel of Jesus Christ has been published in more than two hundred languages of the vocal and reading world, and, thank God, the simple story of the Christ, carried by the faithful missionaries of his cross, is destined, in its grand and glorious sweep, to bring all the world under its benign influence. "Everywhere, from sunrise to the ocean of the far-off West, the nations of paganism are beginning to feel its mighty influence. The idolater of the Ganges, and the savage of the Pacific, the wanderer beneath the Torrid Zone, and the shivering Icelander amid his bergs and banks of eternal ice and snow, have caught the radiance of redemption's star, and are hastening to the cross. Yea, in every direction the advance of Christianity resistless as volitions of Godhead, is trenching upon the powers of darkness." On the one hand we see the proud forms of infidelity and atheism crumbling into naught, and on the other the triumphant march of eternal truth rolling on with ever-increasing volume and force, reaping the nations for God, and the final result, my brethren, of this mission work and its influence will be the glorious triumph of Messiah's reign, "robed in the majesty of maraldo murian, and resplendent in the drapery of celestial beauty." Till then the command is, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." And from now the church must pass through successive eras of improvement and perfection, until the bursting echoes of a world redeemed shall revive the recollections and realize the burden of that grand old hymn of Bethlehem, for the song of the harvest will be that of the sowing:

"Glory to God in the highest,
Peace on earth, good will to men."

And now I conclude with a picture I saw in my imagination. The last conflict was over, and all the universe was musical with the praise of the world's victorious Redeemer, and I saw an archangel stand trembling in the presence of Deity, impatient to go at God's command, and then I saw him unfold his snow white wings, and faster than ever sunset flashed across the realms of endless space he came to earth, and with a voice, like that of some distant sea, he cried that time should no longer be, and I saw the earth and sea give up their dead, and the living and dead, both great and small, were caught up to meet the Lord in the air. And then I saw the open books, the scrolls unrolled, for the universe to gaze, and this they said was the judgment day. And when at last its work was done, I saw a sight which made me glad. The heathen lands, with all their myriads saved, came and fell down at the feet of the missionaries, cast their crowns, crying, "Most blessed art thou among the sons of men." And these took them up and cast them down at Jesus' feet.

And then all that blood-washed host combined
Their crowns at Jesus' feet resigned,
And then in anthems sweet and long,
I heard them sing that grand old song,
"I've been redeemed, I've been redeemed,
And washed in the blood of the lamb."

And then it was, my brethren, that I saw what an influence the missionary had been in the world. May the Holy Ghost move upon the church at home, and hasten the time when it shall hear and heed its Lord's last command: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Hong Kong, or England's Most Eastern Possession.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

At daybreak, and waking from sleep, we lay in Hong Kong harbor surrounded by yachts and sampans. The hotel yacht-men present their cards and the sampan-men urge you to take a seat with them. Very probably, however, you will prefer to stand on the deck a while and use your field-glass inspecting the city, which extends, stone-built and built upon stone, first in tall business blocks far along the island shore, then in cathedrals and gardens within the higher nooks and up the abrupt mountain sides, even to fine hotels and palatial residences which crown the passes and summits. Looking carefully, you will see fornicular cars ascending and descending the rugged steep. There are paved roads winding across deep ravines and green valleys, past rocks, woods and palaces, up, up, up to the top, thence to be extended in paths and lesser roads to the homes on the other side. On these roads scores of the lords of commerce are being carried down to their places of business in comfortable palanquins. On the peak to the right is a flag-staff, and away down on a hill, near the shore, farther to the right, where another island causes the exit from the harbor to be a narrow strait, rests a modest fort, almost unnoticeable for the lack of buildings, but its guns could do havoc with ships coming in when forbidden. Some time ago a Japanese naval officer stopping in Hong Kong chanced to walk out to this fort, and, being found sketching it, was arrested and fined.

Going to the other side of the deck, we see the peninsula of Kowloon, a half mile distant, where a little city is springing up, similar in structure to Hong Kong. When Hong Kong itself was granted to England from the unwilling hand of the viceroy of the province of Kwantung, the Chinese ill-brooked it, and finally did violence to some of their countrymen employed on British ships. As an indemnity China had to give some six million taels and this Kowloon peninsula. Perhaps England would not care if they should make another raid. (So it goes now, but if China wakes up and civilizes and makes her resources available, what prevents but that she can stand alone against the world?)

The sampan man says, "Forty cents, because cyclone," but, notwithstanding the strong breeze, make a trade with him for passage to the shore at fifteen cents. There, for another fifteen cents, employ a jinrikisha for the hour's ride to the Happy Valley and return. The Happy Valley is one of the most beautiful cemeteries in the world—in four parts: Protestant, Catholic, Parsee and Mohammedan. Here is a monument to Kennedy, one of the Hong Kong governors, and another to officers and soldiers who fell during the Tai-Ping rebellion in China, and a third to marines who lost their lives serving England in the East. Many more modest memorials are lovely with confident, Christian inscriptions, which show that all faith has not been lost amid the wickedness and corruption which show themselves too plainly in some parts of this far-eastern, mixed-residence city. The valley was called "happy" by the Chinese before it became a cemetery; it is happy with all the luxuriance of the land's vegetation, which is rich and varied; happy because "it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body," and "death is swallowed up in victory."

Return by the barracks, stopping a minute to see the soldiers drill, and go up the mountain on foot for the sake of bodily exercise. Having reached the upper pass feel the wind sweep about you, from some of the walks let your eyes feast upon the views, and at last take a stand on the front of the cable car and tremble for your life as you watch it go securely down the precipices.

The museum is worth a visit, and the public library is a good place to rest an hour. You may inspect the curio shops without buying anything, but in this case the keepers will not say, "Come again," very heartily.

Returning to the ship, you will find the trinket sellers displaying their wares, and urging you to buy if you go near. Their catseyes are imitations, but their silver is solid.

Christian Courtesy.

The Christian should be a shining example of true courtesy. And not alone under public view, but also in private dealings with his fellow-men, he should exhibit a genuinely courteous spirit. The test of Christian courtesy is much more decisive in private affairs than in public matters. It is an unpleasant fact that some people, who are popularly supposed to be very courteous, are quite otherwise in some of their private dealings with others. Christian courtesy is vitally related to Christian character.

"Jack-Knife and Brambles."

On examining the above-named book, written by Bishop A. G. Haygood, whose name is sufficient guarantee to give the book a wide circulation, we find much to commend it to the favor of our beloved Zion. Also a few things that, we fear, are calculated to shake the confidence of many in the plenary inspiration of the Bible. In chapter XV., page 252, our good Bishop says: "Satan never did, does not now, never will talk to the Almighty, arguing at him and taunting him with saucy satire as his equal in dignity and authority. To take these passages literally would be too monstrous for reverence." Now, if the Book of Job be a drama, as the Bishop is inclined to think, which we are not disposed to question, who planned the plot? Who guided the writer's mind? We answer, no matter who wrote the Book of Job, the Holy Spirit directed the hand that penned it. If not, it is not the Word of God. If the book is an inspired literary drama, which is quite likely, all of the characters introduced in it were inwrought by the Holy Spirit, and did exist at that time or might have existed. Again, if it be an inspired drama, the various parts acted by the several characters were ascribed to each by the Holy Spirit. Now, we ask if the part ascribed to Satan by the Holy Spirit be "too monstrous for reverence," is it not amazingly strange that the Holy Spirit should have represented Satan as thus addressing the Almighty? If the Book of Job be a history, then Satan did address the Almighty as represented. If it be an inspired drama, then it was both possible and probable for him to have thus spoken to Deity. If the book be history, and Satan did not thus address his Maker, then it is an unreliable history. On the other hand, if it be a finely wrought drama, and it was not possible for the recorded conversation to have taken place between God and Satan, then it is an overdrawn drama and too monstrous to have been indited by the Holy Ghost. If the Book of Job be a record of events, then these events all took place just as they are recorded, and if the book is a drama, then the events that it records existed in potentia.

On page 269 the Bishop says: "We are not to conclude from this dramatic representation of Satan's relation to Job's afflictions that God ever turns over one of his dear children, that is, any human being, to the power, caprice and hatred of the devil. A god like Vishnu or Moloch—that is, like the devil himself—might do this; but 'the God and Father of the Lord Jesus Christ,' never." The inspired record says: "Behold, all that he hath is in thy power or hand. Only upon him put not forth thy hand." And again it is said: "Behold, he is in thine hand; but save his life." Thus the Holy Spirit represents God turning over Job into the hands of Satan. Now, it matters not whether this be history or drama. It discloses the fact that God can and does use Satan as an agent in working out his purposes concerning his children. Satan could not have tempted Adam, could not have afflicted Job, could not have tried Christ, and could not have buffeted any of God's children without divine permission. Nor does God ever let Satan afflict, only when necessary for our good and conducive of his own glory. If God can not turn over one of his dear children into the hands of Satan without becoming a Moloch, then the Holy Spirit has sent out an uncertain sound throughout the earth. For myself, I believe that God has and does permit Satan to try us just as he tried Job.

God Everywhere and in Everything.

All who have become eminent in piety have become thoroughly imbued with the thought that God is everywhere and in everything but sin. This thought is both an evidence of grace and a means of grace. A conscious sense of the divine presence at all times and in all places and under all circumstances seems to have pervaded the mind of Madame Guyon, and of others in her day who were eminent for depth of piety. The more fully we are possessed of this thought the more rapidly we will advance in the divine life. Those who have read the recently published autobiography of Amanda Smith have not failed to notice how fully and constantly she recognized the divine presence in all things, at all times and in all places. With her there was the constant thought that God was in all things but sin. Her seeming misfortunes were a means of grace, and the richest blessings of providence that came to her kept her in a constant state of praise and thanksgiving. As you read the life of Amanda Smith you will do well to drink in of this spirit until your heart becomes engrossed and saturated with the thought that God is everywhere, and that he has a hand in everything but sin. Wherever we are we should be constantly saying, God is here. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Rev. John Thompson.

An Asiatic Rival of Tobacco.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

The Japanese chew nothing, nor do the Chinese, except on the borders, where they sometimes take to the quids of other peoples. We have just left Saigon, a city of Cochin-China, which is a French protectorate. There bamboos, bananas, palms, pineapples and mangoes flourish; alligators, crocodiles, buffaloes, hogs, dogs, and birds of bright plumage thrive; but the natives are the most degenerate I ever saw. They seem like jaded Chinese—small, dependent, with a worn look and weary gait. During my stay of twenty-four hours spent there I did not see a good-looking one among them. The well-dressed were servants of the French. With only one or two exceptions the thousands seen had all the region of the mouth red with their national chew, and the streets of their native towns, already reddish by nature, are made redder with the spit of the thronging men, women and children. This chew is also very popular in India. Bishop Marvin, during his tour of the world, wrote:

"The betel nut is used all over India, but is never chewed by itself. A green leaf is wrapped around it, and tobacco is often added, sometimes with lime. Other nuts and berries, and, perhaps, gums, are used with or without the tobacco, which, to a cultivated taste, improves it, but to others spoils it. Many Europeans relish it. I never tasted it, but my traveling companion tried a quid which Bro. Messmore, at Lucknow, prepared for him, without tobacco, and he pronounced it very pleasant. The constant use of it discolors the teeth, and the juice makes the lips very red. People who use it eject saliva very copiously, and the women use it as freely as the men. It is an important article of local commerce."

Yes, I saw the gaunt women at the market places, borrowing the different materials from each other, then gnawing and jabbering away, their open mouths, meantime, appearing like filthy sinks. The chew must be considered in the philology of the nations tongue, because the articulation of the people is certainly affected by this obstruction in the mouth. The nut resembles nutmeg in appearance, the red powder or lime makes the color. An East-Indian Mohammedan on board the ship has shown me the supply he bought for the journey. His score of two of fresh leaves cost two cents. So far as I can observe the Roman Catholics do most of the mission work in Saigon, and the people chew away.

Self-Forgetfulness.

We believe that many Christians make a misobievous mistake in the perpetual habit of narrowly inspecting their spiritual condition. They get the idea that they can not do any work of Christian work unless they are regulated that they can not detect anything wrong in themselves, and then they groan and wrestle, doing their utmost to get into a better shape for the Lord's business; whereas, the true way is to get eyes off from self, look to Jesus for help, and speedily lay hand on any work which God's providence shall bring within reach. Morbid self-inspection hamstrings hundreds of Christians, who might be of great service to Christ if they would only look away from themselves.—Zion's Herald.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

There are people who never get into a good meeting unless they lead it themselves.

The Cuisine.

Conducted by L. A. B.

Filling for Cake.—Roll half a dozen macaroons into crumbs, mix them into paste with whipped cream, and place between the layers of cake.

Raisin Puffs.—Two eggs, one half cup of butter, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, two tablespoonfuls sugar, two cups flour, one cup milk, one cup raisins chopped fine. Steam one-half hour in cups.—Selected.

Tomato Dressing for Fish.—One can of tomatoes, one small onion, one-half spoonful of celery seed, two cloves, a small slice of turnip and carrot, a sprig of parsley. Cook twenty minutes. Three tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with butter, size of an egg, added after the tomato is strained. This is specially nice with fried cod and halibut.—Helen T. Wilder.

Sauce for Cake Pudding and Raisin Puffs.—To one pint boiling water add a heaping teacup sugar, tablespoon butter, pinch of salt, and tablespoon cornstarch dissolved in cold water; season with nutmeg or vanilla; boil half an hour, and if good and well cooked it will be clear. Or, thin a tablespoon of currant jelly with a tablespoon water; beat well and add to the above just before serving, omitting all other flavoring. Or a teaspoon of raspberry syrup may take its place.—Selected.

Baked Cabbage.—Cook a cabbage till perfectly done in salted water. Take it up with a skimmer so as to drain out the water as much as possible. Put it into a dish, cut it up fine, season to your taste with butter and pepper, adding a little more salt if necessary; then add a cup of rich cream, sweet milk—less if the cabbage is small. Put the whole in a baking-dish and cover the top a quarter of an inch thick with rolled cracker or fine bread crumbs, on which put minute pieces of butter here and there. As soon as it browns it is done. Serve in the same dish. This is the most delicious way cabbage was ever cooked. The rolled cracker is put over it to absorb the moisture.—Exchange.

An Excellent Porridge.—An excellent porridge for persons kept on a liquid diet is made from one pint of milk, one rounded tablespoonful of white indian meal, and one-half tablespoonful of flour. Heat the milk in a double boiler and mix the meal and flour with a little cold milk. When the milk is hot, stir in the flour and meal, and cook thirty minutes, stirring occasionally. Strain into a hot bowl and season. Nothing is more nauseating than a thick, lumpy gruel. If milk gruel is ordered for a patient, make it in the same way as the above, using one tablespoonful of flour. To vary the flavor, if the patient is kept on the gruel some time, boil a dozen raisins in a little water and then cook them in the milk. Strain before using, and do not break the raisins in the milk. The beaten white of an egg stirred into this gruel makes it very nutritious. Do not add it, however, until the gruel is taken from the fire.—Exchange.

Hygiene.

Diseases Due to Drink.

Turning from the effects of alcoholism on the nervous system to its effect on the other organs, and bearing, of course, in mind that it is always difficult to determine whether this latter is direct or only secondary as a result of neurotic disease, we find numerous instances both of acute and chronic diseases of the mucous membrane of the pharynx, stomach and intestines. These are important, not only from their frequent occurrence, but especially for their bearing on the general alimentation. I believe most physicians will agree with me in the view that inflammation of the stomach and bowels in adults is almost invariably due to alcoholic poisoning.

KIDNEY AND LIVER ILLS.

But alcohol exerts its essential and most significant influence on the vital organs by being taken up in the circulation and thus brought into direct contact with their cellular tissue. We have no clearer evidence of the direct action of a poison in producing primary cell death than is afforded by the action of alcohol on the liver, producing liver cirrhosis. Typical liver cirrhosis was found in 3 per cent. of all the male bodies examined at the Leipsic Pathological Institute. But the organic changes which my own experience compels me to place in the first rank as denoting the most injurious effects of alcoholic indulgence are the diseases of the muscles of the heart and its nervous apparatus, the diseases of the arteries and of the kidneys.

DELIRIUM TREMENS.

But while it has long been known that delirium tremens, neurosis and cirrhose liver owe their existence to alcoholic poisoning, it is by no means generally recognized that chronic heart and kidney diseases are due to the same cause. And yet the practical significance of precisely this form of alcoholic poisoning, apart even from its frequency, is of the highest, from the fact that these diseases are induced not so much by the use of concentrated alcohol, but especially by heavy beer drinking. This habit of excessive beer drinking is very widely prevalent among the cultivated classes, and claims its victims among men who regard the drinking of schnapps as an act of moral degradation. It is not only that the quantity of alcohol consumed by heavy beer drinkers is excessive, but the consumption of liquid involved in the habit is no less excessive and injurious. To this, too, must be added as hardly less prejudicial the consumption of an extra and undue amount of untritive matter contained in the beer.

DANGERS OF BEER DRINKING.

All these conditions tend to that disease which is rarely absent in steady beer drinkers. The prime anatomical change exhibits itself as hypertrophy of the muscles of the heart, especially of the left ventricle. This is the result of a continuous overtaxing of the heart's powers. The prime factor here is the excessive amount of water which before it can again be given off by the kidneys, skin and lungs must be taken up by the blood and maintained in motion by the heart. The excess of nutritive matter furnished by the beer contributes to the same result. Kidney diseases as a result of alcoholism are still more frequent, and with wine and beer drinkers the extra labor imposed on the kidneys by excess of fluid renders them especially susceptible to the large influence of the accompanying alcohol. Finally, there is another interesting group of diseases resulting from alcoholic action in disturbing and upsetting the chemical processes of assimilation. The leading types of diseases due to this cause are gout, diabetes and fatty degeneration of the heart and while allowing that in many cases alcoholic action may be supplemented by contributory causes I think will be apparent that the sum of the evils properly ascribable to alcohol is such as to warn us physicians that here is a matter in which all our force should be enlisted.—Dr. Adolph Strumpell.

Fruit for Breakfast.

Fruit of some kind—and under the head of fruit all varieties of melons and berries belong—should be on every well-ordered breakfast-table. It is generally abundant in most sections of the country, and its cost is trifling when its healthfulness is taken into consideration.

There is a disposition, however, among housekeepers to use fruit—both cooked and uncooked—on the tea or supper table, and exclude it from the breakfast-table, which seems to me contrary to the best hygienic knowledge on the subject. The experience of our ancestors gave them some tolerably correct opinions in regard to diet as well as other things, and the old proverb in regard to fruit being "gold in the morning, silver at noon and lead at night," was formulated from practical observation. Many who indulge in fruit in some shape—either raw, cooked, canned or preserved—in the evening, have headache or are "out of sorts" in the morning; but never think of attributing their aching heads or disordered stomachs to the fruit eaten at tea or supper, or perhaps at bedtime the evening previous. Would it not be well to investigate such cases, and see if there is not some connection between the indulgence of fruit at night and the discomforts and pains of the morning?

Fruit may be eaten by some people with advantage at every meal, perhaps, but the consensus of medical opinion is that it is not beneficial for a large majority of people to eat it in the evening. Perhaps some one of larger experience and wider observation can throw additional light on the subject. The question is still an open one.—Ex.

Agriculture.

By Rev. J. W. McNeil.

What Shall We Do with Our Boys?

It is nothing unusual when a parent is exerting himself to educate his sons to have just the above question asked him. So many of our young men are entering the professions of law and physic, the question is natural. The idea is prevailing that those professions are more lucrative, open a wider field for development of a higher order of mind than most other professions and callings. Now, is this true? Do the facts show the members of those professions more happy, more useful, enjoying home and family more, with a wider range for thought and intellectual growth and development than even that of farming? We think not. We will admit farming is placed among the inferior callings. As a class, farmers are less educated, but under our late and improved methods in intensive farming, there is a question whether any profession or calling presents a wider field for higher development in all that makes man happy and useful. Philosophy, botany, geology, chemistry—in fact, the analysis of nature are its fields of research. The law has its books of forms, decisions and evidences in such a shape as a guide that an ordinary mind may pursue them without any extra effort as to originality and development, and yet be recognized as an educated lawyer—in fact, is an educated man in its ordinary sense, a man acquainted with books. Physic, likewise, has its books of formulas, and practice as guides, that a man may easily follow them, and have the reputation of being a learned physician; and is truly so as mentioned in the other case.

But farming until of late, since the establishment of experimental stations, had little as guides to help its adherents in its pursuit. The endowment of agricultural colleges and experimental stations was the first recognition of farming as a calling needing assistance, and a field demanding a higher order of mind. The more the question is studied, the wider the field seems to become until now some of the master minds of our country are engaged in its study.

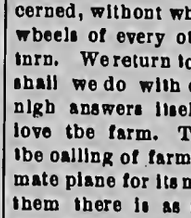
We will take the single question of fertilizing, and it is questionable whether any feature of physic gives a wider field, a more comprehensive range for thought. Plants, their nature, the kinds of food necessary to their growth; our crops, their successful management, the soils, their composition, their needs for improvement—these and a thousand matters, the legitimate outgrowth of farming, lead the mind into fields of thought and higher development, that in time successful farming will be entitled to a rank along with the learned professions—will be entitled to and conferred upon its learned adherents honorary degrees as in the learned professions. We ask, Why not? Why not confer upon the man an honorary degree who has, after close application, studied research, repeated experiment and test, made discoveries and improvements in farming of lasting benefit to the human family? Thurman, of Georgia, was justly entitled to such a distinction.

Farming should be placed upon its legitimate plane, a calling accomplishing more for the human family than any other, so far as earthly life is concerned, without which, if stopped, the wheels of every other would cease to turn. We return to our question, What shall we do with our boys? It well-nigh answers itself. Teach them to love the farm. Teach them to rank the calling of farming upon its legitimate plane for its merits' sake. Teach them there is as much honor in the brawny hand in the pursuit of an honorable and honest living behind the plow handles as there is that of the lily white in a questionable pursuit. Show them there is less temptation in farming than any other; that were it more honored to-day by the human family, there would be less suffering, less want, more happy homes, less flagrancy, less strikes, less sinfulness, and more love and obedience to God.

It is much easier to talk too much than it is to think too much.

Scrofula in the Neck

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:



Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

The Romish Church versus the Liquor Traffic.

A short time since Bishop Watterson, a Catholic dignitary residing in Columbus, Ohio, published a diocesan letter in which he used the following language: "I hereby withdraw my approbation from any society which has a saloon keeper at its head; and I suspend such society until such members are expelled." One of the societies affected by this deliverance brought the matter before the apostolic delegate, Mgr. Satolli, who after due consideration fully sustained Bishop Watterson. From his decision we quote as follows:

The liquor traffic, and especially as conducted here in the United States, is the source of much evil, hence the Bishop was acting within his rights in seeking to restrict it. Therefore the delegate apostolic sustained Bishop Watterson's action and approves of his circular and regulation concerning saloons and the expulsion of saloon keepers from membership in Catholic societies.

Rev. Alexander P. Doyle, the general secretary of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, says that the declarations of the apostolic delegate is the most important ever pronounced by the church in this country, and that its effect will be far-reaching.

The Holy Romish Church is still out of sight behind Methodism in her attitude towards the liquor traffic, but we are glad to see her following on even at a snail's pace. The world moves.

The New Star in Our Banner.

A new star has appeared in our national banner, a star that glitters to the name of Utah. The territory of Utah has been entitled to the honors and privileges of statehood for years on the ground of population and wealth, but has until now been kept out ostensibly on account of the prevalence of Mormonism. That this was not the real reason is evident from the fact that by the act of Congress admission is so framed as forever to prohibit polygamy and also to exclude Mormonism from interference with other religious faiths. This could have been done as easily years ago as now. Why it was not done politicians can tell.

Finances of the South.

In comparison with other sections, the South is in good financial condition. While the population of the South is about one-third that of the country, its bank failures during the last year were only about thirteen per cent., and its commercial failures about the same. Its manufacturing failures were only about eleven per cent. Moreover, business of all kinds is reviving in the South more rapidly than elsewhere. We ought to thank God and take courage.

What Do Our Children Read?

We are convinced from observation that few parents pay due attention to what their children read. There is care enough that unwholesome food be not eaten. Many would feel disgraced if their children were not well dressed. Yet these same parents allow their children to read whatever comes in their way. The daily newspaper, with its disgusting details of crime and lust, the impure novel, the trashy story paper, these the young are allowed to pore over till their pure minds are befouled with evil pictures and impious thoughts. In reading fiction the tendency is to idealize the characters depicted. This is especially true of the young; and so if they get hold of bad books, the personages described therein, however wicked they may he, appear to them in the light of heroes. Such being the case, is it any wonder that the readers of vicious literature frequently turn out to be criminals? Hardly a week passes but the papers contain an account of daring crimes committed by young persons whose minds have been corrupted by such literature. Only last week some boys in New Jersey, who had been reading literature of the blood-and-thunder sort, in playing Indian, burned one of their companions at the stake. The boy was rescued, but died a few hours after.

One of the worst features of the reading of impure literature is that the evil done to the mind is, in a measure, permanent, for although we may wish to blot forever from memory the foul things which we have read in vicious books and papers, it is impossible to do so. Memory does not discriminate. Well has it been said that this region of the mind is like wax to receive impressions, but like marble to retain them. How important it is then that all of the impressions made upon the mind of youth should be ennobling, lest in after years memories haunt us that we fain would drive away! Some newspapers we wot of should not be allowed to come into the home. Others may be read discriminatingly.

It seems strange to us that so many parents stint their children as to reading matter. They seem, and really are, anxious that their boys and girls shall acquire a good education, yet in many instances the young minds have nothing to feed upon save the text-books studied. We know some people who live well, but who seldom buy a book or a magazine for their children to read. The cry of poverty is heard the moment they are asked to buy a good book or subscribe for a religious paper for the family. If it is necessary that a boy or a girl have abundance of wholesome food to supply the needs of the body, it is even more necessary that the mind also should he fed. Certain it is that the young must have something to read, else their minds will become dwarfed, and they will get into mischief. If the right sort of literature he not furnished, then any sort, bad or indifferent, will be seized upon and devoured. Could the love of good literature take possession of our young people everywhere, there would undoubtedly be less dancing and card playing and wine tippling. Let us not minister to the wants and desires of the body to the neglect of those of the higher nature. A revival of interest in the reading of history and biography and the classics of English and American fiction would do much toward bettering the morals of the country.

The liquor argument is: "Remove the saloon and you deprive the poor workingman of a comfortable place to spend his evenings." But the reply of the prohibitionist is: "Remove the saloon and the poor workingman would have a home to go to."

The Louisiana Lottery.

A great many persons seem to suppose that the Louisiana Lottery is now so far away (in Honduras) that it can do little harm in this section. This is a great mistake. It has its agents here in New Orleans just the same as when it was domiciled here, and those agents are just as busy as they ever were. They do not have the same amount of business in the city as formerly, but they are doing a thriving business in the cities, villages and hamlets of the Southwest. Excluded from the mails, they use the express companies as their carriers. The following is a specimen of the kind of literature they are sending out:

Honduras National Lottery Co.,
(Louisiana State Lottery Co.)
New Orleans, La., June 27, 1894.

M. F. Rush, Esq., Porterville, Miss.—

Dear Sir: By references we find you are a perfectly responsible party, and one to whom we can safely address this confidential letter.

We stand in a position to use our judgment as to where prizes will do the most good, and wishing to establish a permanent agency with you, as we are satisfied you will make us a competent agent, providing we give you a good start, therefore have concluded to let you have a prize in the July drawing of $8,000, this being two-fifths of the second capital prize of $20,000.

In order to get the very best results from the advertisement, we wish you to sell one-fifth of this ticket which is enclosed in a small envelope, to some well-known prominent person, and keep the other fifth for yourself.

Enclosed you will also find 115 tickets, for which you must remit $100, and have the remittance reach us at least one day before the date of the drawing, otherwise the numbers sent you will be cancelled.

We are satisfied with the advertisement which you will get that you certainly will be able to sell at least from 1,000 to 2,000 tickets monthly, on which we will allow you the regular commission of 15 per cent.

We have omitted from the above the name of the New Orleans agency, as we do not wish to aid them in advertising their nefarious business. This letter, with the tickets and other printed matter, was sent to Bro. Rush by express, and by express it reached the ADVOCATE office. This letter ought to he an eye-opener to a great many people. Many very good people used to contend that the drawings of the Louisiana Lottery were honestly conducted, for, said they, "Are not these drawings conducted under the supervision of G. T. Beauregard and Jubal A. Early? And are they not honorable men?" How can this circular be reconciled with a profession of honesty? "We stand in a position to use our judgment as to where prizes will do the most good, and . . . have concluded to let you have a prize in the July drawing of $8,000, this being two-fifths of the second capital prize of $20,000." A few prominent persons here and there are elected and foreordained to draw prizes, while tens of thousands are predestinated to draw blanks. That the prizes are distributed according to the will of the lottery, just where they will do the most good for the lottery, it seems to us ought to have been known by all sensible people long ago. Old Tom Carlyle once said, "England has so many millions of people, mostly fools." In view of the number of persons who have been victimized by the Louisiana Lottery, we are not sure that the old cynic would have missed it very far, if he had substituted America for England.

What They Say.

S. B. Harmon, of Why Not, Miss., writes: "The book, Christian Womanhood, was received some days since. I have read it carefully. It is simply grand. Accept my thanks for writing it."

J. W. Killaugh, Pushmataha, Ala., writes: "I have just read your book, Christian Womanhood, and am delighted with it. It should have a wide circulation."

We are in receipt of many similar testimonials. The book is still offered as a premium to subscribers.

A Lesson in Mathematics.

A darkey once stepped into a store in a small town and asked the proprietor the price of corn. "A dollar a bushel," was the reply. The son of Ham thus replied: "You sells your corn too high. Why, I can go down to Mr. Smiff's store and buy a peck of corn for fifty cents." The world laughs at that darkey as an idiot; and yet we have recently known white people of some education, and supposed to be sound in mind, whose mathematical exploits were on a par with those of Sambo. We were recently told that the ADVOCATE is too high at two dollars a year, and as a proof of the fact a paper was shown to us which is published at fifty cents a year. The paper referred to is published once a month—twelve times a year, while the ADVOCATE is published fifty-two times a year, and sometimes fifty-three times. This paper would, therefore, be higher than the ADVOCATE if it were of the same size, since the ADVOCATE gives four and a third times as many issues in a year. But instead of being of the same size as the ADVOCATE, this paper is only about a third as large as the ADVOCATE. A very simple calculation which even a plantation negro ought to he able to perform in his head will demonstrate the fact that the subscribers to this paper are paying more than three times as much per square inch for their reading matter as do the readers of the ADVOCATE.

A Marriage.

A marriage a little out of the usual order took place in Mississippi on the twenty-fifth. Miss Mary Pearce Phelps, daughter of Dr. A. J. Phelps, of Nitta Yuma, Miss., was married to an Italian count, an officer in King Humbert's army, of the name of R. Piola-Caselli. Count Piola-Caselli was one of the Italian commissioners at the World's Fair, and it was at the Fair that he first met the fair Mississippi damsel. The bride's father was a surgeon on Gen. Grant's staff during the war, and was with the general during the siege of Vicksburg. Becoming acquainted with the South during his military experiences, he became enamored of it, and on the return of peace settled at Nitta Yuma, in the heart of the beautiful Mississippi Delta. The bridal pair will leave at once for "fair Italia."

The Anti-Lottery Bill.

Boston, July 13, 1894.

Fellow-Countrymen: The Anti-Lottery bill having passed the national Senate, is now awaiting the action of the House. It is in the hands of a sub-committee of the Committee on the Judiciary. It has been there for weeks without action upon it. The cause is apathy on the part of the committee and members of the House, rather than hostility. They are your representatives. If they are apathetic, it is because you are inactive. With you largely rests the fate of this bill. Take the responsibility to your thought and the duty to your heart as though the issue of this effort for national righteousness depended wholly on the part you take in it. Let no excuse for inaction satisfy you save that you are so busy doing your Master's work that out of all the strength and time he gives you, none can be found to be given to the removal of the great lottery evil.

What can you do? By letter to your congressman aid him to truly represent you in Congress; or by letter to the sub-committee urge early and favorable action on the bill; or by petition, signed by as many of your townsmen as you can reach, press your own and their convictions upon the attention of Congress.

Yours faithfully,

E. BENJAMIN ANDREWS,
GEORGE ALEXANDER,
JAMES M. KING,
LYMAN ABBOTT.

[We publish the above by request. We hope every reader of the ADVOCATE will read it carefully and profit by its wise suggestion. Let every good citizen use his influence to destroy this infamous concern. Let no man suppose that he has no influence with the powers that be in Washington. Our representatives in the councils of the nation are effected by the express wishes of their constituency. Thousands of letters pouring in upon them from the best citizenship of their respective States, asking for additional legislation against this mammoth iniquity, will make them far more active at this point than they have hitherto been. Read and then write.—EDITOR.]

Emulating Mississippi.

The Constitution of the Hawaiian Republic is in some respects modeled after that of Mississippi. Suffrage is conditioned upon ability to read, write and speak the English language. But this alone is not sufficient. The would-he voter must also be able to give an intelligible explanation of any part of the Constitution, and must also own a certain amount of property.

Obituaries.

We deem it proper to repeat what we have already said repeatedly, viz., that obituaries are published in chronological order. When we receive an obituary we write the date of its reception on the back and turn it over to the foreman, whose instructions are to publish in accordance to dates. No other rule would be at all satisfactory. We are generally several weeks behind with our obituaries; but at this time we are farther behind than usual, owing to the fact that we have been giving recently an unusual amount of space to field notes, in order to catch up. For the next two or three weeks we will give more than our usual space to obituaries.

The Debs' Rebellion.

The Debs' rebellion came to an end as suddenly as it began. As soon as Grover Cleveland came upon the scene with a small military force there was a great calm. Debs and hundreds of others are in jail awaiting trial by the United States Courts. How far Debs and other leaders were responsible for the lawlessness incident to the great strike will soon he determined by the proper tribunal.

NOTES.

There were 73,000 conversions in the Presbyterian Church the past year.

Shearn Church, Houston, Texas, is being enlarged and improved "to meet a long-felt want."

President Harper has succeeded in securing ten million dollars for the Chicago University.

The Finnish Parliament has enacted a law prohibiting all railroad traffic and mail delivery on the Sabbath.

Rev. J. E. Harrison, of the Tennessee Conference, has accepted the presidency of the San Antonio Female College.

T. H. Elliott, of Lafayette, Ky., has recently given $1,000 to equip and furnish the gymnasium of the Vanderbilt Training-school at Elkton, Ky.

In order to make a start towards catching up with the vast mass of communications in our drawer, we omit this week our usual quantum of clippings.

The North Carolina Advocate has become a sixteen-page paper, about the size of the Nashville Advocate. We congratulate Bros. Atkins and Grissom upon the improvement.

It is said that only Mecca, in Arabia, and Tessa, in Thibet, are now closed to Christian preachers; but a hundred years ago nearly the whole world outside of Europe and America was shut.

Since the English occupation of Egypt commenced no less than 18,000 copies of Bibles and Bible portions in the native language have been sold and given away among the peasantry of the country.

The gospel wagon has been started in Massachusetts. Rev. Alexander Blackburn, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Charlestown, has purchased one, and now proposes to make street preaching a part of church work.

Sister Jones, wife of Rev. L. S. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, died at Canton, Miss., on Monday last, after an illness of more than a year. Bro. Jones has our deepest sympathies and our prayers in his affliction.

Rev. W. F. Loyd, pastor First Church, Fort Worth, Texas, has been elected president of the Polytechnic College, to succeed Rev. J. W. Adkisson, resigned.

There are now about 1,000 000 living church members who have been gathered out of pagan populations. In all the mission stations in the world it is supposed that there were during the past year 100,000 converts, or 2,000 each week.

This being the jubilee year of Gen. Booth's Christian life, an effort is being made to raise a special fund of $350,000 for the Salvation Army. Into this has been given already $100,000, the value of an estate recently left to Gen. Booth for his own personal use, but which he has put into the general fund.

Rev. V. V. Boone, of the Mississippi Conference, has been granted a vacation on account of bad health. He sojourned at the Seashore Camp Ground a few days, but has returned to Magnolia. We hope that rest and skillful medication may speedily fit him for those ministerial labors which he so much loves.

Thirty-six young ladies have just graduated from the Chicago Training-school for Missions. Of this number seven will enter a foreign field, four will enter various departments of the home field, five will return to their homes, one will marry a Methodist minister, and nineteen will enter deaconess work.

The New York Voice having published the statement that Prof. H. A. Scomp was left out of the faculty of Emory College because of his connection with the Prohibition party, the president of the Board of Trustees of Emory College, Atticus G. Haygood, Sr., has published a denial of the statement in the Atlanta Constitution and other papers.

The Methodist preachers of New Orleans have begun a series of open-air meetings in portions of the city where the gospel is much needed. We hope for good results from this movement. Why should not open-air services accomplish good now as well as in Wesley's day? The greatest sermon ever preached was preached in the open air—the Sermon on the Mount.

Rev. P. A. Johnston, of the Mississippi Conference, is having an unusual share of affliction. In addition to his own bad health, which has necessitated his taking a two months' rest, he has family afflictions. His wife has recently had a stroke of paralysis. She has recovered, however, sufficiently to sit up and to walk about the house. We pray that both may be speedily restored to perfect health.

Gov. Tillman, of South Carolina, has issued a proclamation reopening the dispensaries on the first day of August. He claims that the decision of the Supreme Court which closed the dispensaries was not based upon the last dispensary law enacted by the Legislature, but upon a previous one, and that it is, therefore, his duty as the chief executive of the State to see that that law is enforced.

Miss Emma H. Fisher, a graduate of University of Nashville, and who has taken a thorough course at Monteagle and Texas Normal School, a very popular and distinguished teacher of modern normal methods, has been added to the faculty of Mansfield Female College. She is quite an acquisition to the college. With a faculty thus increased, Mansfield will offer advantages that can hardly be excelled.

Sister E. M. Montgomery, of Anthony, Fla., widow of Rev. H. H. Montgomery, of the Mississippi Conference, in renewing her subscription to the ADVOCATE, adds: "Try and get the preachers of the patronizing Conferences to place the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE in every family in the bounds of their work. It is spiritual and a good educator." That is certainly a consummation devoutely to be wished.

It should be remembered to their praise that the Salvation Army girls do not go down among the poor for a few weeks or simply to study them. They go for life. They ostracize themselves from society. They scrub floors, they mind the children, they wash the dead, they go where the police dare not go except in squads. The power of a great supernatural love, which God has planted in their hearts, sustains them.—Mrs. Ballington Booth.

The Nashville Christian Advocate says: "The Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur is one of the most successful pastors in the Baptist or any other denomination in this country. He has for many years made it a practice to give special attention to the habits of his people as to their religious reading and their familiarity with the denominational papers. He is unwilling that any family in his church should be without such a paper, and he takes special pains to see to it that none is left paperless."

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2 25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to June, '95.

Free to Every Subscriber, New or Old.

FIVE USEFUL BOOKS.

We offer free to all our subscribers, new and old, on conditions named below, five books of sixty or more pages each, octavo size, double column, paper bound. The following very brief description will give a general idea of the character of these books:

THE PRACTICAL HORSE AND CATTLE DOCTOR.—This book was written by two distinguished veterinarians, one a specialist in diseases of the horse, the other in those of the cow. It describes the symptoms of the diseases with which horses and cattle are afflicted, and in such a plain and thorough manner that the malady will be readily detected; it also gives the cause of every disease, a knowledge of which in many cases will avert the evil; and it likewise contains plain and explicit directions for the treatment of disease, as well as the correction of all unruly and vicious habits, etc.

It contains hundreds of valuable recipes for making and doing almost everything about a house, and is filled with hints and suggestions valuable to every housekeeper, alphabetically arranged.

THE LADIES' MODEL FANCY WORK MANUAL.—This new book embodies all the late ideas in needlework, crochet, knitting and embroidery. It contains designs and directions for making nearly fifty different patterns of knitted laces, many crochet patterns, also instruction for making many useful articles of wearing apparel and numerous articles for home decoration, among which are tidies, chair scarfs, doylies, purses, table mats, shopping bags, lamp shades, shawls, Afghans, toilet sets, counterpanes, sofa cushions, chair covers, pin-cushions, dressing slippers, babies' socks, etc. It also contains full and complete instructions in the art of embroidery, with numerous beautiful designs. The whole is illustrated by ninety-five engravings.

HOW TO SECURE A BUSINESS EDUCATION AT HOME.—This work contains practical instructions in bookkeeping, penmanship, general business, business law, commercial forms, etc. A very valuable work to an aspiring young person who has not the means to take a course in a commercial college.

We will send the entire set free, postpaid, to every new subscriber received between now and the first of September. Nothing Cheap About It.

Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism is put up in large bottles, and once seen it is never mistaken for any other preparation. All the cheap remedies put together are not worth one bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy, and any sufferer who has taken it will bear witness to its marvelous power, and say they have never seen its equal. Particulars sent by mail and the full month's treatment of two large bottles, by express, upon receipt of $5. Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York. Agents wanted.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
A Pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. B. F. Lewis: "We are getting along splendidly at East End. One Sunday, not long ago, we had two accessions on 'profession of faith,' and during the last quarter between twenty and twenty-five accessions. In the past year we have had more than one conversion and entire sanctification for every sermon preached, and more than one accession for every Sabbath. Our meeting begins to-morrow (Sunday). Bro. Partridge will be with us. We are expecting a gracious outpouring."

Rev. James A. Poe, Belzona, Miss., July 13: "I have preached about one hundred sermons, traveling between fifteen hundred and two thousand miles on horseback, in dugouts, and many times on foot. But this labor has not been without results, as you will see. I have organized two societies with a membership of sixteen, organized three Sunday-schools, and baptized six infants. I have not held any meetings yet, and greatly need help. If any of the brethren can help me any time this Summer, I wish they would do so, and let me know at what time they can help. Pray for us."

CHILDREN'S DAY.

The fourth Sunday in May, being the time for our monthly appointment at Learned, was given for the celebration of Children's Day. All who attended had favorable opportunities of having their minds and souls refreshed. Our superintendent, who is always ready to shoulder any duty the church sees fit to put upon him, was at his post and conducted the service in a pleasing way. The organist and her assistants rendered us most excellent music. The children performed their parts well—so well that we all were proud of them. The essays and recitations given us by the young ladies were splendid. We were delighted. We were blessed with more love for Jesus. God bless the children! R. E. RUTLEDGE.

Learned, Miss., July 6.

L. Evans Sadler, Pearl River, July 13: "On Monday, July 2, Rev. H. E. Partridge, our presiding elder, preached for us greatly to our spiritual comfort, administered the Holy Sacrament to our little band, and baptized three infants. Quarterly Conference was held at the close. Bro. Partridge won all hearts, and this writer had a feast of reason and flow of soul during his short sojourn among us. Being our guest for the night, we had a monopoly of his godly companionship, and was much refreshed by the blessed privilege. On the seventh our pastor, Rev. A. H. Shannon, assisted by Bro. D. C. Rawls, began a protracted meeting, which closed on the eleventh instant. There were three accessions by letter. One was one of Whitworth's graduates, Miss Lizzie Willis. Considerable interest was manifested, but no immediate good results transpired. Good seed was sown. The Word preached and the blessed promise is, 'My Word shall not return unto me void.' Bro. Rawls proved himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, and endeared himself to all. May God bless his labors abundantly as well as our own dear Bro. Shannon!"

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE HOLY BIBLE.

(Gen. iii, 15; John iii, 16; I. John i, 7.)

These three verses give the contents of the Bible in epitome. We trust that our Leaguers will consider them carefully.

1. The power of darkness stated. "I will put enmity between," etc.

(1) There is little danger of throwing our pearls before swine. God informed Satan of his doom.

(2) God established enmity between the good and the bad. The contention between the two unavoidable. Christians are soldiers.

(3) Satan's power great, but could do no more than bruise the Savior's heel. Harmless will his onsets be to us if we live beneath the cross.

(4) Victory is ensured. The eternal years of God belong to truth. Satan will be vanquished. All knees shall bow before our King.

2. Faith saves. "God so loved the world that he gave," etc.

(1) Love withholds not the best. God gave his Son, his only Son.

(2) Without this gift man's future home would have been in "outer darkness." This gift saves from perishing.

(3) Now the acquisition of eternal life is possible. Become children of God.

(4) Faith shuts hell, and opens heaven. Faith saves. Nothing else can, nothing else will. Said the apostle to the jailer: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

3. Holiness to the Lord, our watchword. "If we walk in the light as he is in the light," etc.

(1) Momentous "if." If we walk in the light. Not only extol it. Walk in it.

(2) As Jesus is in the light. Be obedient, humble, patient, self-denying as the Master. The mind that was in him must characterize us.

(3) If thus we walk, one happy result will be that we will have fellowship one with another. One in Christ.

4. Holiness will also follow. Walking in the light will enable the Holy Spirit to dwell in the heart. Where the Holy One is, there is holiness. Cleansed from all sin! Hallelujah!

State Union of Epworth Leagues.

I have just read the first number of our new Epworth League paper, "The Epworth Era," and am more than ever convinced that the League is on the double quick. It is equally clear, however, that our Louisiana Leagues are not keeping up as our strength would warrant; in other words, our interest in the League movement is not as enthusiastic as it should be, as it must be, before we can go very far.

I have found that in League work as in every other kind, strength lies in union. One League may not be able to accomplish much, but a dozen may; and if all in our State were bound together, we would be much better fitted for effective work, both individually and collectively. Everybody knows that strength, properly used, begets strength. When we see what others are doing it encourages us. Then when we have done the same thing ourselves, we press on and up. In State Unions each League knows what is being done by sister Leagues, and a friendly rivalry is begotten.

But above all is the association of Christian young people with one another, and the enthusiasm and inspiration to be derived from their meeting together. We like to meet and know our fellow-workers. Now, why can't we have a State Union of Louisiana Leagues? A convention to start the ball should meet in the course of the next few weeks—before the schools open. It should be composed of representatives from every League in the State. We cordially invite the convention to Jackson, La. I suggest that the New Orleans League Union interest itself in the matter. It is the largest body of Leaguers in the State, and represents several of our largest Leagues. Let us have the convention about Aug. 21.

HOME CIRCLE.

A MOTHER'S GIFT.

The following lines were written by a mother inside a Bible which she gave her boy when he left home:

Remember, love, who gave you this,
When other days shall come;
When she who had thy earliest kiss
Sleeps in her narrow home.
Remember, 'twas a mother gave
The gift to one she'd die to save.

That mother sought a pledge of love,
The holiest, for her son;
And from the gifts of God above,
She chose a godly one;
She chose for her beloved boy,
The guide to light, and life, and joy.

And bade him keep the gift—that when
The parting hour should come,
They might have hope to meet again
In her eternal home.
She said his faith in this would be
Sweet incense to her memory.

And should the scoffer, in his pride,
Laugh that fond gift to scorn,
And bid him cast that gift aside,
That he from youth had borne—
She bade him pause, and ask his breast
If he or she had loved him best?

A parent's blessing on her son
Goes with this holy thing:
The love that would retain the one
Must to the other cling.
Remember, 'tis no idle toy!
A mother's gift. Remember, boy!

Faith and Feeling.

Prof. Upham has some good reflections on this subject:

"There are two classes of Christians; those who live chiefly by emotion, and those who live chiefly by faith. The first class, those who live chiefly by emotion, remind one of ships, that move by the outward impulse of winds operating upon sails. They are often in dead calm, often out of their course, and sometimes driven back. And it is only when the winds are fair and powerful, that they move onward with rapidity. The other class, those who live chiefly by faith, reminds one of the magnificent steamers which cross the Atlantic, which are moved by an interior and permanent principle, and which setting at defiance all ordinary obstacles, advance steadily and swiftly to their destination, through calm and storm, through cloud or sunshine."

"We live by faith," says the Apostle. And those who learn so to live are stable, joyous and triumphant. It is the New Testament mode of life. Happy those who can say with the Psalmist: "My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed;" or, with the noble Apostle: "The life that I now live in the flesh is by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me."

The Ideal Home.

The ideal home is the one that ministers to the needs of all those who make it. It is the place where sympathy, interest, intelligent understanding of even the moods of its circle, inspiration, and, above all, repose, are found. The ideal home ministers intelligently to the needs of the spiritual and intelligent nature, as well as the physical. Its development unto perfection depends on the combined efforts of its responsible members. The ideal home was never attained by the efforts of one, but by the co-operation of all. This does not mean that each shall fit himself into a mold. A perfect home is like a perfect mosaic, where each part, with its individual difference, fits in its place to make the perfect design.

The corner-stone of the ideal home is love; it is love that is its life; love is its inspiration, its defense, its crown of victory. Sorrow, defeat, shame itself, are vanquished where love has its perfect work. "O world, where is thy sting? O poverty, where is thy victory?" is the pæan of him who is sheltered in the love that makes the ideal home.—Exchange.

Alcohol in Cooking.

We wonder if we are to answer for all sins of thoughtlessness. If so, a large number of Christian people will find a long score against them, for tempting people who are trying to reform or by creating an appetite for strong drink, by using alcoholic liquors in their cooking. Wine sauces, brandy puddings and cider flavored mince pies have been the stumbling block over which many a man, trying to reform, has fallen.

A young man who had been a hard drinker and been taken to his palatial home dead drunk many a time, desired to reform and make something of his life. He signed the pledge, and fought bravely to keep it.

One day he said to a friend, "I do not think I can remain at home and keep my pledge."

His friend asked why, and he replied:

"I can make myself go past saloons, I can remain away from the club, but I must go to the dinner table at home, and there often I find wine sauces; and the very smell of them stirs up my old appetite so it seems as if I would go wild."

The mother was told her son's trials, and replied, as so many other women have, "Oh, it's all nonsense; a little wine or brandy in cooking can't hurt anyone; it's just an excuse."

We know other men who have given up strong drink, who never dare taste of a mince pie or any kind of pudding away from home, for fear they might find some flavor of strong drink that would make it a hard fight for them to keep the pledge.

And yet women, even when their attention is called to these facts, will say, "Men have no business to be so weak," and go on cooking with the recipes themselves, and keep recommending them to their neighbors, forgetting what the Bible says about making one of these little ones to offend.

If some voice or pen could only arouse these thoughtless women, and get them to banish wine, brandy and cider from their pantries, it would not only be a blessing to the men who are trying to reform, but would save so many others from forming an appetite for strong drink at their mother's table.

Reader, are you making some one's pathway difficult by your wine or brandy flavors? If you have never thought of this subject before, do so now, and be sure you are not increasing another's burden or putting a stumbling-block in his way. We have no right to keep on doing anything which we know is, or is liable to be, a stumbling-block to any fellow-man; we are taught in the Bible very plainly that we are our brother's keeper, and must give account at the bar of God if we have willfully or carelessly led astray any of those for whom Christ died.—The Golden Censer.

The Loneliness of Age.

The loneliness of age! How few think of this, and treat with tenderness and consideration those who have outlived their generation, and whose early companions and friends have been taken from them? Unable to engage in the activities of life, they are no longer brought into contact and sympathy with those around them, and no tie of common interest and mutual dependence binds them together. They necessarily, to a great extent, live in a world of their own, with which those around them are not familiar. The communings of their hearts are with the scenes of the past and the companions of other years who have long ago passed away. Lover and friends have been taken from them, and their acquaintances laid in darkness. The forms they admired and loved are gone, the eyes that looked into theirs with the tenderest affection are sightless, and the voices that cheered and stirred their souls have long been silent. Their early world of hope and joy has become a desolation, and they sit in silence contemplating the ruin that has been wrought. They are "Only waiting till the shadows

Are a little longer grown"

to pass on to the reunion that awaits them and the glad greetings of those they love. Who would not do what he can to cheer the loneliness of the aged, to smooth their pathway, and comfort them in their declining years!—The Churchman.

When you have done a wrong thing, you are bound at all costs to repent and make restitution.

OUR BABY.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

There's something new at our house, I'm s'prised you didn't know it,
It makes papa awful proud, although he hates to show it;
The thing is not so very big, but money couldn't buy it,
If any fellow thinks it could, I'd like to see him try it.

It's half a dozen things at once—a dove, a love, a flower;
Mama calls it a hundred names and new ones every hour.
It is a little music box, with tunes for every minute,
You haven't got one at your house, and so you are not in it.

It puckers up its wee, wee mouth, as if it meant to whistle;
A gold-mine weighed against it then were lighter than a thistle;
Papa said so the other night, I thought it sounded splendid,
And said it to myself until I fell asleep and ended.

Of course you've guessed it by this time, our gift that came from heaven;
Mama declares the darling thing was by the angels given;
But then some folks are very slow, and some are stupid; maybe
I ought to say, right straight and plain, come home and see our baby!

A Thought for Mothers.

Talking the other day with one of the most sensible women I know, one, too, whose large family is so well ordered that there never seems to be a particle of friction in its management, I was pleased with something she said about children, and I determined to repeat it to a wider audience than the one my friend had at the moment.

"I never fret about the little faults of manner, nor even about transient irritabilty, in my children," said the lady. "Children, as they are growing up, go through many temporary conditions, which, if apparently unnoticed, pass away. In fact, there are little moral disturbances to be expected, like whooping-cough and measles in the physical life, and, if the general home atmosphere be wholesome and the trend right, I do not think it worth while to be too much distressed over occasional naughtiness."

Is there not comfort here for you, dear friend, who can not understand why John, carefully trained as he is, sometimes in the eager heat of play bursts into the room like a tornado, or forgets to put cap on nail and books on shelf, as an orderly boy ought? And if Sarah is not so patient as she should be with the younger ones, sometimes has mysterious fits of depression, or is hysterically gay with no cause that you can see, summon your own gentle self-possession to the front; remember that the period between childhood and youth, like all transition periods, is very trying, and while you pray a good deal about your darling, do not worry about her or talk to her too much. Above all, do not suffer yourself to be always censuring a sensitive boy or girl, to whom judicious praise now and then will be a tonic.

Line upon line, precept upon precept, we must have at home. But we must also have serenity, peace, and the absence of petty fault-finding, if home is to be a nursery fit for heaven growing plants.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

What is Politeness?

To avail much, politeness must be a habit, not an occasional mood. Like full dress, it really shows to disadvantage if not worn with the air of having been born in it. We must wear it at home, or we shall not find it fitting us well in the house of our neighbor. I have a charming friend who insists that politeness is but the highest order of selfishness—that the desire to be thought well of by all good people, nay, by all people, good and bad, is at the bottom of it. We need not accept this theory; but, after all, it is worth while to have everybody feel that we wish to make our presence a comfort, and not an embarrassment.

Mere elegance of manners, mere correctness in following conventional rules, mere accuracy of deportment as regards physical bearing, and mere facility in gliding through the intricacies of formal social gymnastics, are, doubtless, important attainments; but politeness may not be reached by them. You must be constantly thoughtful of what will please others; you must find your own happiness in making each person happy that you meet; you must be a storage battery of cheerful and engaging influences, an optimist, a prophet of good, as well as a person of easy and polished bearing. I have met very courtly people who were exceedingly impolite; they forgot to overlook the discourtesy of others."—Chautauquan.

MARRIAGES.

SOUTER—MONTGOMERY.—At the Methodist Church in Anthony, Fla., on the eventug of June 21, by Rev. J. G. Graham, Mr. Christian D. Souter to Miss Minnie M. Montgomery, daughter of the late Rev. H. H. Montgomery, of the Mississippi Conference.

GOODE—FOSTER.—In the M. E. Church, South, at Pleasant Grove, Clay county, Miss., June 14, 1894, by Rev. S. B. Sullivan, Mr. W. J. Goode and Miss Margie Foster, both of Clay county, Miss.

WILLIAMSON—CREEKMORE.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Creekmore, near DeKalb, Miss., July 11, 1894, by Rev. F. B. Ormond, Mr. John N. Williamson and Miss Bessie Creekmore, all of Kemper county, Miss.

OBITUARIES.

BRELAND—Rev. R. A. Breland and wife were called upon to mourn the death of their little babe, MELLEN, on the afternoon of July 10, 1894.

CAREW—At Ocean Springs, Miss., midnight, Thursday, June 27, 1894, FOSTER CARL CAREW, aged two and one-half years, son of Joseph W. Carew and Katie Seymour, of New Orleans, La.

GILES—Westville is sadly bereft. Sister EMELINE GILES, wife of Dr. Giles, and a consistent wife, mother, neighbor and member of the M. E. Church, South, "fell on a sleep" the night of the twelfth. On July 14 we interred her remains into the earth in the family cemetery. Pray for us in this sad bereavement. Her pastor,
J. C. ELLIS.

DANCER—Mrs. POLONIA ANN DANCER, wife of J. W. Dancer, of Crystal Springs, Miss., was born in Madison county, Ala., June 23, 1838, and died May 7, 1894. She was the daughter of Denny McIntosh. She was brought to Christ at the age of sixteen years, and became a member of the Baptist Church, in which she lived till 1868, when she was married to J. W. Dancer, soon after which she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

She was a truly pious woman. She was eminently faithful in all the relations of life. She loved her church, and was devoted to her friends, especially to her pastor. She was a great sufferer. Much of the time for six or eight years she was almost an invalid. She was very patient, and usually manifested a saddened cheerfulness. She was a gentle, quiet wife, always careful and helpful. She was a noble, affectionate mother. She leaves two daughters. Mrs. Ford, of McComb City, and Miss Willie live to comfort their father in his desolation.

She had fully trusted Jesus Christ, the world's Redeemer, and hence was ready when the messenger came. Her pastor interrogated her, when nearing the end, as to her final messages to loved ones, and she said, "Tell them to meet me in heaven." Thus another ransomed soul has entered life eternal. She was buried at Old Crystal Springs Cemetery. May God comfort the sorrowing! is the prayer of her friend and theirs,
R. D. NORSWORTHY.

FORD—Died on May 25, 1894, Mrs. CLARRISA RAWLS FORD. She left to mourn her loss a husband, nine precious children, two brothers and a sister. She was a daughter of Mr. James W. and Mrs. Sarah Rawls, of Marion county, Miss.; both of whom preceded her to the grave. She was married to Judge T. S. Ford at the age of twenty-one years. In her early youth she became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. From the time of her marriage her home has been here in Columbia, site of Marion county.

Her life was such as to cause her death to be a real bereavement to the entire town. There is crape in every house, there is grief in every home. As a church member she was blameless and useful. As a Christian, patient and pure. As a friend, tender and true. As a housewife and mother, she was, in truth, a model. Her visible and personal life measures but thirty-eight years, but the aroma, reach and power of her influence none can tell; it still lives on. To human sight her untimely death is absolutely inscrutable, though faith in God sustains the bleeding hearts she left behind. She followed Jesus while she lived, and now has followed him in death. To the sorrowing loved ones left behind earth has lost half its attraction, and heaven seems more real, nearer and dearer. Under the crushing sense of sadness, we invite all to look up, though sight be dimmed by tears, and fondly anticipate a glad reunion and an undisturbed association throughout eternity.
J. G. SIBLEY.

CURES OTHERS

Mrs. J. H. LANSING, of South Glen's Falls, Saratoga County, N. Y., writes: "After my third child was born, I barely gained strength enough in two year's time, so as to be able to crawl about to accomplish the little house work that I had to do, and that only by lying down to rest many times each day; had sick headache very often, many pains and aches all the time. After I had taken one bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription' I could see a great change in my strength and less sick headaches. Continued taking the medicine until I had taken seven bottles of the 'Favorite' and one of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I am now able to do housework for myself and husband and two children aged nine and five. I also take dressmaking, and enjoy walking a mile at a time, when I can have the time to do so. And I am sure it is all due to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as I know I was failing fast before I commenced to take it."

OBITUARIES.

VAUGHN—Geo. W. Vaughn was born in Lowodes county, Miss., Dec. 8, 1822, and lived and died in the same community. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Mt. Pleasant when a young man; was married to Sarah E. Perkins, with whom he raised a large family. He died May 9, 1894, after twelve weeks of suffering. His funeral was preached by the writer, and his body buried at Mt. Pleasant.

He was the father of the late Rev. Luther Vaughn, of the North Mississippi Conference. He was a good man and good citizen. For thirty years he had been steward of his church, and never missed a quarterly meeting when in his power to go. He has also been superintendent of his Sunday-school for many years. He was a man of fine judgment, very industrious and, therefore, prosperous.

For years he furnished his pastor a house free of charge. He lived a true Christian life at home amid many temptations, afflictions and trials. He did not have to go to strange parts to find opportunity to do good. He buried several of his children, helped three widowed daughters to raise their children, buried his wife; worked negroes both as slaves and freedmen, yet was never known to murmur at Providence, speak a bad or vulgar word, but was always ready to suffer for Christ's cause.

To his afflicted children let me say: Live true to your father's example, and your last end shall be like his. K. M. Harrison.

By a committee, consisting of J. C. Neilson, P. J. Ussery, F. H. Rowen and John Lottis, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father to take Geo. W Vaughn home to his reward; therefore, be it

Resolved That in his death the church here has lost her best member; the Sunday-school, a faithful and efficient superintendent; the community, one of its very best citizens, and his children and grandchildren a very true and indulgent father; but that heaven is the gainer. K. M. Harrison, for Committee.

McKINLEY—Bro Floyd McKinley was born Oct. 16, 1872, and fell asleep in Jesus, May 30, 1894. At the age of twelve he united with the Methodist Church, but was not converted till May, 1892. June 4, following, he united with East End Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., and at once consecrated all his energies to the Lord's work. East End was only one year old, and efforts were being made to complete the house of worship. He threw himself into this work, nor did he relax his energies until the church was dedicated, May, 1893. When South Side Church was started he was added to the Building Committee, and its rapid erection was largely due to his efforts. On Oct. 16, 1893, under the preaching of Bro. Carradine, he received the blessing of perfect love, and he lived the life of entire sanctification. During the present year he has been a most efficient member of the Board of Stewards. He had charge of other most important church work, and God was blessing him in it. He was a man of prayer, exemplifying Paul's "Pray without ceasing." He has been known to spend hours with young men, after business closed running away into the night, leading them to Christ. He said just before his departure, "I have a religion to live by and, thank God, I have one I can die by." His friends chartered a special train to carry his remains to Lauderdale, his last resting-place. B. F. Lewis.

Meridian, Miss.

SARTIN—Bro. Alfred Sartin was born in Pike county, Miss., on Feb. 6, 1818, and died in the full assurance of faith on Feb 21, 1894. He spent a portion of his early manhood in the county of his nativity. In 1849 he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to which he was ever true and loyal, developing in his daily walk, life and character the fruits of gentleness, piety and love. He was a growing Christian. As he grew in years God's grace was multiplied, and his pathway, like that of the just, shone more and more until the Master said, "It is enough; come up higher."

I became acquainted with him in my boyhood, and never knew a better man. He was twice married. In 1837 he was wedded to Miss T. Powers and in 1868 to Mrs. Francis Newton, who still survives him.

Another link in the chain which bound the present with the past generation has been severed. Another good man has gone to his reward. As the end of his journey approached all was well. Life's sun went down without a shadow or a cloud to obscure its brightness. Farewell, dear old friend, but not forever, we will meet again "in the sweet by-and-by." May the comforting grace of God solace the hearts of the loved ones left behind!

W. W. Hurst.

ADCOCK—Mary Ann Adcock, wife of Geo. W. Adcock, died at her residence, near Holley Springs Church, Red River parish, La., April 1, 1894, aged 49 years 4 months and 8 days. Born of godly parents, she gave her heart to God while young, and illustrated in her consistent life the beauty of our holy religion. She had during a large part of her life divers trials, but these drove her nearer to her Savior, and made more conspicuous her trust in him, who said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

As her pastor, I interviewed her a short while before death, and found that the same religion that had supported her for so many years through trials and afflictions was still her comfort, and enabled her to exclaim, "I am ready to go." She was beloved by the community in which she lived, as was attested by the multitude who attended the funeral services and followed her remains to the cemetery. She leaves a husband and four children to survive her. May they emulate her virtues and meet her in heaven! R. S. Isbell.

SANDERS—Fannie Wemple Sanders was born near Mansfield, La., Sept. 18, 1861, and died in Beaumont, Feb. 13, 1894. Sister Sanders joined the Methodist Church in her youth, and remained a consistent member until death called her hence. She was beloved by all with whom she came in contact; gentle, unassuming, with a sunny disposition, she at once gained the confidence and won the hearts of those with whom she was acquainted. As a wife and mother, she was such as we delight to honor. Her home was one of sunshine, and now that she is gone she is missed by husband, children and friends. She is missed and mourned for, yet we are all conscious that her life was lived in view of eternity, and that when the summons came she was ready to meet him whom she loved so well and to whom her life was so thoroughly consecrated. Yes, her piety was unquestioned; none that knew her doubted her profession, for her life accorded with it. She has gone before, and may we who are left behind so live that in the great beyond we may meet again, where partings come no more, in those mansions which Christ has gone to prepare!

Leon Sonfield.

KNIGHT—J. E. Knight was born in Halifax county, N. C., July 14, 1816, and died at his home in Lawrence county, Miss., Nov. 2, 1893, making his age seventy-seven years three months and eighteen days.

He was a kind husband and father, and was ever ready to offer a helping hand to his fellow-man. His mottoes through life was: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," and "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and was interred in the cemetery at Bahala Chapel with high masonic honors, Rev. F. M. Williams, his beloved pastor, conducting the funeral service, which was done in a manner so charitable and Christian—like that his memory will ever be cherished by those left to mourn the loss of husband and father. He had been residing at the home where he died sixty years and two days, and had maintained during all these years an enviable reputation for integrity and power.

We mourn his loss but have the blessed hope of joining him where there is eternal rest.

His devoted son, Phil. B. Knight.

BAILY—Sister Elizabeth C. Baily (nee Brown) was born in Frankfort, Ky., Nov 8, 1816, and died at her son's, John Baily's, in Franklin, La., May 16 1894.

The deceased was twice married. First to James Benton, of Bayou Sara, La., in 1852, who died within two weeks with yellow fever. Next, to Alonzo Baily in the same year. Bro. Baily died in Franklin, La., Oct. 18, 1877. Sister Baily united with the Christian (Campbellite) Church in her native State, at the age of twelve years. In 1861, after her removal to Louisiana, she united with the M. E. Church, South, and lived a worthy member until death. In old age she was often unable to attend preaching, but her faith in God never wavered. We talked with and prayed with and for her on her deathbed, and she said each time that her way was clear, and she was anxious to go and be with Jesus at home. H. Armstrong.

WING—My sister, Sarah Ann, was born in Pontotoc county, Miss., May 28, 1849; was married to Wm H. Wing, Nov. 8 1868 and fell on sleep in Jesus in Springtown, Ark., May 14, 1894.

She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Hunter's Chapel, Pontotoc county, Miss., in 1866, since which time till her departure from earth she bore testimony to a conscious salvation and hope of eternal blessedness. In all the relations of life, as daughter, sister, wife, mother and friend, the dutiful, meek and kindly spirit of a true Christian was ever manifest.

May the divine grace in which the departed one rejoiced be the consolation of the bereft husband, children, brothers, sisters and friends, and may we all meet "in the sweet by-and-by," "on that beautiful shore!"

G. W. Bachman.

Kosciusko, Miss.

SARTIN—In McComb City, Miss., May 29, 1894, the immortal spirit of Sister Louisa S. Sartin sweetly passed from earth to heaven. She was the daughter of Dr. E and Mrs. P. J. Cowart; born in Lincoln county, Miss., Sept. 17, 1863. She was married to Mr. Seph Sartin, Sept. 17, 1880. Soon after her marriage she joined the Methodist Church, in which she lived till death claimed her spirit.

Her life was, so far as this writer knows, a consistent one; her death, gloriously triumphant. A husband, little son and aged father, with a host of relatives and friends, mourn her departure from earth. She left the brightest evidences of her future welfare. May the Spirit guide all of her family and friends safely over the sea of life, that finally each may meet the other in heaven! M. L. Burton.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. R. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Mortal that standest on a point of time,
With an eternity on either hand,
Thou hast one duty above all sublime,
Where thou art placed serenely there to stand.
—Lord Houghton.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

If you would convince a person of his mistake, accost him not upon that subject when his spirit is ruffled.—Watts.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

It is given out that the emigration from the United States to Europe is greater than the immigration into this country.

The long distance electric railroads are coming rapidly. One is to be built from Columbus, Ohio, to Cincinnati, 120 miles, and is expected to be in operation by December, 1896.

All interest in the Senate proceedings for the present week centers in the efforts which will be made to settle the tariff controversy as raised by the report of the conference disagreement. The week will begin with the question in the foreground, and no one can see what amount of time will be consumed upon it.

A serious trouble is confronting the farmers in various parts of Maryland. They are just in the midst of the threshing season, and all as busy as can be, and the laborers, who are mostly negroes, have gone on a strike for a raise of wages. They have been getting 75 cents per day and are demanding $1.

Grand preparations are being made for the entertainment, Sept. 17 to 22, of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows in Chattanooga, with headquarters on Lookout Mountain. The Grand Lodge will be three days in session. At their high councils the foremost men of the land will sit, including twenty-five from the Canadas and distinguished men from foreign countries.

The A. R. U. Executive Committee has declared the strike in California off unconditionally. They sent a notice to that effect to Superintendent Fillmore. The militia will probably remain for a few days to look after those who have been intimidating workmen. The railway companies claim to have enough men already to conduct its business, and many of the strikers will not get back.

It is stated on what is considered reliable authority that the President has, in addition to Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, chosen Judge Lyman Trumbull, of Chicago, and a prominent New Yorker who has always taken a deep interest in the cause of labor, and whose judgment in questions of this kind is regarded as fair and impartial, to serve as members of the committee to investigate the Chicago strike.

Six indictments have been brought against Debs and his co-partners in Chicago. In one of them they are charged with conspiracy. In another they are charged with conspiring to obstruct interstate commerce; in the other three they are joined as conspirators with other persons who committed lawless acts. Debs and the other officers are already under $10,000 bail each under the original indictments returned against them.

It is said that the government contemplates a radical change in its plan for the disposition of troops in the country. Hitherto the great bulk of the army has been kept scattered in remote posts in the far West, with the idea that so they would be able to keep the Indians in awe and preserve peace on the frontier. Now it is proposed to congregate the troops in posts situated near the large centers of population of the country, where they may be readily brought into use in such emergencies as the late strike.

Senator Caffery made a talk on sugar in the Senate on July 20. His speech was a protest against free sugar, as suggested by other members of the Senate. He said there were 400,000 persons, more or less, employed in the industry in Louisiana, and at least $100,000,000 of capital, and if the bounty for the current year was withheld and the eight of a cent duty taken off, the industry would be destroyed. It was not Democratic to overthrow this industry. It was not human, but the height of cruelty to the citizens of a Democratic State.

FOREIGN.

The Italian government has determined to banish all convicted anarchists to an island in the Red Sea, where some are already confined.

The spread of cholera in Russia is assuming alarming proportions. There are 200 new cases and 100 deaths daily. There are 1,000 patients, chiefly factory and barge hands, in the hospitals.

Mr. Gladstone's son has written to Major J. B. Pond, of New York, to say that his father's health is not good enough to permit his visiting this country. He has not recovered from his attack of influenza of four months' ago, and is able to do very little.

The French Chamber of Deputies has adopted the second clause of the anti-Anarchist bill, providing that anarchist trials shall be before a correctional tribunal, composed of judges, instead of being tried by juries. The vote was 330 for the clause, and 176 against it.

The report that war had been declared between China and Japan is not confirmed, but China is preparing for war. The Chinese are blocking the northern passage of the Yang-Tse-Kiang, the great river of China. Incoming vessels are thus compelled to pass nearer the Woosung forts.

It is said that the Turkish authorities have been industriously suppressing the accounts of the real damage done by the recent earthquake in Constantinople. The mortality was very great, in Stamboul (the old city) alone more than 200 having been killed outright. The damage to property is estimated at not less than $25,000 0000.

The Fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla, once fairly tried, becomes the family medicine, speaks volumes for its excellence and medicinal merit. Hood's Sarsaparilla is Nature's co-worker.

Hood's Pills become the favorite cathartic with every one who tries them. 25c.

Prince Bismarck received on Sunday a visit from a number of journalists who have been attending the conference of journalists and authors held at Hamburg. The party, numbering about 200, including ladies, went over to Friedrichsruhe to see the ex-chancellor, and were greeted by the prince, who told them he felt honored by their attention.

The C. F. Risley Co., Wholesale Druggists, 62 Cortlandt St., New York, ordered a large supply of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, and sent this with the order: "It is strange that your remedy is not more generally known, as its effects on rheumatism are simply marvelous—superior to any rheumatic medicine we have ever sold." This is high praise, but the remedy fully deserves it. If you have the rheumatism send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles—enough for a month's treatment. Agents wanted.

CAMP MEETINGS.

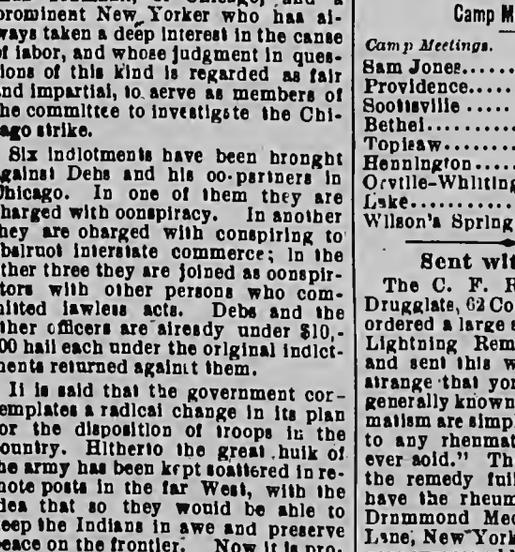
The Wilson's Springs Camp Meeting, inaugurated this year on the Escatawpa charge, and located eight miles north of Scranton, on the L. and N. R. R., will begin on Thursday before the fifth Sunday in September. Those coming by rail will be met by hack at Scranton and Orange Grove. Those coming from the west get off at Scranton. Those from the east get off at Orange Grove. Ministers and all others are cordially invited to come.

G. R. ELLIS, P. C.

Lake Camp Meeting will commence Friday night, Aug. 24, 1894. Rev. E. G. Kilgore, of Memphis, Tenn., and other eminent preachers have been secured to conduct the religious services. The large hotel will be open for the accommodation of visitors; also refreshment stands. Tents may be had by applying to the undersigned, free of charge. A line of hacks will be run from the grounds to Lake, meeting all trains. The A. and V. R. R. will sell round-trip tickets for one and one-third fare. Gate fee of ten cents will be charged for the meeting. Everybody invited to come.

W. M. THORNTON, Chair'n Ex. Com.

June 18, 1894.



Just a little Gumption,

in the matter of washing, will lead you to use Pearline. Look about you, and see the work of your friends who use it. Isn't the work easier? Isn't it better done? Can't you see that it must be easier and better without all that rubbing that tires out women and wears out clothes? Gumption is the seeing why and the knowing how. You can't know how to wash with the least work and the most saving, unless you use Pearline.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 370 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Cure of Inebriates.

At the Dr. Taylor "Help Club's" last meeting (Institute, 285 Camp street, New Orleans) it was reported that Dr. Taylor had appeared, by request, before the standing committee of the Senate, and as a result of his statement, and the unquestioned value of his indorsements, they had expunged the name of the Keeley Institute from the Bill No. 107, in reference to the treatment of chronic inebriates, etc., thus showing that the value of the Taylor treatment was equally capable to compete for the duties.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Help Club be accorded to the Senate for their justice.

EVERY HOUR.

BY HOUGHTON.

So should we live that every hour
May die as dies the natural flower—
A self-reviving thing of power;
That every thought and every deed
May hold within itself the seed
Of future good and future meed;
Esteeming sorrow, whose employ
Is to develop, not destroy,
Far better than a barren joy.

Importance of the Stewardship.

QUALIFICATIONS OF A SUCCESSFUL STEWARD.

To the District Conference, Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South:

The Discipline enumerates the following as to the qualifications and duties of stewards, to wit:

Qualifications: "They should be men of solid piety, familiar and in love with Methodist doctrine and discipline, and competent to care for the business interests of the church."

Duties: "To estimate and provide necessary funds, and properly account for the same; relieve the needy and distressed; inform the pastor of sickness and infractions of the laws of the church among its members, as well as his own (the pastor's) errors. To attend official meetings and give advice when asked, and to provide elements for the Lord's Supper."

This very concisely covers the entire ground, but, of course, leaves plenty of room for individual construction and elaboration.

A consecrated, earnest, faithful Board of Stewards will add greatly to the efficiency and usefulness of the pastor by their personal contact, sympathy and advice; assisting him in holding the various meetings required, providing for his support and necessary expenses of the church, and raising money to meet all demands upon the church made by the Annual Conference; assisting him in caring for the distressed, and ministering to the poor, and in his absence looking after the spiritual interests of the church by holding the social meetings, and when practicable seeing that the pulpit is filled.

Such a Board of Stewards is a power that will always gladden the heart of a faithful pastor, and inspire him to his utmost capacity in accomplishing the purpose of his mission.

Now, to discharge these duties successfully, a steward must regard this as a work that is not to be neglected, unless unavoidable; but hold himself in readiness at all times to attend the meetings of his Board, and to discharge promptly and systematically whatever duty may be assigned to him, and not allow his business, his pleasure, or his feelings, to influence his action, but make all other matters subordinate to these duties, which, if not allowed to go by default, will require a very inconsiderable part of his time, and not seriously conflict with usual avocations. It is very important to cultivate the habit of a conscientious discharge of these duties, to be punctual to all things relating thereto, when any seeming hardship or privation growing out of them will very soon disappear.

One, if not the most serious, hindrance to the efficiency of stewards who have the qualifications required by the Discipline is procrastination, which should be combatted, as otherwise it will surely result in indifference and official worthlessness.

The Board of Stewards should aid and support their pastor with all of their influence in every possible way, in all proper work, never allowing their personal dislike either to him or his methods to antagonize their hearty co-operation and support. It is the work of the Lord and his church, and not of the temporary pastor, that suffers from such defection, though his heart may ache because his efforts are paralyzed by those who should hold up his hands.

No Board of Stewards should send their pastor to the Annual Conference without first providing for all the financial obligations of their church. These obligations are sacred, and to repudiate them is not honorable, and not permitted in other societies. The assessments are always moderate and reasonable, and rarely require personal sacrifice to meet them, and it is my observation that when proper effort is made, and in due time, they are usually paid.

The Board of Stewards occupy the same relation to the church in its financial economy that a Board of Directors of a bank or other business corporation does to it, and failure to manage the business entrusted to them with intelligence and fidelity will produce the same financial results upon one as upon the other. But when a business corporation fails, its creditors are apt to begin attachments and other legal proceedings, and hold their directors accountable. While the creditors of the church are not so clamorous, and usually submit to their losses in silence, yet their hardships are equally great.

There is also another feature which should not be lost sight of, either by the church or individual member, and that is, that a certain amount of money must be provided, and the member or the church that does pay up must make good the deficiencies of those who do not, otherwise there would be greater distress.

This church repudiation ought to stop, and our churches should be educated to pay their debts, and should be made to feel that God will not excuse remissness on this line, and this reformation must begin with individuals, and through the efforts of the Boards of Stewards.

Respectfully submitted.

W. H. SCALES.

Wanted, an Education.

No one knows how many boys and girls there are in Louisiana whose minds are hungering for an education and whose limited circumstances forbid even a hope of attaining it. These are sad cases, especially so when we see so much money flowing freely in causes not half so important to the State and the Church as the education of their young people.

During the past week I have received a pathetic appeal from a young local preacher, asking me to borrow a hundred dollars to help him through college next session. By the help of friends he was able to attend last session and made excellent use of his time and opportunities. But he says: "Times are so hard I don't know whether I will get any help, and I am not far enough along to help myself. If you could borrow a hundred dollars for me, it would be very much appreciated." This young man is manly enough to say that he does not ask for a gift, but for a loan, which is to be returned with interest. If he had asked for a donation of a year's expenses at Centenary College, his request would never have been made public. But making the request of a loan which he pledges to return, I put his case before those Methodist men and women in Louisiana, who have money and no children of their own to educate. Here is an opportunity for investment which will pay handsome dividends in a future career of usefulness to the Church and State. It is said of Mr. Childs, of Philadelphia, that for many years of his life he kept from fifteen to twenty boys and girls at school. His is an example worthy of imitation by every man and woman who has money. I know Methodist men and women whose money is rusting, and that rust will be a witness against them and will eat their flesh as if it were fire, if they do not rub off the rust by putting their money in causes working for the good of humanity.

A brother who lives in a different State told me the other day that he had authorized his presiding elder to select a boy and send him to Centenary and he would pay the bill. Shall the Methodists of Louisiana allow one of another State to do that, and not a Louisianian rise up and say that he will do as much? There ought to be many who will do it. Boys and girls of limited means and hearts hungry for knowledge are found in every community, and waiting for the opportunity to fill their minds with facts and principles to enable them to do life's work successfully.

I have not a doubt, that if a census should be taken there would be found enough Methodists in Louisiana who, having already educated their own children, have means over and above a good living to keep two hundred boys at Centenary and two hundred girls at Mansfield as long as they live! Have they no responsibility in this matter? Having educated their own children, have they no interest in the education of those who can not educate themselves? Verily, they have a tremendous responsibility. Instead of "heaping up treasure against the last days," let them arouse themselves to a zealous, jealous interest in the cause of Christian education, and in that work find a peace of conscience which an investment in stocks and bonds and lands and houses never gives.

Now, who will loan the young man spoken of the money that he asks, that he may qualify himself for useful living? I trust to have many responses, for others are in need as well as he. The college will do its part in all such cases. C. W. CARTER, President.

South Carolina Letter.

The echoes of the General Conference are still heard in South Carolina, and its proceedings are constantly discussed. With some of the proceedings we are much pleased; with others not so much delighted. I think the re-election of Dr. E. E. Hoss to the editorship of our connectional Advocate gave universal satisfaction to South Carolinians in general. The Doctor, as you know, has given us a most excellent paper ever since he has had charge of it. A better editor could not have been found. He is not much given to controversy, however; but when such is thrust upon him, he always conducts it in that spirit characteristic of a Christian gentleman. We are also delighted with the re-election of Messrs. Barbee and Smith as agents of the Publishing House. Their re-election guarantees continued prosperity for the House. Dr. Harrison had ably filled the position of Book Editor for a long time, and we shall greatly miss him; but the election of Dr. J. J. Tigert insures continued success for that department. Personally, I consider Dr. Tigert one of the ablest men in Southern Methodism.

With all the above proceedings we are pleased; but there is one item of the business of the General Conference that brought disaster to us. I refer to the election of Dr. W. D. Kirkland as Sunday-school Editor. I am confident that a better man could not have been found for the place, but it has greatly afflicted us. As you well know, he has no superior as an editor. The old Southern bore sufficient evidence to that fact. He had it at the front of American religious journals. Methodism never had a truer friend than W. D. Kirkland. We are exceedingly glad that he has so arranged as to remain in charge of the Advocate as editor pro tem until the next session of our Conference. We are anxiously awaiting the time to see who will take his place. It will be hard to fill.

By the way, did you know, Mr. Editor, that South Carolina has given to Southern Methodism some of the greatest men she has ever had? The sainted McTyeire was a native South Carolinian; Bishop Duncan is a South Carolinian; we furnished Dr. J. H. Kirkland, who is now the popular chancellor of Vanderbilt University; we gave Dr. A. Coke Smith to Virginia; Dr. R. D. Smart to Arkansas. But I must stop this, or you will think that I am boasting. We greatly miss these men, but I am glad to say that we have plenty more.

Another event of great interest to South Carolina Methodists was the election of a president for Columbia Female College. Dr. S. B. Jones, who had for several years so acceptably filled the position, was compelled, on account of failing health, to resign. One of our young men was elected as Dr. Jones' successor. It is Rev. J. A. Rice. He is one of our strongest young men, and will, doubtless, throw new life into the college. I predict for him great success.

Our country charges are in the midst of their revival season, and good meetings are reported from all quarters.

District and Sunday-school Conferences are the order of the day. Our presiding elders are having great success in their District Conferences by arranging beforehand a suitable programme. Of course, they follow the plan laid down in the Discipline, but those published programmes give new life to the occasion.

Politically, our State is in the midst of her campaign. Comparatively speaking, we are having a quiet time. The Prohibitionists are alive to the cause, and are carefully watching movements. It is likely that a State ticket will be put out by them yet.

The Seashore Camp Meeting.

Notwithstanding the great strike throughout the country which many feared would seriously interfere with the camp meeting, the number of visitors present this year were in excess than for many years past. Noticeable was the great number of Alabamians present, due probably to the judicious advertising by the Board of Trustees.

Immediately upon entering the grounds, the good work of the trustees was discovered at a glance. All was a model of neatness and order, and showed that neither time and expense were spared to make the place attractive. The visiting preachers were loud in their praises of the "Preachers' Tent." This home of the prophets has been entirely remodeled on the inside and divided into compartments. It is now possible for one brother to tell another how his work is progressing, without disturbing the brother who desires to sleep. Bro. John W. Chambers will now be given a hearty welcome at this tent.

The law passed by the Board of Trustees prohibiting persons from going to the trains during certain hours on Sunday was greatly approved of by the great majority of people, and its excellent effect was shown by the attendance and order at the eleven o'clock service on Sunday.

The services on the Sabbath were larger than this writer has ever witnessed on similar occasions, and the sermons preached by Bishop Keener and Bros. J. D. Simpson, J. W. Shoaff and J. O. Keener were listened to with much interest on the part of the multitudes present.

Bro. E. P. Mackie, the newly elected president, is the right man in the right place. Consecrated, courteous and energetic, the Board could not have made a wiser selection.

The entire Board of Trustees did faithful work looking to the comfort of visitors and strangers.

The restaurant, under the wise management of Bro. David Zahle, provided bountifully to the necessities of the inner man.

The preaching was all good, and not a sermon was preached that was not thoroughly prepared, and in its deliverance the power and presence of the Holy Spirit was felt. Every man who preached seemed to come from the secret place of prayer to the pulpit. Not many conversions were reported; but, thanks be unto the Father! some were brought to the light. If only one had been brought to the knowledge of the saving power of Christ, every preacher and child of God present would have had cause to rejoice.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, the meeting was a success, and proved a blessing to all who attended.

Corinth District Conference.

The fifteenth session of the Corinth District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, met in Booneville, Miss., Thursday, July 12, 1894, and adjourned Monday, July 16. Rev. T. W. Lewis, P. E., was in the chair, presiding to the satisfaction of all. All of the seventeen pastors, together with about forty lay delegates and one hundred visitors, were present. The Conference was well cared for by the good people of Booneville, whose hospitality and cheerful homes make us to fully realize how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Prominence was given to the subject of Christian education, missions, Epworth Leagues, and Sunday-schools. The able addresses made on these different subjects showed that they had been carefully studied. The reports of the pastors show that the district is improving. Notwithstanding the pressure in money matters, it appears now that we shall be able to carry out our motto, which is, "A thousand souls for Christ, and all the collections in full."

Bishop Isaac Lane, of the Colored M. E. Church in America, was present. His sermon, as well as his speech before the Conference, was enjoyed very much. He spoke affectionately of the relations existing between the M. E. Church, South, and the Colored M. E. Church in America. A collection amounting to $18.65 was taken for Lane Institute.

Rev. J. W. Honnoll, president of Malone College, and Prof. Carter, of Centenary, were present to the enjoyment of all.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, our worthy and honored Conference colporter, was also present with a full line of choice books.

The following delegates were elected to the ensuing Annual Conference: W. M. Murry, H. A. Dean, W. G. C. Gresham, and L. W. Worsham. Alternates: Rev. L. A. McKeown and L. T. Carpenter.

Corinth was selected as the seat of the next District Conference.

The preaching was good to the use of edifying, and the good old songs so powerfully sung still ring in the chambers of our souls, and make us happy as we return, renewed afresh, to our work. J. M. BRADLEY, Sec.

A Protest.

THE DANCE AND DRINK DEVILS AGAIN AT THE MISSISSIPPI UNIVERSITY.

The North Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and the Baptist State Convention both passed resolutions requesting the Board of Trustees of the State University at Oxford, Miss., not to make another appropriation from the State or university funds for a commencement ball. These resolutions were sent to the Board of Trustees by the pastors of the Baptist and Methodist Churches in Oxford—Gardner and Thomas. Last year no appropriation was made, but this year one of the three big dances had during commencement week was paid for, in whole or in part, out of the public funds of the university. The Baptist and Methodist Churches, in actual membership, represent more than one hundred and sixty thousand citizens of Mississippi—a number not to be lightly ignored in a commonwealth like this. They should lift up their voices till they are heard.

Again, I am assured by those who know, that "blind tigers" do a thriving business in Oxford, and that they are not hunted down and made to pay the penalty of their evil deeds, as they ought to be. This is a great sin and shame, a reproach to Oxford, and a disgrace to the State of Mississippi. More, it is a damning evil to our boys sent there to be educated.

The duty of standing like a rock wall against the tide of worldliness and the evils of intemperance devolves mainly on the Baptist and Methodist people of Mississippi. Here we are agreed, and against these evils, and we stand shoulder to shoulder. Yours,

GILDEROY.

Power of Influence.

That hasty word, that word of pride and scorn, flung from my lips in casual company, produces a momentary depression; and that is all. No, it is not all. It deepened that man's disgust at godliness; and it sharpened the edge of that man's sarcasm; and it shamed that half-converted one out of his penitent misgivings; and it produced an influence, slight but eternal, on the destiny of an immortal life. Oh, it is a terrible power that I have—this power of influence; and it clings to me, I can not shake it off. It is born with me; it has grown with my growth, and strengthened with my strength. It speaks, it walks, it moves; it is powerful in every look of my eye, in every word of my lips, in every act of my life. I can not live to myself.—W. M. Punshon.

A Current Delusion.

People who imagine that a State adds to its resources and increases its income by licensing the liquor traffic are the victims of a strange delusion. For the time it may seem as though the treasury were filled from this source, but the income is apparent only. Where one dollar is put into the treasury by the liquor dealer, as his license fee, ten dollars are usually taken out in the form of expenses inflicted upon the people by the liquor traffic. Considering the money cost of extra police guardianship, the expenses of litigation, jails, pauperism, and matters of that sort made necessary by the use of drink, it will easily be seen that the license system involves an outlay enormously beyond any income which it pays into the public treasury. Rev. Dr. Sutherland, the Canadian orator, in his address, some months ago, before the Southern General Conference, used this capital fable in illustration of the principle under consideration:

Let me relate a little fable that has a bearing on this question. There was once a donkey that fed in a grassy meadow, wherein were many fresh-water ponds greatly infested with leeches. When the donkey went into the water to drink or to cool himself, the leeches would fasten upon him in vast numbers, and greatly depleted the blood supply. At last the donkey resolved to do something to get rid of the leeches. First he shook his long ears at them, and said it was a shame. Next, he got on a platform and brayed at them. Then he went to the ponds and kicked at them, but all to no purpose. The leeches stuck as tenaciously as ever. At last an idea came like a sudden inspiration. "I have it," said the donkey. "As I can't prevent the leeches from sucking my blood, I'll regulate the business by giving them a license to do it, on condition that they give me back a small portion of the blood as a license fee." And so he did. It was a brilliant idea, and eminently worthy of an ass!

The Value of a Church Paper.

It is astounding that some pastors, and the people generally, are so little interested in the circulation of a worthy denominational paper. Pastors stand sadly in their own light when they fail to encourage the members of their churches to take a good denominational paper. It is simply impossible for church people to be in the largest degree useful to their churches, to their denomination and to the cause of Christ at large if they do not take a religious paper. There is no investment of money which will bring larger returns for the church, for the denomination and for Christianity than what is expended in procuring good religious papers. Two to five cents a week for the year will secure the weekly visits of a great, strong, wholesome and altogether superb religious paper. The general circulation of such a paper in a church is worth as much to a pastor as is an assistant in pastoral work. Church members can not intelligently give to or work for denominational societies and other objects of benevolence except they be familiar with the scope and manner of their operations; and such familiarity can come only from the weekly visits of a great religious newspaper. In all our churches there are many young members who were brought up outside of our denomination; there is also a considerable proportion of such who are more advanced in years. How can they know what our contemporary enterprises are, and how can they come into touch, either with the living present or with the hopeful future, except they take a weekly denominational paper? Men of wealth could not do better with hundreds, or even thousands of dollars, than to aid the pastor in introducing a worthy denominational paper into churches and missions. A pastor in this city a few weeks ago paid for twenty copies of such a paper to be sent to as many families connected with a mission of his church. Could he have made a better investment of the amount?—Christian Intelligencer.

A man in Chicago named Winter has invented a process of combining mineral and vegetable or animal oils so as to produce an edible fat which is solid, white and odorless. It is claimed that it will supersede cotton seed oil because it can be manufactured at any time, and will obviate the necessity of packers keeping a supply on hand which they now have to do, contracting for cotton oil in the Summer. The new oil has petroleum as a basis. It will greatly affect the trade of the Standard Oil Company, which at present uses 100,000,000 gallons of cotton oil, quoted at 35 cents a gallon, annually. The Standard Oil Company is putting in a $500,000 plant to make the oil. The inventor refused to take two million dollars for his patent.—Omaha Christian Advocate.

Happy the man who is neither too large nor too small for his place. He is suited to his environment, and his environment to him, and so he enjoys the comfort, content and satisfaction which come from a fitness of things to persons and of persons to things. With this proper and harmonious adjustment there is an accompanying success and blessing. Personal discomforts and failures in life arise largely from misfits.

IN HIS FOOTSTEPS.

BY GURNSEY.

Out in the dusty highway,
Hid in the haunts of sin,
Oh, there are royal jewels
Waiting for us to win!
Gems that the King of Glory
Fain in his crown would place,
Jewels of earth-dimmed lustre,
Treasures of heav'nly grace.

Oh, by the cross we cherish,
And by the love he gave
Freely to souls that perish,
Souls that he died to save,
Pledge we our heart's devotion,
Plight we our faith anew;
Treading the path of duty,
We follow his footsteps true!

"Notes."

Rev. B F. Haynes, of the Tennessee Methodist, is aggressive, if not vicious, in his attacks on Bishop Hargrove. That matter has been passed upon by the General Conference and settled for all time, and to the satisfaction of everybody except Bro. Haynes.—"Gilderoy," in NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, July 5.

The foregoing item does not reflect much credit upon my good brother, "Gilderoy." I have read every issue of the Tennessee Methodist since the last session of the General Conference, and have seen no indications of viciousness on the part of Bro. Haynes towards Bishop Hargrove or anyone else. That he is "aggressive" towards Bishop Hargrove is also not manifest. That he adheres to the correctness and validity of the complaints made against the administration of Bishop Hargrove is not surprising. The surprising thing is the moderation of the language used by Bro. Haynes in criticising the miserable performance of the Committee on Episcopacy in shirking the responsibility resting upon them, and refusing to decide the questions of laws involving the mal-administration of Bishop Hargrove—questions of which that committee had exclusive jurisdiction.

My brother, "Gilderoy," is mistaken in supposing those questions or matters were settled for all time. Such matters can not be settled by such nondescript reports as that Report No. 5 of the Committee on Episcopacy, even though it be railroaded through the General Committee in lightning-express style. On the contrary, those matters are wholly unsettled, and will remain to plague every man who shirked his duty, dodged, or refused to decide them, and so left them unsettled; and Bishop Hargrove's official character and administration tainted for all time, and forever subject to the most unfavorable inferences.

As a member of the Committee on Appeals (which did not shirk duty), and at one very fully advised as to what transpired before that Committee on Episcopacy, and as the author of the protest which was signed by twenty-three others, and which protest neither the Daily Advocate nor the weekly Nashville Advocate have ever published, I wish to say that I do not believe that at any time within the last two hundred years had there been such an arbitrary abuse and perversion of power in a Protestant Church as was manifested by the actings and rulings complained of by the Tennessee Conference; nor has there ever been in the history of Episcopal Methodism such shirking of duty and dodging of responsibility, and apparently such trying to screen, as were done by that late and lamentable Committee on Episcopacy. And I go farther and say that never before has one been so openly honored and rewarded for continuing such a course as was done when the fraternal messenger to Canadian Methodism was appointed. And I go farther and say that had that Committee on Episcopacy done their duty, they would, at least, have criticised those five other Bishops whose letters of encouragement were read by the defendant before that committee—letters written before that memorable session of the Tennessee Conference, urging Bishop Hargrove to pursue the course he did, although the authors knew they must, in the following Spring, pass upon his rulings. And everybody knows that one plus five equals six, and that six constitute a majority in ten. Affirmance was assured. "Don't let Kelley escape trial!" "Don't let him speak before the Tennessee Conference. His influence is too great." But the Committee on Appeals reversed the monstrous wrong.

Oh, no, that matter was not settled by the General Conference for all time, nor even for a short time. It is far from settled—very far from settled—as sooner or later will be found out by "the Bishop complained of," and the Bishop who aided in railroading the Report No. 5 through the General Conference on the night of May 18, and the clever brother who got the Committee on Episcopacy to compromise their own good names in adopting a compromise report which compromised "the Bishop complained of" even more than he would have been compromised had the committee condemned his mal-administration and the General Conference reprimanded him in accordance with the verdict.

It is useless to try to hush up these matters and to smother complaints. It is useless to try to brow-beat brethren who stand by the church and the rights of the Conferences. It is useless to heap honors and rewards on those who stand by the Bishops, right or wrong. These matters can only be settled by the abandonment of the absurd contentions of the high-church party in our church, the recognition of the fact that our Bishops are not infallible, and the further fact that they are amenable to the General Conference for mal-administration; or else there will be such a disruption in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as will astonish Bro. "Gilderoy" and the editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate and the majority of that late, but not lamented, Committee on Episcopacy.

Saigon.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Though the art and practice of chewing the betel-nut is so noticeable at Saigon, yet there are other things to interest a traveler there. The approach is by more than an hour's steaming up a river that winds amid a tropical jungle with an occasional clearing, where the farmers' new thatched huts and grazing buffaloes may be seen. A large vessel can go up the river only when there is high tide. Our two hours of waiting at Cape James, near the mouth of the river, gave good opportunity to observe the French fort at this place. The ship stewardess remarked that the city should have been built here, and it certainly seems so, taking a commercial view of it. But it was easy to build at the present site, because more of the jungle had been cleared there and it is a perfect plain.

The vessel stops on the north side of the river, but, because of a complete turn made by the stream in order to get from the landing into the chief port of the city, which is to the northeast, it is necessary to cross the river. This may be done at the cost of four cents by taking a seat in a palm leaf-sheltered sampan, and letting the jabbering family that lives in it row you to the other side. This route is the quickest for reaching the chief commercial parts and the more Frank portion of the city. But if you prefer to ride on land, there are a few jinrikishas and many neat, strong hacks drawn by small, prancing stallions, handled by ready orientals, some of whom know a little English and French; and to the northwest is a bridge, nice and long and high and strong. A pedestrian walking leisurely to the market place, native homes and fields in the northwest, can afford to pause long on this bridge, watching the various boats that pass under. One kind is specially attractive for its quaintness. It is large and strong, with good cargo capacity, a dark galley with one man, shaded by an umbrella, behind at the rudder, and eight naked, dusky fellows in front regularly arranged, steadily, but slowly, and, it seems, sadly making the oar strokes that move their dark bark along.

Not far to the west, beyond this bridge, is the most profusely carved temple I ever saw. Though it is small, one can easily count at the entrance five hundred different figures of men, beasts and birds, to say nothing of plants and flowers. It is Buddhist, and one or two people were going along the side passage to the rear to make confession, I presume. Many travelers in the hacks make the tour d'inspection. It is a fine drive of two hours that circles the city and passes through tropical fields and a village that is distinctly native.

Then there is a botanical and zoological garden. The zoological part was made very interesting to me and my companion (a young man on his way from Australia to England) by an obliging French Saigonite, who chanced to be going through and who knew how to make the tigers and panthers growl, and the elephants and bears play tricks.

The postoffice is quite a work of art. Near it is the Catholic Cathedral, from the belfry of which a good view of the city and environs may be obtained. And not far away is a good bronze statue of Gambetta, some distance out in front of the beautiful grounds of the governor's mansion. Gambetta appears like one unconscious of surroundings, on a "visioned future bent." Then in the same region is the court of justice.

At night the different shops—native, Chinese and Tamil—are very interesting, and at the same time the open-air dining-places appear best. There are, in the broad shaded avennes, great stretches of tables, from those loaded with the cheapest native foods to those beautifully decorated, to be filled at your call with ice cream, cooling drinks, delicious mangosteens, plantains, oranges, or pineapples, and their accompaniments.

The native men and women dress much alike—all in mourning—the chief garments being a white shirt and black apron-like coat, which extends from the neck to below the knees, and buttoned under the arms on both sides.

One walking about the town can see an occasional tame monkey on a tree or wall, and, peeping over the convent wall the crucifixion represented in bronze becomes visible. The large fan-shaped traveler's palm in the garden is sure to fascinate.

At a chapel for the natives, a mile northwest of the city, I saw a little of what has been remarked by many, how the Roman Catholics can adapt themselves. There were on the Christian church the sacred animal carvings and lotus-flower decorations of the Buddhists.

It should be mentioned that Saigon has a street car, a railroad, the telegraph and waterworks, but no gas or electricity illumination.

Colombo, May 18.

Woman's Work.

The sweet task of love we begin anew after refreshings from the Lord at our fifteenth annual meeting, June 22-25, 1894. Thrice welcome we felt at Newton. Instead of the destructive fire of last year, we experienced the Holy Spirit's kindling fire in our hearts by the priceless love of the Son of Mary, our crucified Savior.

It is worthy of mention that the livery men so kindly conducted us to our homes in carriages free of charge.

A Bible reading, conducted by Mrs. J. S. Parker, was the opening service, with the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit anointing us for the labors before us.

The beautiful new church so tastefully ornamented was quite inviting, and the continued presence and assistance of Rev. J. M. Morse evidenced that he was still alive to the interests of the work. We appreciated the help of Bro. Williams and others of the ministry.

Thirty-one delegates responded to roll call, five district secretaries being present. We received enough encouragement from reports to nerve us to press forward, for have we not the promise, "Lo, I am with you alway?" From reports we have: Number of adult auxiliaries, 55; number of young people's and juvenile societies, 18; life members, 30; whole number of members, 1,730; subscribers to the Woman's Missionary Advocate, 300; to the Little Worker, 75; treasurer received $1,124 37. (These figures do not include special donations.)

Loving words of greeting and a cordial welcome address by Miss Julia Brown won a happy response from our delegates, expressed so fittingly by Mrs. Howell, of Canton. The annual message of the president was also excellent.

Mrs. R. R. Parker, of Jackson, Miss., furnished of her own composition material for the young people, who entertained us at different times quite nicely. An excellent poem, "The Alabaster Box," was beautifully recited by Miss Sue Stephens. We would advise auxiliaries to send postage stamps and obtain these, as Sister Parker presents them to the Conference free of charge.

The Misses Buntyn gave us instructive and entertaining talks about Laredo Seminary, and spoke of the valuable services of Mrs. Anderson, who went from Wesson. Her strength was wonderfully preserved for additional labors when other tired hands had to rest.

Capt. Pettus, an ex-American consul to China, told us not only of public affairs, but what impressed us most of the private life of the Chinese, exhibiting many curios.

Miss Annie Linfield, our delegate to the meeting of the Woman's Board, presented a written report that was full of information and replete with interest. She called attention to the desire of the Board that we should adopt the plan of systematic giving. One sister said her plan is to give one-tenth of all, and also one-tenth of her portion, finding, since its adoption, some money always on hand.

Two hundred dollars was pledged for the continued education of Miss McNemar at the East Mississippi Female College, Meridian. Rev. T. B. Holloman, president, reported most favorably of her, not only as being studious, but a consecrated Christian. A very severe spell of sickness found her obedient to the will of our heavenly Father. A certificate from the attendant physician assured us of restoration of health and freedom from organic disease. Heartfelt thanks were tendered Bro. Holloman and others for kind attention, and the physician for reduced charges for medical aid. In the college the same reduction is made as for ministers' daughters.

By request of Conference agent, Bro. Holloman gave a very fine talk in behalf of the Woman's Missionary Advocate, which caused us to prize it more highly than ever, and the wonder was that only seven subscribers were obtained.

The missionary experience meeting was a happy one, for,

"How sweet to the soul is communion with saints!"

Warmest thanks were extended to Bro. Holloman for his able discourse on Sunday, sustaining his appreciation of the worth of woman's labors for the Master, with Scripture words of divine approval, proving conclusively that we have the blessed privilege of becoming "alabaster boxes," and of meriting the gracious words, "She hath done what she could," eliciting from us as our watchword, "Am I doing what I can?" There was revealed a touch of sentiment in Mary's broken vase, receiving the commendation from the Savior that it should be told wheresoever the gospel is preached in the whole world. Having lost none of its sweetness through all the ages, it is still breathing fragrance and pathetic beauty upon all works of self-sacrificing love for the Master.

His soul-stirring sermon at night, from "I have loved thee with an everlasting love," was a spiritual feast, after which we enjoyed the Lord's Supper. May we ever be faithful, and "banquet with our Lord in heaven!"

Rev. Barr, the Presbyterian minister, spoke words of encouragement Monday afternoon, and closed our delightful meeting with an earnest, impressive prayer, and the benediction. Loving echoes were extracted from hearts made congenial by the angelic touch of Christian love.

Not forgetting our "resolution," let's, by individual consecration to the cause, and with words fitly spoken, and earnest efforts to tell and send the glad news of the risen Savior, prove that we are the acknowledged hand-maidens of the Lord, and so impress others that many will gladly join us; then may we have such fine reports that we can more gracefully welcome our sisters of the W. B. M. next May, and Crystal Springs will more heartily extend her usual beautiful hospitalities in the annual meeting.

In the fifth Annual Report of the Bible and Scarritt Training-School we find the Mississippi Conference credited with receipts to the amount of $2,221.43 from June 1, 1889, to June 1, 1894; specials: The Belle Bennett Chair, $54.74; Memorial Scholarship, $5; Cornelia Gunning Room, $100; Mississippi Conference Room, $100; Carrie Steele Waterhouse Room, $39 50; Wesson Room, $75. Total, $474 24; grand total, $2,695 67.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

Another District Conference season with us is past. This writer has had the privilege of attending all, nine in number. The customary routine of business was transacted, and the usual course of religious services was observed in all. Plans were adopted and resolutions passed which, if faithfully adhered to, will produce great results in the several departments of our church work. I here note specially one line of work adopted by all, which needs and deserves prompt attention.

Two memorial cottages have been enterprised, to be built at Millsaps College in honor of two of our most highly esteemed deceased brethren—to-wit: Revs. Joseph H. Brooks and Robert Paine Mitchell. The Greenville, Sardis, Grenada, Holly Springs and Corinth districts are committed to the former, and the Kosciusko, Winona, Aberdeen and Columbus districts to the latter.

Now, let there be no delay nor faltering on the part of those who have these interests in hand, and we will soon have two good homes for the use of the poor boys of North Mississippi, to enable them to get the benefit of our great and growing college.

The attendance of the membership of these Conferences was varied; some of them were very poorly attended by the laity. In some cases there was no representation at all from a pastoral charge, the pastor himself being absent. The best showing was that of the Corinth district at Booneville, where every pastor was present and more than forty lay members.

A notable observance has been the absence of the local preachers. Very few of them attend these meetings. Why is this? Surely, if they had the work, wherennto they claim to be called of God, at heart, and but knew how helpful such an occasion would be to them, they would never be absent at roll call. It is to be hoped that there will be improvement under the new regime.

Another thing is growing which is to be regretted; that is, the disposition to break off and leave the District Conference before the close. Preachers leave on Saturday to fill their pulpits on Sunday, and laymen and some preachers travel part or all day of Sunday to reach home, and some of them on the railroad trains. These things ought not to be so. Let there be more love to God, more devotion to his church and more reverence for his Sabbath, and his work will prosper in our hands more and our souls will be edified.

The protracted meeting season now begins; appointments are made for the campaign. Let us all enter upon the work with the baptism of power from on high.

We regret to note the continued illness of Bro. B.F. Phillips. He has the prayers of his numerous brethren and friends in the hope that he will soon be restored to health. Bro. E. S. Lewis goes to fill his work till he recovers.

Wall and Mooney Academy.

In the Summer of 1886 the Messrs. Webb transferred their famous school from Collecka to Bell Buckle, and Messrs. S. V. Wall and W. D. Mooney took the old stand at Collecka. After two years at Collecka the principals wisely determined to move their school to the town of Franklin. One hundred and six were enrolled on the first day, and Vanderbilt's representative, who was there, felt that another great preparatory school was now an established fact. The university examined the first few boys that came, but soon offered, of its own motion, the privilege of entering on certificate without examination.

The senior principal, Mr. S. V. Wall, has been teaching ever since the war and has pupils scattered all over the Southwest. He has been prominent in church work for many years and was a member of the Methodist General Conference in 1890.

The junior principal, Mr. W. D. Mooney, is a son of the Rev. Wellborn Mooney, long a leading member of the Tennessee and now of the Memphis Conference. Except for a short period of civil engineering he has been teaching for fifteen years. His specialty is, perhaps, mathematics, and he has rendered valuable assistance to Prof. Wentworth in the preparation of his series of text books, but his fellow-members of the Greek and Latin clubs of Nashville best know how broad is his scholarship in those subjects. He is an enormous worker and an ideal man for the work in which he is engaged.

Parents will feel safe in putting their sons under such wholesome influences. The idea is to have in Franklin one of the greatest preparatory schools not only in the Southwest, but in the United States, and it will be accomplished.

"Ensample to the Flock."

MR EDITOR: I just want a corner in your valuable paper to thank Bro. R. B. Downer for his worthy article entitled, "Ensample to the Flock," and to express a hearty amen to its teaching. Such articles are truly educating in their ends, and he attacks a mighty evil in the most forcible way in a spirit of meekness. Many of our ministers being victims to this terrible disease (for such it is) zealously resent any condemnation of this habit and its evil tendencies, and our religious papers, while marshalled in solid phalanx against all other growing evils that menace the spiritual life of the church, are hushed on this question. We readers hate heated controversy, but we love gentle teachings of great truths. May the Lord bless the good brother for his good advice and the editor for publishing it.

A Talent for Appreciation.

It is a great thing to have a talent for appreciation. He can do much good in the world who recognizes the good other people are doing, and tells them of it. More folks than most imagine are getting weary and downhearted because they seem to accomplish nothing. They will be wonderfully cheered and brightened by being assured of the contrary. Ministers ought to be told if they do anybody good by their words. It will not hurt them at all. School teachers need this sort of encouragement from parents. Children would be the better if they had more of it. Servants often suffer for lack of it. Some people are perpetually depreciating the work that is done for them, noting carefully all the evil there is in others and all the defects in what they do. Such people are a curse. Let us watch for the good in one another, and not be backward in mentioning it. What a different place this world would be, how much sunnier, if this talent for appreciation were constantly cultivated!—Zion's Herald.

Not a Millstone Round the Neck.

The recollection of the committal of a grave sin should humble us ever, but it should not be recalled constantly to sting and crush us. When God forgives, the pardon is full and complete. Peter did well to weep when he came to the consciousness that he had so wickedly denied his Lord; but it should not be forgotten that the best and most happy part of Peter's life came after his great sin. Dean George Hodges, D. D., in his excellent volume upon "Christianity between Sundays," discourages the tendency in some good people to constantly afflict themselves with the memory of some old hut forgiven sin. He says: "All stirring up of that old memory, all transferring of that unfortunate past into the living present, I will tell you what it is like; it is like a soldier who has stumbled on the march, sitting down and spending the rest of the day lamenting that stumble, instead of going on and fighting better to make up for it."—Zion's Herald.

A Hearty Christian.

A hearty Christian is what the world calls for. There is heavy work to do and only a hearty Christian is equal to it. That Christianity which must seclude itself to use itself, is not the Christianity for to-day—was never the Christianity for any days which this world ever saw. That which faints at the sight of conflict, or runs cowardly away from the field of battle, is not the Christianity for this world and for this time. It must have courage and conviction. They are needed as much as in the days when heads flew off, or whips cracked, or men were roasted at the stake to feast the palate of the devil's emissaries, or when there were ancient battles over the creeds. Mere sentiment will not answer, nor logical defenses of creeds and theories. The man who holds a creed and nothing else, has an abominable creed, or it denounces and disowns him. A creed which does not do so deserves to be cast away as rubbish. A hearty Christianity is one which takes the three-fold needs—bodily, intellectual and spiritual—under its care, and concerns itself to save this world as well as to gain the next.—Christian Inquirer.

Kicking.

There is something amusing about the kicking of a horse—though not always quite profitable. It often happens that the more the animal kicks the more flesh he takes off his own shins. He thinks he hurts the thing he kicks, but the only flesh lost is his own. This same thing often happens when a man kicks the denominational traces. It is ridiculous to see some men do it; their legs fly in the air, the harness rattles, a strap or two snaps, and when the thing is over the only blood drawn is that from the kicker himself. Why must a man kick when he changes his views; particularly when his legs come so near his own head that his brains are apt to be knocked out. What do I mean by a kick? Why, the ranting of a fellow who wants to change his views and seems to think that the only way to do it is to do a dishonorable thing—berating his mother because she does not follow his wild and woolly notions. The man who is always crying for more rope is sure to hang himself—sooner or later.—Standard.

Be Sweet-Toned.

The sweet-toned bell rings out sweetness, however gently or rudely it is struck, while the clanging gong can not be so touched as not to respond with a jangle. There is the same difference in people.

From some you learn to expect always a snarl, or a whine, or a groan, while others give forth words of cheerfulness and joy. When the grace of God possesses mind and heart, you will respond with a sweet spirit to every touch, kind or unkind, rude or loving. You will be a voice for God, in whatever place or company you are thrown, a witness for charity and kindness and truth. "When a man lives with God," says Emerson, "his voice shall be as sweet as the murmur of the brook and the rustle of the corn." Be a sweet-toned bell.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

Lying Faces.

The Psalmist speaks of "lying lips." He might also have spoken of lying faces, for it is true that a good many lies are told by the face. Many a person has seemed, by the smiles of his face, to be a hearty friend of his neighbor, when in fact he was quite the reverse. He was a deadly enemy to him. Who has not been grossly deceived by faces which seemed to indicate the greatest cordiality and sincerity toward him, but which proved to be utterly at variance with the real feeling of the heart? And how often we have known men who seemed to be a picture of devout piety, wearing a sort of saintly look, when they were rotten with hypocrisy! It is not always true that the face is an index of real character. Some faces tell grievous lies.—Exchange.

What He Made.

"I have made a thousand dollars during the last three months," said a saloon keeper boastfully to a crowd of his townsmen.

"You have made more than that," quietly remarked a listener.

"What is that?"

"You have made wretched homes—women and children poor and sick and weary of life. You have made my two sons drunkards," continued the speaker with trembling earnestness. "You have made the younger of the two so drunk that he fell and injured himself for life. You have made their mother a broken-hearted woman. O yes, you have made much—more than I can reckon up—but you'll get the full account some day."—Exchange.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

You can tell more about a man's religion by traveling a hundred miles with him than you can by hearing him talk for years in class meeting.—Ram's Horn.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

Before seeding raisins put them in hot water for a few minutes and the seeds will come out easier. Then roll each raisin between the thumb and finger, pressing the seeds up to and out of the stem end.

Lemon juice is a good substitute for vinegar. It is good on cabbage, lettuce, beans, or any food needing an acid. Use the same as vinegar. This is not expensive to those living in the city where lemons are cheap.

VENTNOR PUDDING.—Cut up some cold beef, fat and lean together, as if for mince; weigh it, and to every pound add half a pound of bread crumbs soaked in a little stock made from the bones of the beef; add a dessert-spoonful of curry powder, pepper and celery, salt to taste, also a finely minced onion. Mix well, put into a pudish and pour over the top the yolks and whites of two eggs, well beaten. If the meat is very lean, put a little butter with the other ingredients.

CREAM CAKE.—To make cream cake, mix two cupfuls of flour and two level teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda; make a well in the center into which put one cupful of sugar, one of sweet cream, one egg, and a small teaspoonful of salt; mix all together, flavor with a teaspoonful of lemon, and put into a pan to bake. Adding a cupful of raisins or currants makes a nice cake pudding to eat hot with sauce. Sour cream may be used instead of sweet, by omitting the cream of tartar and using two eggs instead of one.—Selected.

FISH CAKES.—Prepare the fish by dividing it from the bones, etc. Mash up some cold potatoes very finely until quite lumpless, and allow double the quantity of the potatoes to the fish. Melt some butter over the fire—a piece about the size of a walnut to half a pound of fish. Add the yolk of a beaten egg to the fish, and flavor it with salt and pepper. Stir it over the fire in the saucepan where the melted butter is for a few minutes. Turn the mixture out, make it into flat cakes, egg-and-bread-crumb each cake well, and fry them to a golden brown. Let them drain before the fire and serve very hot, garnish with parsley and triangles of sliced lemon.—Exchange.

PINEAPPLE SPONGE.—Soak a package of gelatine two hours in a teacupful of cold water, keeping it meanwhile on ice, or in a cold place; then add one pineapple, peeled and grated, two teacupfuls of granulated sugar, a third of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, grated, and the juice of one lemon; mix well, and let stand, covered, in a cold place for two hours. Then pour upon it three teacupfuls of boiling water, and stir until the gelatine is dissolved. Line a colander with a double thickness of cheesecloth (previously wrung from cold water) and strain the mixture through it, wringing hard to secure all the flavor of the fruit. Set on ice until cold, but not hard. By the time it is perfectly cold and begins to jelly around the edges, have ready the whites of four eggs, well beaten; add the gelatine mixture—a large tablespoonful at a time—to the eggs, beating about a minute after each time. The result is a white, sponge-like mass, which must next be turned into a mold—previously dipped in cold water; set on ice until ready to serve; then turn out on a pretty dish. A can of pineapple can be substituted for the fresh fruit.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

The Independence of the Farmer.

While all other vocations are more or less dependent upon each other, that of farming may be less so than any other. This, however, depends largely upon the plan in which the farm is conducted. The great mistake of many farmers is in not diversifying sufficiently to make each department aid in the expenses of each of the others. The farm that is upon the system of all cotton, all corn, or all of any one particular crop, is a mistake. While it may succeed in some particular years, will not, perhaps, in a succession. The man who has many ships never insures any, while the man with only one always insures. Were he to lose that, all would be lost; while the one with many, were he to lose a number, would have a sufficiency to fall back upon. The man with one crop, that being lost, bankruptcy may be the result. The farm with a diversity, one or more crops being lost, usually has a sufficiency left, to leave the farm in a solvent condition. A farm that has raised upon it a sufficiency of work stock—meat and bread supply, in the latter—we mean to say all that is consumed on the farm in feeding both man and beast—is independent largely of every other vocation. All other expenses may be made of a minor character.

It is not in the abundance a man has, or of the glitter and show of wealth, that a man is happy and independent. Behind these may be much to cause trouble and unhappiness. Showy appearances are often deceptive as to the inside character of things. It is an old saying, "It is not all that shines is gold." These things, however, will have their effect upon many. It is the contrast between them and the plainness of farming which causes many to regard the vocation of the farmer one of inferiority. This plainness and the actual labor connected with it is the cause of many flocking to cities. To these they flock to seek an easy position, and often resort to many questionable methods in order to acquire wealth and worldly distinction.

The independence of farming lies further in the fact that a living can be made at home, however humble it may be. In the beginning of the war many were under the impression that the North could soon starve out the South by blockading all points from which supplies could be obtained. The Southern farmer soon learned he could make his own supplies. It is true the fare was rather hard in some instances in the onset; but before the war ended it was an established fact many were living and doing better than they have since the war. Hard times with the farmer is not so much the cause of a stringency in money matters as it is in the way farms are managed.

Now the strike has failed, not so much because the government has faced the matter with troops, as it is in the meat and bread question. Had the strikers been able to keep up their supplies, and been in a situation that they could have reached them or made them independent of the railroads, they would have soon killed the railroads; but as it is, they have to return to the grindstone, however hard the task may be, that the months of their children may be filled with food. But, thank God, this is not the case with the farmer as long as he is able to hold his farm against capitalists and soulless monopolies. The farmer can strike successfully if he will, if he is willing to live plain and dispense with a few of the luxuries of life. Patched pants do not mean or signify want, misery or unhappiness; but the farmer can face the world with a clear conscience, wearing them, having made an honest living, his little ones having an abundance of food, and feel more independent, being more happy than a railroad king. There are old farmers to-day of our acquaintance, more independent, more happy, more safe, both as to this life and the life that is to come, than Pullman with all his show and glow of wealth. As Sam P. Jones often says, "It is all for home, God and country."

We would say to farmers, "Strike for home, God and country." Strike by living plainly and economically, raising home supplies, keeping out of debt, do your duty to God, and the result is, the country is safe. Outside of this our much boasted government is in danger. Impress your sons and daughters with the fact that plain food after a day's labor, with a common and humble home, may have in it all a sweeter flavor, more security, more happiness, more delightful dreams, and better rest than the show and glare of wealth can give. In the former there is something substantial; in the latter there is much that is empty and false. You can be a freeman if you will. The independence that asks no quarters, while the laws of the country protect your soil, may be had, if you will live and follow the principles herein laid down.

HYGIENE.

A Plea for Pure Air.

The gospel of pure air should be preached unremittingly in the homes, school-rooms and churches of the land. Many people who are intelligent enough to know the benefit of oxygen, appear to be prejudiced against pure air. Knowing full well the poisonous effects of air expelled from the lungs, yet it is rebreathed by them for hours in unventilated rooms. Most people are afraid of taking cold by admitting fresh air to their rooms. But what are called "colds" come usually from breathing confined air. A noted physician says, "Ninety-nine per cent. of what are termed colds are nothing more or less than the poisoning of the mucous membranes by bad air." Few people are free from catarrh. The cause usually is impure air and pork grease. Keep the pores open, abandon pork and ventilate! ventilate! Thus you will avoid colds, catarrh, influenza, neuralgia, etc. The grippe, that nineteenth century plague, may thus be successfully resisted in most cases. "Doubtless this disease is a judgment of God upon the nations, but its evils are enhanced by bad air, overwork, swine's flesh, and want of frequent bathing.—C. W. S.

Cinnamon as an Antiseptic.

According to the Bacteriological World, M. Chamberland, of Pasteur's Institute, in Paris, has discovered the antiseptic power of the essence of cinnamon. He claims that it destroys all kinds of germs in a few hours. It is not the first time that this fact has been brought before the public. It is said that it was used long ago, during the plague in London. It is recommended, as a consequence, that a decoction of cinnamon be taken freely by persons living in places affected by typhoid fever or cholera. We might go further, and say that possibly it would be a fine disinfectant of the month. Cinnamon bark could be chewed, and the essence could be used by itself with a tooth brush. The nature and origin of certain maladies, such as diphtheria, suggest that if people would cleanse their mouths thoroughly morning and evening and after each meal, using a borax solution, say for rinsing purposes, and a few drops of cinnamon essence on the brush afterward, the germs of this disease would likely be destroyed.—Nashville Advocate.

To Cure Corns.

Salicylic acid	20 gr.
Cannabis Indica (Indian hemp)	6 "
Castor Oil	½ dr.
Collodion	½ oz.

Mix and apply morning and evening for four days. Then soak the feet in warm water. If this be done faithfully, the corns are removed without any difficulty. The result is a clear light green solution. There should be no difficulty in its preparation. To prevent it from evaporating, keep the solution in a stoppered bottle. Be sure and use the Indian hemp, and not the American article; the latter is not easily soluble. The formula given above is harmless.—Scientific American.

Overwork.

Overstrained faculties can never bring out the best results. Overwork is always a waste of time; and, though it may not seem to be so at first, eventually the sad truth is always manifested. To cut off needed recreation, to curtail the hours of sleep, to postpone a vacation indefinitely, to refuse to take rest and ease and change under the impression that thus time is saved, is always a short-eyed policy and often a fatal mistake. The time arrives when the poor abused faculties take their revenge and refuse to serve altogether, or do it in so feeble a fashion as to show their deterioration.

Cocoa.

For brain workers who are troubled by the arch-enemy, dyspepsia, cocoa will be found a soothing and nourishing article of diet. Several cases in which the suffering was exceedingly acute have been relieved in a very short time by the use of cocoa.—Selected.

Mrs. Sutherland.

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Higelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Having used Ayer's Hair Vigor for years, I find that it keeps my scalp clean and the hair in the best condition. My mother, now sixty years of age, has as fine a head of hair as when she was forty, a fact which she attributes to the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. It thickens the growth of the hair and restores gray hair to its original color. I cannot see how this preparation could be improved."—Mrs. F. E. BAKER, Galveston, Texas.

Woman's P. and H. M. Society.

The eighth annual report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, a copy of which lies on our desk, we find to be an interesting document. A glance at its contents shows that during the past quadrennium 521 parsonages have been aided, as against 204 the first quadrennium. There are now 558 adult societies, with a membership of nearly 9,000. The 114 juvenile societies number 2,275 members. The loans and donations by the Central Committee for 1893 1894 amount to $3,850. At the April meeting of the committee there were forty two applications for loans, etc., to the amount of $10,760. Thus we see how great is the need for such help. So large a sum not being at hand, only $2,-150 could be appropriated. Financial aid in building parsonages is very necessary in localities where the church is weak, and especially is it needed in Indian Territory and the Northwest. It is not right that those who labor at the front should suffer needless hardships because of the lack of proper shelter, while we live in pleasant and, in some cases, luxurious homes.

The home mission feature of the work of this society deserves special attention. In several of our cities, notably in St. Louis and Nashville, a grand work is being accomplished under the auspices of the society by trained workers, who visit the sick, establish sewing schools, distribute provisions to the needy, conduct Bible readings and cottage prayer meetings, and do other religious work. By this means the neglected classes are being reached, and many brought to a knowledge of the truth. Some of the outcasts of society have, through their influence, been converted and started on new lives. Workers of this kind are greatly needed in every city. Missionary effort can assume no more Christ-like form than this. To quote the words of the secretary, Mrs. Nathan Scarritt: "We believe that the strength and efficiency of home missions must ever be the ground of hope for foreign missions." This is true, every word. We wish the Christian women and children of every community could be enlisted in this work. Our preachers should all encourage the organizing of auxiliaries of this society. They will find it an arm of strength.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2.25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to June, '95.

Schools and Colleges.

At this season of the year, when parents are casting about for a place to which to send their sons and their daughters in order to give them that moral and intellectual training which is needful to fit them for the responsibilities of mature life, we take especial pleasure in directing attention to the school advertisements to be found in our columns. He is a hard man to please who can not find something to suit him in this long list. We have not space in one issue to call special attention to all these schools. We will, however, make mention of several in this issue, and will continue the work in our next. We have on previous occasions directed attention to a few of our schools. We will begin with

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

This historic institution merits the attention of all who have sons to educate. Of its elegant buildings, its spacious and beautiful grounds and its large libraries, and of the cultivated and refined community in which it is located, nothing needs to be said, as these are matters concerning which the readers of the ADVOCATE are already well posted. Its new president, Dr. Carter, is also well known to our readers. He possesses qualities of head and heart which give him pre-eminent fitness for the position he occupies. Parents can find no safer hands into which to commit the education of their boys. Read the advertisement and then write for a catalogue.

WALL AND MOONEY ACADEMY.

Concerning this school we need say nothing more than this: Read the communication of Prof. Charles Forster Smith, late of Vanderbilt University, on our second page.

MEMPHIS CONFERENCE FEMALE INSTITUTE.

This is one of the oldest female colleges in America, its charter dating from 1843. It is one of the few schools that increased their patronage during the last year. Considering the financial stringency, and considering also the fact that this was Dr. Key's first year in the presidency of the school, this is really a very remarkable record. The teachers are graduates of the best colleges, universities and conservatories of Europe and America. The buildings had to be enlarged last year to meet the demand, and a further enlargement is in progress this Summer. Fears are entertained that even this will be insufficient. Those who desire to attend this institution should make application at once. Concerning the buildings, grounds, apparatus, etc., information is given in the handsome advertisement which appears in this issue.

MARION FEMALE SEMINARY.

Marion Female Seminary, at Marion, Ala., is one of the historic institutions of the South. It has completed the fifty-eighth year of its existence. It is located in a refined and cultivated town near the center of the State in a region unsurpassed for healthfulness. The president, Prof. Wade, has been engaged in educational work for thirty years, and is a polished Christian gentleman. He has called to his assistance an able faculty. The principal of the art department, Miss Mary E. Jones, has made no less than seven visits to the famous art galleries of the old world in order to fit herself thoroughly for her life work. Other departments are well equipped. The grounds are ample, the buildings good and well furnished. The school is non-denominational, all denominations being represented in its Board of Trustees.

WEBB SCHOOL.

This institution is located at Bell Buckle, Tenn., fifty miles south of Nashville, in a region unsurpassed for the salubrity of its climate. It is a preparatory training-school for Vanderbilt and other universities. No school in the land has a better reputation for thoroughness of work. The moral and religious atmosphere of the school and community is just such as a wise parent desires to secure for a youth in his teens. Read advertisement.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE.

Belhaven College is a new institution to be opened in September next, under the presidency of Prof. L. T. Fitzhugh. Prof. Fitzhugh has had a large and successful experience as an educator. He was for many years in charge of the preparatory department of the Mississippi State University at Oxford, and has been for several years past the president of Whitworth College. His work at Whitworth is well known to readers of the ADVOCATE. The site of Belhaven College can hardly be surpassed anywhere for natural beauty. New and commodious buildings are in process of erection. These will be heated by steam and lighted with electricity. Members of the faculty have been trained in the best universities and conservatories of America and Europe. It is non-denominational. See advertisement.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

This institution merits the attention of all who have daughters to educate. The buildings which, a few weeks ago, were in need of repairs, have been put into good condition. It has a good curriculum and a well-equipped faculty. The discipline is firm, but gentle. Young ladies in this institution are watched over as to health and morals with mother-like tenderness. Write for a catalogue.

NASHVILLE COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES.

This institution is one of the most widely known in the South. It is located in Nashville, Tenn., the Athens and the Jerusalem of Southern Methodism. Its buildings are superb. Its president, Dr. G. W. F. Price, is perhaps as widely known as any educator in the M. E. Church, South. It has a first-class faculty and the very best facilities in all departments. For full particulars write for catalogue.

EMORY COLLEGE.

This is one of the leading institutions of Southern Methodism. It has a good curriculum and a first-class faculty, and is second to none in point of healthfulness of location. It has an endowment of $100,000. It has a record of which any institution might be proud, its alumni being found in all sections of our country, and in all the walks of life—even the very highest.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

Wesleyan Female College enjoys the unique and honorable distinction of being the oldest female college in the world. It is located in Macon, Ga., one of the most beautiful and healthful towns in the land. It has ample grounds, magnificent buildings and a fine faculty. It furnishes educational facilities of the highest order. See advertisement.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The entire history of this institution is fresh in the minds of the readers of the ADVOCATE. For four years the question of raising an endowment for Millsaps College was kept constantly before our readers. Last Winter the task was accomplished. The sum of $100,000 is invested in good securities for the benefit of the college. The college had a fine opening two years ago, and has continued to grow in public favor with the flow of time. Its president, Dr. W. B. Murrah, is a man of broad culture, polished manners and fine Christian character. Its faculty is strictly first-class. Board and expenses of all kinds have been put at rates within the reach of the toiling masses. See advertisement in another column.

GRENADA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

This institution is located in the refined, cultured town of Grenada, Miss. It has a magnificent building of large dimensions, and admirably adapted to college purposes, situated near the center of a lot of several acres. The buildings have recently been thoroughly renovated and supplied with new furniture. The institution is now under the management of two presidents, Rev. J. W. Malone, known throughout North Mississippi as a man of admirable character, and an earnest, cultured, strong preacher, and Rev. W. M. McIntosh, whose eminent success as an evangelist is known to the readers of the ADVOCATE. See advertisement.

Letter from Bishop Galloway.

MR. EDITOR: As the "Empress of China," which is to bear me away from home and native land to countries far over the seas, is about to loose her cables and turn her prow to the broad Pacific, my thought turns, among other objects dear to heart and hope, to Millsaps College. A parting word will, therefore, be pardoned. Blessings be upon this splendid young institution of the church—upon trustees, faculty, students and friends! May the term which will be far advanced before I can hope to see those halls again be in every way the most prosperous in its history! And this I am led to hope. A letter, forwarded to me here, from Dr. I. W. Cooper, our agent, says he expects to cable me the matriculation of 225 students. That will be good news in a far country.

I am specially concerned about the collection for education in the two Conferences. Every dollar of the assessment will be needed. The increasing number of candidates for the ministry, and the sons of ministers attending college, make it imperative for us to take this collection. Let this be a personal appeal to each Mississippi pastor to see to it that every cent of the educational assessment be secured. It is to be hoped that the Board of Trustees will not have to reverse or revise its liberal policy in the administration of the college, but be able to make larger provision for worthy young men seeking collegiate training. As the friend of Mississippi boys, let this be my parting injunction.

Black smoke from the vessel's great chimneys is darkening the heavens, and steam is already hissing through the pipes; so I close. CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

The Quarterly Review.

The July number of our Quarterly Review came to our table a few days since. The demands upon our time have been so various and so urgent that we have not had opportunity to give it a thorough reading, much to our regret. We have sampled it, however, here and there; and this has only sharpened an appetite already voracious. The new editor starts off well. The Review ought to be in the hands of all our preachers and also of our leading laymen. It is a positive discredit to Southern Methodism that such a periodical has not enough subscribers to make it self-supporting. The table of contents is as follows:

Christ, the Revealer of God—E. L. T. Blake. Inerrancy of the Sacred Scriptures—D. G. W. Ellis. A Historical Contrast: The Recluse of Lebanon and the Needlewoman of Joppa—W. J. Scott. Were the Ancients Acquainted with America?—R. E. Blackwell. The Religious Faculty—Wm. Harrison. The Dominion of Canada—Rev. Dr. Wilson. The Old and the New—R. W. Smith. The New Philology—S. G. Preston. "Problem of Methodism." "Problem Solved." Friendly Talks—H. R. Withers. Augustine, the Greatest of the Fathers—Thos. J. Hayden. Christ in Theology—W. P. Lovejoy.

Collections for Colored Education.

Brethren in the several Annual Conferences are urged to take up collections for Paine and Lane Institutes, as provided for heretofore. Nearly all the Conferences have made assessments for this worthy cause. Until the Board of Education is more thoroughly organized and other plans adopted, collections will be taken as formerly. The life of these institutions depends upon this help. Most urgent is the need. Let offerings be liberal and prompt. Remittances should be made to Chas. G. Goodrich, Augusta, Ga.

BOOKS.

THE PREACHER'S SON. By Wightman F. Melton, A. M. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.

As the title indicates, this book tells of the experiences and bringing up of a preacher's boy. This much-slandered individual the author shows to be "more sinned against than sinning." The environment peculiar to a preacher's son, the hardships he has to undergo, the sneers to be endured, family life at the parsonage—all this is truthfully and interestingly depicted. Many of the incidents narrated will provoke a smile; others will awaken sympathetic feelings. The author, being a preacher's son himself, does not have to draw entirely upon his imagination for the scenes and characters described. Some will doubtless find the experiences of the hero "Enoch" similar to their own. There is no attempt at profundity of thought or elevation of style, the book, for the most part, being simple narrative. Most of our young people, as well as many older persons, will be greatly interested in reading this wholesome story. It is sure to be appreciated by all preachers' sons and their kinsfolk.

"The Church and the Theatre; Their Antagonism," is the title of a sermon recently delivered by the Rev. Joel T. Daves, Jr., at Edgewood, Ga., a copy of which in pamphlet form lies on our table. We have read this sermon by our young brother with a great deal of interest. It displays thoughtful preparation and research, and contains an array of arguments absolutely convincing to any candid mind. The theatre is shown to be "corrupt and corrupting;" first, because the Christian Church in all ages has condemned it; second; because the most eminent men in heathen and in Christian lands, from the days of Plato until now, have spoken in unmeasured terms against it; thirdly, because the character of the great majority of the plays had always been and still is immoral; fourthly, because of its influence upon the actor; and, finally, because of its injurious influence upon those who attend it. The writer does not jump at conclusions, but presents cold, startling facts. If every church member who attends the theatre habitually or occasionally would read this sermon, this school of immorality would lose a large share of its patronage. Sermons like this should be scattered broadcast over the land. Get it and read it.

Dr. John F. Goucher, named as a probable successor of the late Dr. Peck as secretary of the Missionary Society, is said to be the most liberal contributor to foreign missions in the church. His wife and he support 173 foreign schools, at a yearly expense of $12,075.—Western Christian Advocate.

At Harriston.

We spent last Sabbath at Harriston, Miss., in attendance upon the Vicksburg District Conference.

The programme for Sunday was a most excellent one. At nine o'clock the Sunday-school was addressed by Rev. J. D. Crymes. The address was a most admirable one. Bro. Crymes knows exactly how to get and hold the attention of children and at the same time give them the gospel. The 11 o'clock hour was occupied by Rev. C. W. Crisler, who delivered a discourse upon "Christ, the Way of Life," which was highly appreciated by the large audience present. The sermon was not only entertaining, but edifying. At three o'clock Rev. J. W. Crisler conducted a love-feast which was a veritable season of refreshing. At night there were two missionary addresses. Rev. B. F. Jones made a very elaborate, thoughtful, well-written presentation of the claims of home missions. He was followed by Dr. Weems, who presented the claims of foreign missions in a massive, forceful address, which was listened to with profound attention by a full house.

On Monday, at eleven, Rev. A. D. Miller preached a sermon full of the very marrow of the gospel from the text, "Awake thou that sleepest."

We have no space in this issue for more than this brief note. A full account of the proceedings will, doubtless, be furnished soon. We had the pleasure of being entertained during our brief stay in Harriston by Bro. and Sister Eli Jones, to whom we are indebted for many courtesies. "Gilderoy," J. W. Chambers, T. B. Holloman and W. D. Dominick were among the visiting brethren present.

NOTES.

Rev. Collins Denny has declined the presidency of Trinity College.

Rev. James M Hawley, pastor of our church at Batesville, Ark., has accepted the chair of English in Hendrix College.

Dr. S. A. Steel is announced to spend ten days in North Mississippi, lecturing in the interest of Grenada College. He begins July 30.

Rev. Jno. M. Crowe, of Missouri, is preparing an Epworth Catechism, to be published in a series of chapters in The Epworth Era.

An Episcopalian, who likes the way the Methodist women care for the poor, has given them a magnificent property near New York for a home.

The number of lives lost by the mine horror in Austrian Silesia was 232. The mine is still burning, and it will be several months before work can be resumed.

We invite the attention of all our city subscribers to the advertisement of T. J. Murray, corner Rampart and St. Andrew. They will find him reasonable and reliable.

We greatly regret to hear of the death of our old friend and schoolmate, Dr. J. T. Alford, of Rockport, Miss. We tender our sympathies to the bereaved family.

Martin College, Pulaski, Tenn., has been leased by Miss Alice S. Foxworthy, of Nashville, Tenn., who for ten years was lady principal of the Nashville College for Young Ladies, of which Dr. Price is principal.

We are exceedingly pained to learn, just as we go to press, of the death of Sister McVoy, wife of Rev. A. D. McVoy, of the Louisiana Conference. A good woman has gone to her reward. Bro. McVoy and family have our deepest sympathies.

This being the jubilee year of Gen. Booth's Christian life, an effort is being made to raise a special fund of $350,000 for the Salvation Army. Into this has been given already $100,000, the value of an estate recently left to Gen. Booth for his own personal use, but which he has put into the general fund.

Rev. J. F. Patterson, of the Louisiana Conference, has been for some time carrying on a revival meeting at Montgomery with considerable success. One remarkable feature of the meeting is the bold it has on the young people. A traveling show came to town during the meeting and did the usual amount of advertising with posters, brass bands, etc., and yet failed to draw enough of the young folks to enable it to go on with its performance. A good indication surely. We congratulate Bro. Patterson upon the hold he has upon his young people.

Woman's Work.

My attention has been directed to an utterance by a missionary at a meeting in Japan which deserves repetition to the church at home.

The speaker was Dr. Knox, of the Presbyterian Church, and his words were: "What remains to be done is woman's work for woman, especially these establishing of Christian schools for girls and women. Japan can never take the position of a civilized country until her women are elevated by Christianity. That is the only force that will lift woman out of her ignorance and degradation, and make her to exert such an influence in her home as do the women of Christian lands. The call, the opportunity and the responsibility are ours; we can not afford to be indifferent."

May these words of truth rouse some other hearts to give of their means to that cause being now pressed upon our attention by our dear Sister Lambuth in the institution so dear to her heart—"The Kobe Industrial School for Girls"—and which when equipped will prove a mighty potency for accomplishing this elevation of Japanese womanhood. Now is the day light. This is the working time. Well for us if we make use of it aright! Let contributions and subscriptions roll in rapidly. Yours in hope,

J. P. DRAKE.

Conference Claimants.

What a fearful, horrible picture the treasurer of Joint Board of Finance of Mississippi Conference gives us in this week's ADVOCATE! Veterans, widows and orphans of the Mississippi Conference "waiting, suffering, perishing" for want of the necessaries of life! That is all they get from a rich church. The heathen nations, when the fathers and mothers grew old and dependent upon the children, kill them. Is that not better than "waiting, suffering, perishing," by our veterans, widows and children! Dying by inches! The good treasurer puts the emphasis at the proper place. The preachers could collect and report, but do not. Our preachers ought to do better than that, for "whatever we sow, that shall we reap."

The Paine Institute.

The following action, subject to the approval of the Board of Education, was adopted at the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Paine Institute.

Whereas, We are dependent upon the several amounts asked of the Annual Conferences and promised to us by them; And, whereas, The recent General Conference established a Board of Education, which, among other duties, was to look after our interests, and since which, considering plans for the maintenance and further development of our work, we greatly need these several amounts; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees of the Paine Institute earnestly request the brethren of the several Conferences to collect the amounts assumed by them, and forward to Chas. G. Goodrich, Esq., Georgia Railroad Bank, Augusta, Ga.

Meridian, Miss.

We have a fine meeting in progress at East End. Bro. Partridge, of the Seashore district, is with us, and has been doing the preaching. Bro. H. C. Brown, formerly pastor here, is also with us. To date there have been about thirty conversions and entire sanctifications. There has scarcely been a person at the altar seeking conversion or sanctification who has not received the blessing sought. Since January there have been not less than fifty conversions and sanctifications and over forty accessions to the church. The Lord has greatly blessed us, and to him be all the praise.

B. F. LEWIS.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jim J. Smylie, Rich Hill, Mo., July 21: "I begin here to-morrow (Sunday). This is a town of about 6 000 inhabitants. Large mining industries located here. A town of wealth. Eleven denominations represented here. Pray for us."

Rev. M. L. White, Mt. Carmel, Miss., July 21: "Just closed my first protracted meeting held at Mt. Moriah. It was a real good one. Three joined the church; large part of membership revived. I am expecting a heap of the good Lord this year. Was assisted by Bros. B. A. Beeson, L. J. Jones, J. C. Ellis."

Jas. D. P. Logan, Steward, Port Eads, La., July 2: "Rev. Norwood, of the M. E. Church, South, has been at this place holding a religious meeting, in which he has been successful, and we thank the Lord that through his instrumentality he has converted three and has accepted them into the church as active members. We hope and pray God will hasten the time when all the people of this place will be brought closer to him through the preaching of the gospel. We will have prayer meeting every Sunday evening, and our desire is to build up a Sunday-school here as soon as possible, by the help of God. Bro. Norwood is very thankful to the people of this place for the kindness shown him. We exhort the gentlemen of the incarnate fiends who said they would run Bro. Norwood away from here, and ask them to not try it. Though, in Christ, we love them, yet we wish to say the statement of Paul Zibilich, of Empire post-office, made at Port Eads, La., is false, for the people at Daisy love Bro. Norwood rather than run him, and here the people all love him as much excepting those who are hell seekers. The fact is, he is straight in his speech, and the dog hit howls. Pray for us, brothers. Best wishes."

LOUISVILLE, MISS., CAPTURED FOR CHRIST.

To-day closes the most remarkable revival of religion we have ever had in our town. Some of the most eloquent and famous divines of the South have conducted protracted meetings in Louisville; but the revival that has just closed here under the charge of the Rev. James McCaskill, of Columbus, Miss., is without a parallel in the history of our town. Everyone without regard to denominational predilection concede that they never before experienced such general good feeling and brotherly love and such a tangible manifestation of the presence and power of God. Our town is an ideal Christian community just now. So deep and genuine was the feeling created that ladies and young girls threw off all reserve and prayed openly in public.

The liquor traffic, so long the bane of our town, was swept away by the revolution, and the dealer surrendered his stock of whisky on hand to be destroyed, which was done in the streets of the town. He declares it to be his fixed purpose to enthrone Christ in his business, and henceforth to lead the life of a Christian.

Bro. McCaskill has done a grand work for Louisville. He is a young Methodist minister not exceeding thirty years of age, and has only been in the work for two years. Without any effort at rhetorical ornamentation or dramatic effect, he drives straight to the mark. He puts out of sight all doctrinism, ecclesiasticism, and holds up to his hearers the Christ-life for imitation. The secret of the success of this eminent young divine is a consecrated conscience, so rare, that it is almost unique, and a great and loving heart all aglow with love for his fellow-man, and withal a head and heart to understand and appreciate the marvelous life of his Master. After all, said Daniel Webster in his private confession of faith, when near the hour of impending dissolution, "The most accomplished scholar is him who is educated at the feet of Jesus, and in the college of fishermen." Brother McCaskill is a tower of strength in Zion, and the world will hear from him yet.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

OUR CALLING.

(Phil. iii, 14; II. Tim. i, 9; Heb. iii, 1; II. Pet. i, 10.)

Our text has reference to the Olympic races. There are the mark, the struggle to reach it, the glorious price.

1. The mark. The goal of mankind. Prominent, distinct. It embraces

(1) Repentance of sin—sin which nailed Jesus to the cross.

(2) Forgiveness of transgression. The happiest of all consummations.

(3) Regeneration. Christ declared its necessity during his nocturnal conference with Nicodemus.

(4) A life in keeping with our high calling.

2. To reach this mark ardent effort is necessary. Paul in Heb. xii, 1, suggests how it is done.

(1) Laying aside every weight. Such as love of the world, inordinate love of fame, wealth, comfort.

(2) Laying aside besetting sin. The best of us have our weak traits. There we must watch. Besetting, like the foot-pad. Be on your guard.

(3) Run with patience the race set before us. With patience, though the difficulties be great. With patience, though many fall by the wayside. With patience, though oft the heart grows sick because of hope deferred.

3 The price, is beyond computation, valuable. Thought becomes bewildered in contemplation.

(1) Are children of God. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we are called the sons of God. Sons of the omnipresent, omnipotent, omniscient God.

(2) Enjoy the indwelling witness, guide and comfort of the Holy Ghost.

(3) Throughout life the Lord sustains and upholds us. At death he sends the angels to escort us to the home of the soul.

(4) In heaven we shall meet the saints of all ages. Resting from our labors. God wiping the tears from our eyes.

HOME CIRCLE.

VACANT PLACES AT HOME.

BY MRS. A. L. RUTER DUFOUR.

There are places—vacant places—
Here beside our dear heartstone:
And we miss sweet angel voices
Once that answered to our own.

There were smiling, cherub faces,
Loving hearts, light, glad and free,
Which, at morn and evening's altar,
With us bowed a willing knee.

In our eyes the teardrops gather,
As we see their vacant chairs
By the fireside, table, altar,
Grief our chastened spirit wears.

Little feet that ever hastened
Joyfully to seek our side,
Now no more their quick steps greet us,
No more thrill our hearts with pride.

But we know our Father called them
To his mansions up on high.
And we know our missing treasures
Have been garnered in the sky.

Soon our places will be vacant,
And on earth be known no more;
May we then, in blest reunion,
Greet those loved ones gone before!

Last Days.

A year ago at this time two who loved each other dearly were spending their last sweet days together. They did not dream that any parting was near. No shadow of death projected itself over their sunny pathway, and they went gayly on, the whole life of the household set to the melody of their unclouded happiness.

Suddenly one chill wintry morning the bolt fell. There was a husband desolate; there were little children motherless; there was a wee baby, like a rose-leaf blown from a faded rose, lying in utter helplessness on the nurse's lap. The world went on just as before, but the clock of time seemed for a while to have run down in that house which had been so bright, and all in a moment grew so dark.

They never dreamed they were spending their last earthly days together, the two who drank the cup of love's bliss, with hearts so light and smiles so cheery. And this is the point of the reflection. Very many of us are spending our last days with some of our dear ones; or they are getting ready, perhaps unwittingly, to go away and leave us. Are these days being spent in so sweet and tender and loving a fashion that we shall have naught to regret when they are past?—Christian Intelligencer.

A Mother's Love.

"Children," wrote Lord Macaulay, the great essayist and historian, "look in those eyes; listen to that dear voice; notice the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that gentle hand. Make much of it while you have that most precious of all good gifts—a loving mother.

"Read the unfathomable love of those eyes; the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after life you may have friends—fond, dear, kind friends—but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows.

"Often do I sigh in my struggles with the hard, uncaring, world for the sweet, deep security I felt when of an evening, nestling in her bosom, I listened to some quiet tale, suitable to my age, read in her tender and untiring voice. Never can I forget her sweet kiss of peace given at night. Years have passed away since we laid her beside my father in the old churchyard, yet still her eye watches over me as I visit spots long since hallowed to her memory."—Gospel Advocate.

Bits of Wisdom.

A young girl once heard a bit of wisdom from the lips of a very aged woman—a woman who had rounded the full term of ninety years, and with eyes still bright and clear looked out upon the enrolling waters of eternity. The girl was impressed by the emphasis with which the venerable dame said to her, "Bessie, never insist on having the last word." The determination to have the final word leads to more quarrels and more bitterness of feeling at home than almost anything else in domestic life. The fact is, that one may so control her tongue and her eyes that she may allow her opponent the pleasure of this coveted concluding thrust and yet placidly retain her own opinion, and in the homely colloquial parlance of the up-country, where one finds strong-willed people living together in great peace with the most pronounced diversity of characteristics, "do as she's a mind to."

Another bit of wisdom may be condensed into a pithy sentence: Avoid explanations. In some families nothing is taken for granted. Every action, every decision, every new departure, every acceptance or rejection of an invitation, must be endlessly talked and fussed over, explained and re-explained. In that way lie all sorts of stumbling-blocks. As a rule, beyond your parents or your husband there is nobody who has the right to demand of you explanations at each step of your onward path. Don't give them. Establish a reputation of keeping your own counsel. It will serve you well in many a crisis, and be no end of comfort.

Again, don't be forever setting people right. There is a household fiend with a memory for dates and details, who can never sit still and hear papa say that he went down town on Monday at eight, without correcting the statement with the remark that the hour was half-past. If mama happens to allude to Cousin Jennie's visit as having occurred last Thursday, this wee-plike impersonation of accuracy interposes with the statement that it was Friday, not Thursday, which brought Cousin Jane. A dozen times a day exasperating frictions are caused by needless corrections of this sort, referring to matters where exactness is not really imperative, the affaire in question being unimportant, and no violation of truth being for an instant intended.

A manifest bit of wisdom is to refrain from criticism of food. The sance may not be quite piquant enough, the salad may be wilted, but in the name of decency say nothing about it in either case.

Silence is golden in nearly every instance where a defect obtains in the home economy.

To abstain from superfluous apologies is also the habit of discretion. There should seldom be the occasion for apology in the household, where all would do well and wisely to be constantly gentle and courteous.—Harper's Bazar.

Religion in the Home.

The tendency to transfer religion from the home to the church is as unwise as it is unapostolic, anyhow. In fact, no such transfer can be successfully made, and all efforts in that direction will impoverish the home without enriching the church in spiritual zeal. Men who do not lead their own families in devotional services at home will never amount to much as factors in the spiritual forces of the church. The vine branch which doesn't blossom at the family altar never bears much fruit in the public congregation. The idea that a man can serve God acceptably and to his own salvation by simply filling a spectator's seat at a forty-minute religious performance in the public congregation once a week, is a delusion and a snare. No man can even say amen consistently in the congregation who never prays at home. Nor can anyone be greatly benefited by the public worship in the congregation of the saints without carrying away from the services enough of the devotional spirit to raise a song and provoke a prayer at home. There is no better evidence of the utter spiritual barrenness of a father than the failure of the seed-sowing in the public worship of the saints to sprout a shoot of patriarchal devotion in his own home. In such a case there is either a serious lack of spirituality in the public service of the congregation or a fatal defect in the religious responsiveness of the brother's soul. In either case his salvation is in imminent peril. Manifestly he gets no spiritual benefit from the public worship in the congregation, and in the very nature of the case he has absolutely no other source whence he can derive spiritual strength from seasons of more effective devotions. He makes no pretentions to worship anywhere except in the public congregation of the saints, and when he receives no spiritual strength from that source he is a hopeless bankrupt in genuine piety.

"I DON'T CARE."

Girls and boys, I wish to tell you
Of a foe you entertain;
I have seen you with him often,
And the fact has caused me pain.
For he only seeks the ruin
Of your lives so young and fair—
He's a foe, cool, sly, and cunning,
And his name is "I don't care."

Have you ever thought, dear children,
That "I don't care" is a thief,
Taking from you time and order,
Candor, friends, and all, save grief?
Don't you notice the bold falsehoods
That he daily tells to you,
And that makes you say "I don't care,"
When at heart you really do.

He at first will only cause you
To forget yourself, and dare
To answer parents, friends, and strangers
With the rude words "I don't care."
But be warned! He'll plant within you
The true spirit of his name,
Then he'll disappear like magic,
Leaving you to bear the shame.

Break the habit, children, break it;
Do not use the common phrase;
Smaller things than this have started
Many a life in reckless ways.
Guard your words, your thoughts, your actions;
To yourselves be true, and dare
Not to let the good of life slip by you
With a reckless "I don't care."

—The Little Christian.

Gladstone's Courtesy.

Personally Mr. Gladstone is an example of the most winning, the most delicate and the most minute courtesy. He is a gentleman of the elder English school, and his manners are grand and ultanc, always stately, never condescending, and genuinely modest. He affects even the dress of the old school, and I have seen him in the morning wearing an old black evening coat. The humblest passer-by in Piccadilly, raising his hat to Mr. Gladstone, is sure to get a sweeping salute in return.

This courtliness is all the more remarkable because it accompanies and adorns a very strong temper, a will of iron, and a habit of being regarded for the greater part of his lifetime as a personal force of unequaled magnitude. Yet the most foolish, and perhaps one may add the most impertinent, of Mr. Gladstone's dinner-table questioners is sure of an elaborate reply, delivered with the air of a student in deferential talk with his master.

To the cloth Mr. Gladstone shows a reverence which occasionally woos the observer to a smile. The callowest curate is sure of a respectful listener in the foremost Englishman of the day.

As to his relations with his family, they are very charming. It is a pleasure to hear Herbert Gladstone—his youngest, and possibly his favorite son—speak of "my father." All of them, sons and daughters, are absolutely devoted to his cause, wrapped up in his personality, and enthusiastic as to every side of his character. Of children Mr. Gladstone has always been fond, and he has more than one favorite among his grandchildren.—McClure's Magazine.

Prizes for Politeness.

The other day the writer was shown with great pride, by a poor woman whom he was visiting, a prize which her son had won at school "for politeness." This is an excellent premium to give children; for though all can not be clever, all may be good and polite. Then we all know the connection that exists between genuine politeness and true religion. Certainly its absence in professing Christians may well astonish those who become acquainted with these unpolite Christians (is not this a contradiction in terms?) for the first time. The Honorable Madame A. Hok, who visited this country upwards of two years ago, was one of the first Chinese ladies of high position (with the exception of the wives of Chinese ambassadors) who came to the United Kingdom. During her voyage over she was constantly struck by some of the passengers not being as kind and polite as they might have been. "Is it possible," she said, "that they are Christians, and can do so and so? Why, I thought that they all believed in the God of love." We had better offer more prizes in our schools for politeness. It would help the missionary cause.—Quiver.

OBITUARIES.

TOMB—CHARLES ANDREWS, infant son of C. A. and L. E. Tomb, died at their home in Wilson, La., May 11, 1894.

Little Charlie lived seven months and twenty-seven days. A sweet little life on earth begun, but for reasons best known to him who can not err, he has taken him to make up his jewels in heaven. His sunny smile and baby ways have left a void in that home. While he can not come back to you, you can go to him.

May the blessings of heaven rest upon you, and may you so live as to one day meet the bright little angel who will be watching and waiting for you!

AUNTIE.

LANNIS—WILLIAM ELIJAH LANNIS was born in Catahoula parish, La., Sept. 25, 1846; married Miss Wealthy E. Hunt, of Catahoula parish, Feb. 14, 1864, and died in Vidalia, La., May 29, 1894.

It is a very difficult task to write of our departed friends and do justice to their memory; but nothing that could be said of him that is good would overstep the bounds of truth nor be an over-estimate of his real character. Fidelity, truth and humility were the main standards of his life, and that covers all the ground of perfect manhood. As a Christian he was of a quiet type, not boastful of his own actions, nor did he make any display publicly; but those who knew him best were aware of the strong confidence he had in God and the love he entertained for the cause of Christianity. A more devoted husband and loving father could not be found among men. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, having joined in Vidalia in 1891.

J. WHITE DAVIS.

PERKINS—ELIZABETH PERKINS, daughter of William A. and Julia Roberts, was born in the State of Pennsylvania, March 15, 1804, and died in Greenville, Miss., Dec. 24, 1893. Her parents moved to the State of Mississippi in the year 1806, and on Jan. 17, 1838, she was married to Joel Perkins. Their union was blessed with seven children. Her husband and two children preceded her over the river. She professed religion and joined the church in the year 1840, and lived a consistent member until death.

The writer had some acquaintance with Sister Perkins in her last years of widowhood and pilgrimage, and the sunset of life with her was most beautiful. She was a patient, loving mother in Israel. Her life was a special blessing to her children, who felt the power of her personal devotion to God more than others, as her affliction kept her at home much of the time. She died in great peace. May the blessing of God rest on the bereaved family, and may they all so live that they may meet her in heaven! W. M. YOUNG.

JOHNSON—SAMUEL M. JOHNSON was born June 17, 1829, and died near Walnut Grove, May 11, 1894. He had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for nearly, if not quite, forty years before his death.

The summons came sudden and unexpected to his family and friends, and for this reason he was not able to leave them any dying testimony in words, but his life was such that those who know him best feel satisfied that he was prepared to meet the Master. He made no display of his religious experience, but he was ever ready to minister to the wants of the needy, and the cry of distress from the widow and fatherless reaching his ear found a ready response from him, and their wants were supplied. He had a kind word and bright smile for everyone. He was a true friend of the preacher, manifesting a deep interest in his welfare. Thus passes away from the active scenes of this life a brave soldier, a worthy citizen, a consistent Christian. We commend the sorrowing family to him who alone can sooth the sorrows of this life, and heal the wounded heart.

OBITUARIES.

MIMS—Mrs. SUSAN D. MIMS, the daughter of Judge John F. and Selina H. Carr, was born in Stokes county, N. C., June 12, 1830; moved to Mississippi with her parents in 1836; professed religion in 1845, and joined the Methodist Church soon after; married to Col. Matthew Mims, March 1, 1849; died May 29, 1894, at her home near Starkville, Miss.

Sister Mims was one of the best women we ever knew. She made it a rule never to speak an ill-caimed word of anyone. She loved the sanctuary. Though in later years she was not often permitted to attend church, yet her love and zeal were unabated.

As wife, mother, daughter and sister, she possessed the graces of a kind devotion for husband, patient love for her children, child-like obedience for parents, and tender, kind sympathy for brothers and sisters.

I have known Sister Mims since 1866, and all this time she seemed to possess as much of the mind of Christ as anyone I ever knew. Her religion was of that kind that springs from a sound conversion, a deep conviction of duty, and a mighty desire to please her Lord. She was, therefore, steadfast in conflicts, immovable in troubles, always abounding in the work of the Lord amid disappointments. She lived well; she died grandly.

After funeral services by the writer we laid her body to rest in the family graveyard in Crawford, Miss. We sorrow, she rejoices; we mourn, she praises; and so shall it ever be with her. Home at last. K. A. JONES.

THOMAS—JOHN THOMAS, son of Frederic and Patience Thomas, was born near Starkville, Miss., Dec. 25, 1833; died May 2, 1894. When quite young he was left without a home, with a widowed mother and family to provide for. He was happily married to Amanda S. Laughter soon after the war, this union being blessed with seven children, all of which he raised after the death of his wife, about seven years ago.

Bro. Thomas professed religion during the war (exact date not known); joined the Methodist Church at Baker's Chapel. He has served a church for thirty years as steward, class leader and Sunday-school superintendent. Bro. Thomas was in religion as in everything else—a zealous and ardent supporter of his principles. In the death of this good man we recognize our great loss, for truly he was "the friend of God," as he was an earnest helper and sincere friend of his pastor.

He will be greatly missed as citizen, friend, member of the church, Sunday-school superintendent, and as a leader and affectionate father. It is hard to give him up, but we confidently expect to meet him after awhile. May God comfort and keep his sorrowing children!

A. J. JONES.

RICHARDSON—JOHN R. RICHARDSON, the subject of this sketch, was born in Pineville, Rapides parish, La., Aug. 10, 1873, and departed this life, June 19, 1894, aged twenty years ten months and nine days. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1887, under the ministry of Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir. In some way he lost his church relations, but joined again under the ministry of the writer, in March, 1894, from which time on he remained faithful.

He was a great sufferer, but never murmured nor complained. In the hour of grief and pain he possessed that faith that constrained him to lean upon his God. He died at Hot Springs, Ark., whither he had gone to improve his health. From his conversation during his sickness, doubtless, when he came to swollen Jordan he did not find the waters chilly, and now he is resting on the other side of Jordan. May the God of all grace comfort those who mourn his death, and may we all meet on the other side of Jordan, where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more! His pastor, WILSON MOORE.

NICHOLSON—MATTHEW THOMAS NICHOLSON was born in Macon county, Ala., Dec. 6, 1841; was raised in North Louisiana, and died in Claiborne parish, La., June 17, 1894.

Bro. Nicholson was baptized in infancy by Bishop Geo F. Pierce; was converted under the ministry of and received into the church by Rev. Richmond Randle when about fifteen years old. While Bro. Nicholson did not live up to his Christian and church duties all the way in life, yet was reclaimed, and during his late protracted illness was most wonderfully blessed, and was, it seemed, in Beulah's land for a month before he left us.

Some weeks before his death he had a sinking spell, and when recovered said he had seen the glorious world, and the next time he would go to stay. Said the first time he had gone for the good of his family; the next time would go for the glory of God.

He leaves an aged father ("Uncle Wash"), two brothers—Col. J. M. and Rev. W. W. Nicholson—sisters, daughters and son, and a devoted wife and others, who will miss him. May God comfort them! R. M. BLOCKER.

WHITINGTON—Whereas, God, in his all-wise providence, has seen fit to take to himself the infant daughter, HAZLE IRENE, of our beloved superintendent and wife, Bro. and Sister L. P. Whitington; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved parents in their affliction, and commend them to the love and mercy of our heavenly Father, who doeth all things for the good of those that love him and keep his commandments, and pray that he may sustain them by his grace in the hours of affliction and guide them into eternal life hereafter.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Sunday-school, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved parents as a token of love and condolence from the M. E. Sunday-school. J. F. STATHAM, for Com.

Alexandria, La.

McKINLEY—With faith in him who doeth all things well, but with grieved and sorrowing hearts, the East End Methodist Sunday-school, of Meridian, Miss., offer the following resolutions in memory of our late beloved friend and brother, FLOYD MCKINLEY:

Resolved, That we recognize the hand of an all-wise, loving Father in this dispensation of his mysterious providence. We humbly bow in submission. We will not question the wisdom, though we can not fathom the mystery.

Resolved, That East End Sunday-school has lost a bright and shining light, and his class a most efficient, zealous teacher—one who was ever ready and gladly willing to spend and be spent in his Master's cause. His removal will be an incentive to greater faithfulness in our Christian life. His voice is hushed, but his zeal and devotion to his Master's cause, his pure and spotless life, will ever be to us a never-ceding sermon. Our hearts go out in warmest sympathy to his bereaved family and loved ones, and we pray God to bind up their wounded hearts as no one can do, and pour out his richest blessings upon them.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and a copy be forwarded to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and a copy be spread upon the minutes of this Sunday-school.

(Signed) MRS. G. L. HARMON,
For the Sunday-school Committee.

FLOWERS—We come to greet you with the sad tidings of the death of a sister and mother in Israel. On April 23, 1891, Sister MARY J. FLOWERS fell, as a victim, into the hands of the irresistible officer of time, who, with one stroke of his sword, clipped the brittle thread that bound the soul to the body, and the disembodied spirit winged its way to the great Father of spirits.

Sister Flowers joined the church at about the age of thirteen years, and lived a faithful member of the same for fifty-three years, making her the age of sixty-six years had she lived to the seventeenth of June.

She was thrice married: first to Rev. B. F. Impson, second to Bro. Jordan, third to Bro. J. H. Flowers.

She was an affectionate mother, a faithful wife, a true friend, and a devoted Christian. She leaves behind her several children and grandchildren and an aged husband to mourn her loss. P. H. HOWSE, P. C.

Meadville, Miss.

TOMPSON—COURTNEY TOMPSON, son of Silas, Jr., and Mollie Tompson, was born Feb. 23, 1887, and passed from earth to heaven, May 28, 1894, after three weeks of the most intense suffering.

Courtney was an exceptionally bright child at school, and thoughtful beyond his years in attending to home duties for his widowed mother, whom he loved devotedly. During his last illness he would often throw his little arms around her neck, exclaiming, "Oh, poor, poor mama."

Weep not, dear mother; we know you are lonely and miss his sweet form everywhere. The home does not seem the same any more; but he is safe in the arms of Jesus, and is free from pain and temptation. May this dispensation of a loving Father draw the stricken mother near to the portals of heaven, and she be enabled to say, "Thy will, not mine, be done."

STEPHENS—Miss MYRA STEPHENS was born Dec. 26, 1876, and died Oct. 15, 1893.

Her home since childhood has been in Plattsburg, Miss. She was reared by Christian parents. She was always kind to her schoolmates. She sought at all times to obey the golden rule. She was loved and esteemed by all that knew her. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in July, 1893, under my ministry, and I never knew a more devoted Christian. She was one of the first in her Sunday-school class, always at her post, ready to work for her Master. She was especially beloved by her school-mates.

Her bereaved parents seem inconsolable. Bereaved parents, instead of feeling gloomy and broken-hearted, you should feel that your interest in heaven is greater than ever, for your loved one is waiting and watching for you. J. C. LONG, P. C.

INGE—On the evening of May 20, 1891, the pure spirit of sweet little VIVIAN INGE, elder daughter of our sainted Rev. Geo. S. Inge, departed this life. She was born Nov. 8, 1885. Her stay on earth was short, but no sweeter or lovelier little Christian ever rendered more comfort to her father, mother, and loved ones. A true and devoted member of the Sunday-school and Juvenile Missionary Society, she talked much of her Savior and heaven, where her blessed spirit was bent to go. The abiding hope of meeting her again where the weary are at rest and the wicked cease from troubling will sustain and cheer the stricken ones.

J. H. SHUMAKER.

BERRY—JOHN ROBERT, son of H. M. and E. C. Berry, was born in Calhoun county, Miss., Dec. 26, 1869, and died at his sister's residence, in the same county, on June 20, 1891.

He left Chahoma county, where his parents live, last Winter on account of bad health, and went back to the hills to live. So he died away from home.

He united with the Methodist Church at Cherry Hill, near Dublin, in 1892, and lived a consistent life until his death. May God comfort his father, mother, brothers and sisters until they meet again! R. I. ALLEN.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

God wants a witness everywhere. Has he got one in your family?

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold, remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Another councilman was indicted for bribery last week in this city by the Grand Jury.

The Tariff bill as amended by the Senate has gone again to conference without any alteration or concession.

Eight hundred and ten employees on the Wyoming division of the Union Pacific have already lost their jobs by reason of the recent strike, and probably a hundred will follow suit.

The sanitary corps of New York City now embraces three female physicians, who are under the same rule, and required to do the same amount of work, as their male associates.

The Senators of Louisiana, during the excitement that has grown out of the recent Senate debates over the sugar schedule of the Tariff bill, have been accused of being in complicity with the Sugar Trust, because they have been standing so stoutly for their great industry.

Recent advices received at the local mint from Washington again insures the continued operation of the mint for a year at least. An order was recently sent out ordering the mint here to the coinage of standard silver dollars. Up to this time 52,000 standard silver dollars have been coined, and until further instruction the work will continue.

The proceedings in the Senate during the present week will depend largely upon the conferees on the Tariff bill. If they should reach the conclusion during the week, as every one expects they will, the report will be made to the Senate, that body having granted the request for a conference, and the report will be taken up at the first opportunity.

Phillips, Minn., was almost completely destroyed by fire on July 27. The inhabitants are in a most pitiable condition. Only the town hall and a few buildings are standing. A good many lives were lost. The inhabitants are now living in tents. Gov. Peck arrived at the place on July 29. A train-load of provisions has arrived from various cities, and the organization for relief has been completed.

The Citizens' Protective Association of this city held a meeting on July 27. It was composed of delegates from the various city branches. The principal action taken was the unanimous adoption of a resolution instructing the Executive Committee to proceed at once with measures for the impeachment of city officials and members of the City Council, under article 201 of the Constitution of Louisiana, with a view to their removal from office for gross misconduct, malfeasance and misfeasance committed in their official capacity and functions.

FOREIGN.

The Bank of England attained its bicentenary on July 27.

While no formal declaration of war between China and Japan has been made, it is said the Japanese vessels are out with fighting orders. A Chinese transport was sunk by a Japanese cruiser, and about 1,000 soldiers were drowned.

Sent with the Order.

The C. F. Risley Co., Wholesale Druggists, 62 Cortlandt St., New York, ordered a large supply of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, and sent this with the order: "It is strange that your remedy is not more generally known, as its effects on rheumatism are simply marvelous—superior to any rheumatic medicine we have ever sold." Th's is high praise, but the remedy fully deserves it. If you have the rheumatism send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles—enough for a month's treatment. Agents wanted.

AWAY FROM EARTH.

BY REV. DR. BRADFORD K. PEIRCE.

(Written in an album.)

Earth's children fade away,
The leaf and blushing flower,
Softly as closing day,
To ev'ning's silent hour.

Her cities sink apace;
Her countless millions all
Soon run their life's short race,
And then forgotten fall.

Earth's love is but a dream,
In which hearts warm and true
Bask in its golden beam,
And wake to sad adieu.

Oh, then, love not the earth,
Nor for its shadows sigh;
Child of immortal birth,
Fix all thy hopes on high!

There flowers unfading bloom,
The heart-strings are ne'er riven;
Death's footsteps never come
To break the joy of heaven.

Round About.

It was my privilege lately to visit two of our District Conferences in the interest of our college.

I reached Pleasant Hill, the seat of the Shreveport District Conference, Wednesday evening. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Whatley, having an eye to the comfort of his visitors, quartered me with Mrs. Hollingsworth, a daughter of my old-time friend, Major Hollingsworth, of Natchitoches. Here was extended to me a hearty welcome and genuine Christian hospitality, which was received and appreciated to the fullest extent. The pastor gave me the privilege of preaching to his Epworth League, which I tried to do. As I am soon to take charge of the boys of Centenary College, I suppose this pastor's duty was to do his part in getting me ready for that important work.

The Conference met at the appointed hour Thursday morning, with Presiding Elder Harp in the chair and Pastor Peterson at the secretary's desk. Bro. Harp had "taken time by the forelock," and distributed among his brethren blank forms for reports, and when their names were called each brother reported the condition of his charge by reading the filled-out blank. From these reports I gathered that the condition of things in the Shreveport district was very good. There have been many seasons of refreshing in various sections, and the preachers are full of hope that these seasons are simply foretokens of abundant "showers of blessing" that are coming in the late summer and early autumn. Bro. Harp and his Conference were abundant in harmony, and held a special session, Thursday afternoon, in the interest of Centenary. I talked as I best could, endeavoring to awaken a fresh zeal in the hearts of the people for our great and important cause. Prof. Wier, our agent, made a gratifying talk, and by his own hopefulness created new hope in the minds of the brethren. If the expressed sentiment and offers of help are indications, then I will say that Centenary College is taking hold of the Methodists of the Shreveport district with a firmer grasp than ever before. Preachers and laymen, one and all, have promised to use all lawful endeavors to send us students.

In order to have at least one day at Arcadia District Conference, I was under necessity to leave Pleasant Hill and its pleasant associations Thursday morning for Shreveport. Of course, I was the guest of the City Hotel, whose proprietor, Mr. Reynolds, is the friend of all ministers of the gospel, and entertains them in good style at half price. In going east it was my good fortune to be on Conductor Chapman's train. I have known him since before he knew himself, and he is still the same kind, courteous, thoughtful, careful Bob, and has grown into the most popular conductor that ever commanded a train of cars. He is the brother of the able editor of the St. Louis Advocate. At Homer, Bro. Blocker, pastor at Lisbon, had his son Marvin and a span of Attakapas ponies awaiting me, and after partaking the generous hospitality of Bro. and Sister Nelson, which consisted of a hearty welcome and a good dinner and an hour's refreshing sleep, Marvin manipulated the ponies, and the ponies whirled the buggy over to Lisbon in good time for the evening service. Here I found a gracious condition of affairs. At the afternoon session of the Conference the Holy Spirit had descended in power upon preachers and people, and had conducted the business in a most authoritative manner, and instituted in its stead an altar service, at which were several conversions and a revival of many Christians. I found an immense crowd of people attendant upon and attentive to the work of the Conference and the preaching of the Word. Every pastor was present and a large per cent. of the delegates, and the Holy Spirit seemed to supervise everything. Here I met several of my old yokefellows in the gospel, and there was mutual refreshment in the cordial fellowship which followed. To say that the Conference work was done well and wisely is to say what everybody, who knows the temper of that Conference, expected. To say that the preaching was in "demonstration of the Spirit and of power" is to say what everyone in those vast audiences felt. The brethren, preachers and laymen and elect ladies, gave me a welcome which crept down into the bottom of my heart, and abides there as one of the precious memories of life. If Centenary is not coming to prominence in the thoughts and affections of the people of Arcadia district, then I am no judge of signs. Several parties, who are subscribers to our endowment fund, hunted me up diligently in order to pay over the interest due. And here I will say, if the subscribers to this fund in Louisiana and Mississippi will make arrangements early in the Fall to pay the interest on their notes, the college will be immensely benefited and the cause of Christian education largely promoted. "A word to the wise is sufficient." The delegates to the Annual Conference from Arcadia district are: Dr. R. Roberts, J. B. Williams, Rev. F. M. Henry and R. T. McClendon. The alternates are: J. W. Dawson and J. T. Baker.

Only at the Seasbore Camp Meeting have I seen such congregations as I saw at Lisbon. The people came from every direction and by every sort of conveyance, and were entertained generously by the Lisbonites. I, in company with Presiding Elder Sheppard and Pastor Cassity, had elegant entertainment at the home of a Baptist brother, Carothers, who, with his amiable wife, was constantly on the alert to anticipate every wish of his guests. Taken altogether, this was the most wonderful Conference I have attended. The manifested displays of saving power were many and remarkable.

Two days spent in Shreveport on my return ended a trip which at every point has brought encouragement, on account of the brightening prospects of old Centenary. The people are everywhere talking of the college and expressing a determination to co-operate in every scheme for its upbuilding. Let all the croakers stop croaking and listen to that talk, and they will soon be convinced that the Methodists of Louisiana have started out with the purpose of having in five years' time the best equipped, the best endowed and the best attended college in the Southwest. This is no idle boast. Twenty-five thousand Christian men and women are not to be thwarted in their purpose when they know that purpose is in harmony with the will of God. They will work as a unit, and their combined strength will overcome all opposition and overturn all obstacles. The future of Centenary is assured.

C. W. CARTER.

"Why They Did Not Join the Methodists."

Misrepresentation No. 4: Methodists believe a regenerating influence belongs to the rites and ceremonies of the church.

After saying that a Methodist preacher does not dare to refuse the application for membership of anyone, no matter whether penitent or not, he adds: "And besides, he would be false before God if he believes what he preaches, that those things are a means of grace." Similar statements are made elsewhere. If he does not mean to say that a regenerating influence is believed by us to be inherent in the rites and ceremonies of the church, his language is entirely without meaning.

Now, can nothing be "a means of grace" without its possessing this power? It is a lost cause, made desperate, that has to resort to such hyper-criticism. Is not prayer a means of grace? Is not the same thing true of reading the Bible, going to church, hearing sermons, etc.? Who regards these things as inherently regenerating in their effects? Moreover, if this expression, when used by Methodists, means what Bro. H. says it does, then what does it mean when used by Baptists? Rev. J. T. Christian's book, "Close Communion," contains the same nonsense; and yet, in a quotation from Dr. Brosdus (page 191), the most eminent Baptist preacher in the South, the Lord's Supper is called a "means of grace," without any apparent thought of teaching this unscriptural doctrine. Before basing a charge against Methodists on so flimsy a foundation, it would be well to eliminate such language from all the books of Baptist authors. Methodists use the expression, "means of grace," to mean just about what it means when used by Baptists themselves—i. e., not as having a magical influence, but as simply helpful in Christian life.

Misrepresentation No. 5: Methodists believe that man has a right to set aside the church of Christ, and to found another in its place.

In speaking of the church, he says: "But if man is the author, as the Methodists claim, then we must take our choice between man's church and God's church." Of course, he means that the Baptist Church is God's church, and the Methodist Church is man's church. The good sister whom he was endeavoring to enlighten became completely befogged, and she said, "I confess to you I am confused." No doubt, she had heard the Methodist Church spoken of by Methodists themselves as founded by John Wesley, and not knowing that the word "church" has more meanings than one, she was not able to see through the thin reasoning of her solicitous pastor, and so was confused. For the sake of others, equally ignorant, it may be well to turn on a little light. In the Standard Dictionary nine meanings are given to the word "church." Among these definitions are the following: "1. A body of Christians with a distinct history, creed, ecclesiastical government, and forms of worship; a denomination; as the Baptist Church." "2. The whole body of Christian believers. Called sometimes the church universal or church catholic."

With the meaning as given in the first definition Methodists believe that man has authority to found a church, and so do all other enlightened Protestant Christians. It is in this sense we use the term when we say John Wesley founded the Methodist Church, or Roger Williams the Baptist Church. But with the meaning as given in the second definition we do not believe in the authority of man to found the church, and no intelligent Methodist has ever been guilty of the folly of saying that we do. When we speak of any church as founded by man, we mean "a denomination;" but when we speak of the church universal, or church catholic, we mean the church in its generic sense, and its authorship is always ascribed to God. In fact, our faith in the unity and imperishability of the church in this sense is, perhaps, stronger than that of Baptists themselves. We believe that "the church in the wilderness"—and that was in existence when Christ came—was perpetuated, and exists to-day, and will exist to the end of time. Denominations may rise and fall, but against the church universal the gates of hell can not prevail.

I charge Bro. H. with misrepresenting us, because he makes no distinction in these meanings of the word "church," and always uses it in the sense of the second definition, as given above. In Baptist thinking and speaking these distinctions are ignored. The Baptist denomination is the church universal, just as the Roman Catholic Church is the church universal. But in Methodist thinking and speaking these distinctions are preserved, and a little acquaintance with our literature, coupled with an honest use of it, would prevent such unconscionable blunders.

Misrepresentation No. 6: Methodists have two communions. In one they are close communionists, and the minister who invites any besides Methodists to participate in the other, violates most solemn vows.

He says: "The Methodists really have two communions. In one they are broader than the Bible and broader than their own Discipline, while in the other they are closer than any Baptist or Presbyterian ever was. In the first I say they are so 'open' that ministers who officiate violate their own solemn vows, which they took on their bended knees, calling on God to witness."

If Bro. H. ever saw Methodist ministers take solemn vows on bended knees, he has seen what I never saw, and what the Discipline does not authorize. But do we have two communions? Bro. H. answers: "Yes, and of the first one, no one but a Methodist minister can partake. They would not ask even Baptist preachers to join them in that. And not even one of their own licensed preachers." After this load of rare information was dumped into the mind of his obfuscated sister, it is not strange that she began to cry, and to say, "I am more and more astonished." This is "much ado about nothing," and shows how desperate men will become when their incubations will bring forth nothing substantial. Bro. H. must have had to strain his eyes very greatly to see two communions in our administration of the Lord's Supper. Some order is to be observed. In the Methodist Church there are no elders or deacons among the laity, and the ministers administer the ordinance entirely by themselves. They must partake of the bread and wine at some stage of the proceedings, and why not at the beginning? When Bro. H. says no one but a Methodist minister can partake of this first communion (as he calls it), he is simply mistaken. The Discipline, it is true, says the minister who is conducting the service, after partaking himself, shall "proceed to deliver the same to the other ministers in like manner, if any be present." Because the word "ministers" is used, and not "preachers," Bro. H. concludes that Baptist preachers and our own licensed preachers are not allowed to come to this table. The language used will bear this interpretation to one who is not familiar with our usages, but in our ecclesiastical regulations we do not so stress the difference between ordained ministers and licensed preachers as to prohibit the latter from coming to this table. I have seen Presbyterian and Methodist ministers, with licensed preachers, assemble around this table, and no difference was recognized. Baptist preachers would have been welcome if they had seen fit to come.

The Brookhaven District Conference.

The Brookhaven District Conference met at Adams Church, near Summit, Miss., Thursday morning, July 26; Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., being in the chair. Rev. M. L. Burton was elected secretary, with Rev. W. T. Griffin as assistant. The first day was devoted to hearing reports from the Sunday-schools of the various charges. At intervals during the morning session papers were read bearing upon particular phases of the Sunday-school work. Rev. R. W. Bailey, of Hazlehurst, discussed in a forceful, masterly way, "The Relation of the Church to the Sunday-school." Nobody was sorry that he had forgotten to bring his manuscript. Other excellent papers were: "The Sunday-school as Related to Missions," by Rev. M. H. Moore; "Qualifications of the Sunday-school Superintendent," by Rev. W. G. Backus; "Parental Responsibility for the Success of the Sunday-school," by Rev. Ira B. Robertson. These papers evoked some helpful discussions. The importance of building up the Sunday-school and of organizing schools in out-of-the-way places was strongly emphasized.

Thursday afternoon, Rev. M. J. Miller, of China Grove circuit, preached an able and edifying sermon which was followed by a consecration service.

The greater part of Friday was taken up with reports from the preachers in charge as to the condition of their several works. Some reported a number of accessions and a revival of interest in vital religion; others reported an apathetic condition of affairs which it seems impossible to shake off. Most of the brethren reported the Conference collections behind. Our presiding elder, however, called attention to the fact that those who had tried to raise these collections had succeeded fairly well. The impression that the times are hard, he thinks, has kept a good many from making any effort in this direction.
